THE

542

HISTORY

OF

SCOTLAND

DURING THE REIGNS OF

QUEEN MARY and of King JAMES VI.

TILL

His Accession to the Crown of England.

WITH A

REVIEW of the SCOTTISH HISTORY previous to that Period; And an APPENDIX containing ORIGINAL PAPERS.

By WILLIAM ROBERTSON, D. D.

PRINCIPAL OF THE UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH, AND, HISTORIOGRAPHER TO HIS MAJESTY FOR SCOTLAND.

A NEW EDITION.

WITH EMENDATIONS AND ADDITIONS.

VOL. III.

BASIL:

Printed and fold BY J. J. TOURNEISEN-MDCCXCI.

S

On rived with nity of great Bisho none Mr.

great admi the o

and conci

vern Vern

T R

SCOTLAND.

BOOK VIII.

ON the first of May the King and Queen arnived at Leith, and were received by their subjects with every possible expression of joy. The solemnity of the Queen's coronation was conducted with great magnificence; but so low had the order of Bishops fallen in the opinion of the public, that none of them were present on that occasion, and Mr. Robert Bruce, a Presbyterian Minister of great reputation, fet the Crown on her head, administered the facred unction, and performed the other customary ceremonies.

The zeal and fuccess with which many of the clergy had contributed towards preferving peace and order in the kingdom, during his absence, reconciled James, in a great degree, to their perlons, and even to the Presbyterian form of government. In presence of an assembly, which August 4. Vol. III.

BOOK VIII.

1590. The King and Queen

barb

were other

licen

confi

the K

with impu

fed hi

whole neithe

were crime .

decent

feized

tained

the Ki

the pe

gancies

perfons

fufferer

in ord

and of l

which

detaine

evidenc

Histurb

to the

Having and imp

Bu craft,

BOOK VIII.

1590.

met this year, he made high encomiums on the discipline as well as the doctrine of the church, promifed to adhere inviolably to both, and permitted the affembly to frame fuch acts as gradually abolished all the remains of episcopal jurisdiction, and paved the way for a full and legal establishment of the Presbyterian model'.

1591.

An event happened foon after, which afforded the Clergy no small triumph. Archbishop Adamson. their ancient opponent, having fallen under the King's displeasure, having been deprived of the revenues of his fee in consequence of the act of annexation, and being oppressed with age, with poverty, and diseases, made the meanest submission to the Clergy, and delivered to the affembly a formal recantation of all his opinions concerning Church - government, which had been matter of offence to the Presbyterians. Such a confession, from the most learned person of the Episcopal order, was confidered as a testimony which the force of truth had extorted from an adversary.

Diforders in the king. dom.

Meanwhile, the King's excessive clemency towards offenders multiplied crimes of all kinds, and encouraged fuch acts of violence, as brought his government under contempt, and proved fatal to many of his subjects. The history of several years, about this time, is filled with accounts of the deadly quarrels between the great families, and of murders and affaffinations perpetrated in the most audacious manner, and with circumstances of the utmost ² Spotsw. 385. Cald. iv. 214. 1 Cald. iv. 204.

10

1,

rly

1, nt

he

n,

he

he

of

th

on

a

ng

of

n,

pal

he

ds

ur-

rn-

ny

out

lly

ers

ous

oft

14.

barbarity. All the defects in the feudal aristocracy were now felt more sensibly, perhaps, than at any other period in the history of Scotland, and universal licence and anarchy prevailed to a degree scarce consistent with the preservation of society. While the King, too gentle to punish, or too seeble to act with vigor, suffered all these enormities to pass with impunity.

But though James connived at real crimes, witchcraft, which is commonly an imaginary one, engroffed his attention, and those suspected of it felt the whole weight of his authority. Many persons, neither extremely old nor wretchedly poor, which were usually held to be certain indications of this crime, but masters of families, and matrons of a decent rank, and in the middle age of life, were feized and tortured. Though their confessions contained the most absurd and incredible circumstances, the King's prejudices, those of the clergy and of the people, conspired in believing their extravagancies, without hesitation, and in punishing their persons without mercy. Some of these unhappy fufferers accused Bothwell of having consulted them in order to know the time of the King's death. and of having employed their art, to raise the storms which had endangered the Queen's life, and had detained James fo long in Denmark. Upon this evidence, that nobleman was committed to prison.

Histurbulent and haughty spirit could neither submit to the restraint, nor brook such an indignity.

Having gained his keepers, he made his escape,

BOOK VIII.

An attempt of Bothwell's against the King.

THE HISTORY

BOOK enemy, the Chancellor, he assembled his followers, viii. under pretence of driving him from the King's councils. Being favored by some of the King's attendants, he was admitted by a secret passage, under cloud of night, into the court of the palace of Holy-rood house. He advanced directly towards the royal apartment, but happily, before he entered, the alarm was taken, and the doors shut. While he attempted was taken, and the doors shut. While he attempted to burst open some of them, and to set fire to others, the citizens of Edinburgh had time to run to their arms, and he escaped with the utmost difficulty; owing his safety to the darkness of the night, and the precipitancy with which he fled .

1592.

Feb. 8.

He retired towards the north, and the King having unadvifedly given a commission to the Earl of Huntly, to pursue him and his followers, with fire and fword, he, under color of executing that commission, gratified his private revenge, and furrounded the house of the Earl of Murray. burnt it to the ground, and flew Murray himself. The murder of a young nobleman of fuch promising virtues, and the heir of the Regent Murray, the darling of the people ! excited universal indignation. The citizens of Edinburgh role in a tumultuous manner; and though they were reftrained, by the care of the magistrates, from any act of violence, they threw aside all respect for the King and his ministers, and openly insulted and threatened both. While this mutinous spirit continued, James thought it prudent to withdraw from at Gl justic crime the C federa of the marriwhich him e Af with r Clergy made acts o and eig loft m the pa them meafur of the faction the mu cellor courtie odious false st lurked

* Spot

ported

Melv. 388. Spotfw. 386.

from the city, and fixed his residence for some time BOOK at Glasgow. There Huntly surrendered himself to juffice; and, notwithstanding the atrociousness of his crime, and the clamors of the people, the power of the Chancellor, with whom he was now closely confederated, and the King's regard for the memory of the Duke of Lenox, whose daughter he had married, not only protected him from the sentence which fuch an odious action merited, but exempted him even from the formality of a public trial.

A step of much importance was taken, soon after, with regard to the government of the church. The Clergy had long complained of the encroachments made upon their privileges and jutifdiction by the acts of the parliament one thousand five hundred and eighty-four, and though these laws had now lost much of their force, they resolved to petition the parliament, which was approaching, to repeal them in form. The juncture for pushing such a measure was well chosen. The King had lost much of the public favor by his lenity towards the Popish faction, and still more by his remissiness in pursuing the murderers of the Earl of Murray. The Chancellor had not only a powerful party of the courtiers combined against him, but was become odious to the people, who imputed to him every talle step in the King's conduct. Bothwell still lurked in the kingdom, and being fecretly fupported by all the enemies of Maitland's adminit-

VIII 1592.

Presbyterian Church eftablished

15,

n-

ts,

of

dral

m

ed

rs,

eir

y;

he

ng

he

rs,

ut-

ge,

y, elf.

ro-

ur-

fal

in

re-

ny

the

nd

onaw

Spotfw. 3.87.

B O O K VIII.

tration, was ready, every moment, to renew his audacious enterprises. James, for all these reasons, was extremely willing to indulge the Clergy in their request, and not only confented to a law, whereby the acts of one thousand five hundred and eighty-four were rescinded or explained, but he carried his complaifance still further, and permitted the Parliament to establish the Presbyterian government, its General Affemblies; Provincial fynods, Presby. teries, and Kirk-fessions, with all the different branches of their discipline and jurisdiction, in the most ample manner. All the zeal and authority of the Clergy, even under the administration of Regents, from whom they might have expected the most partial favor, could not obtain the fanction of law, in confirmation of their mode of Ecclesiastical government. No Prince was ever less disposed than James to approve a fystem, whose republican genius inspired a passion for liberty, so repugnant to his exalted notions of royal prerogative. Nor could any aversion be more inveterate than his, to the austere and uncomplying character of the Presbyterian Clergy in that age; who, more eminent for zeal than for policy, often contradicted his opinions, and censured his conduct, with a freedom equally offensive to his dogmatism as a Theologian, and to his pride as a King. His fituation, however, obliged him frequently to conceal, or to difsemble his sentiments; and as he often disgusted his subjects, by indulging the Popish faction more than they approved, he endeavoured to atone for this by concessions to the Presbyterian Clergy, mor choi

feize fome who avov vigil lutio

Sc

tion more Lord ready were fever Hunt cauti cover tortui emple ciatio fubsci by C to of that I place

of his

of Cl

his ons.

/ in aw,

and

car-

the

ent,

fby-

rannost

the

nts,

flor

w,

go-

han

ilus

his

ny

aute-

for pi-

om

an,

w-lif-

ed

ore for

у,

more liberal than he himself would otherwise have BOOK chosen to grant '.

VIII. 1592.

In this Parliament, Bothwell and all his adherents were attainted. But he soon made a new attempt to feize the King at Falkland; and James, betrayed by fome of his courtiers, and feebly defended by others, who wished well to Bothwell, as the Chancellor's avowed enemy, owed his fafety to the fidelity and vigilance of Sir Robert Melvil, and to the irrefolution of Bothwell's affociates .

Scarcely was this danger over, when the nation was alarmed with the discovery of a new and more formidable confpiracy. George Ker, the Lord Newbattle's brother, being feized as he was ready to fet fail for Spain, many suspicious papers were found in his custody, and among these, several blanks signed by the Earls of Angus, Huntly, and Errol. By this extraordinary precaution they hoped to escape any danger of discovery. But Ker's refolution shrinking when torture was threatened, he confessed that he was employed by these noblemen, to carry on a negociation with the King of Spain; that the blanks subscribed with their names were to be filled up by Crichton and Tyrie; that they were instructed to offer the faithful fervice of the three Earls to that Monarch; and to solicit him to land a body of his troops, either in Galloway, or at the mouth of Clyde, with which they undertook, in the first place, to establish the Roman Catholic Religion

A new conspiracy of the Popish

^{&#}x27; Cald. iv. 248. 252. Spotfw. 388 Melv. 402. B 4

gui

Ear

to nou

be p

at t

wit

tire

calt

vaff

fub!

ty t

Pro

quil

Ear

turn

roug

cour

difco

no 1

Scot

milli

ferv:

of hi

with

perfo

auda

force

time

H

BOOK VIII. in Scotland, and then to invade England with the whole forces of the kingdom. David Graham of Fintry, and Barclay of Ladyland, whom he accused of being privy to the conspiracy, were taken into custody, and confirmed all the circumstances of his consession?

1593. Zeal of the people,

The nation having been kept for some time in continual terror and agitation by fo many successive conspiracies, the discovery of this new danger completed the panic. All ranks of men, as if the enemy had already been at their gates, thought themselves called upon to stand forth in defence of their country. The Ministers of Edinburgh, without waiting for any warrant from the King, who happened at that time to be absent from the capital, and without having received any legal commission, assembled a considerable number of Peers and Barons, in order to provide an instant remedy against the impending danger. They feized the Earl of Angus, and committed him to the castle; they examined Ker; and prepared a remonstrance to be laid before the King, concerning the state of the nation; and the necessity of profecuting the confpirators with becoming vigor. James, though jealous of every encroachment on his prerogative, and offended with subjects, who, instead of petitioning, seemed to prefcribe to him, found it necessary, during the violence of the ferment, not only to adopt their plan, but even to declare that no confideration should ever induce him to pardon those who had been and proceedings of the King against them.

Rymer, xvi. 190.

he

of

cd

to

of

in

ve

m-

ny

/es

ry.

ny

to

re-

ole

an

ey

to 3 rn-

of

VI-

ch-

b.

re-

10-

an,

old

en

guilty of so odious a treason. He summoned the Earls of Huntly and Errol to surrender themselves to justice. Graham of Fintry, whom his peers pronounced to be guilty of treason, he commanded to be publicly beheaded; and marching into the North at the head of an army, the two Earls, together with Angus, who had escaped out of prison, retired to the mountains. He placed garrisons in the castles which belonged to them; compelled their vassals, and the Barons in the adjacent counties, to subscribe a bond containing professions of their loyal-ty towards him, and of their firm adherence to the Protestant faith, and, the better to secure the tranquillity of that part of the kingdom, constituted the Earls of Athol and Marischal his Lieutenants there.

Having finished this expedition, James returned to Edinburgh, where he found Lord Borrough, an extraordinary ambassador from the court of England. Elizabeth, alarmed at the discovery of a conspiracy which she considered as no less formidable to her own kingdom than to Scotland, reproached James with his former remisses, and urged him, as he regarded the preservation of the Protestant religion, or the dignity of his own Crown, to punish this repeated treason with rigor; and if he could not apprehend the persons, at least to consistent the estates, of such audacious rebels. She weakened however the sorce of these requests, by interceding at the same time in behalf of Bothwell, whom, according to

B O O K VIII. 1593. Jan. 8.

March 18.
Elizabeth
folicits him to treat them with rigor.

Spotsw. 301. Cald. iv. 291.

or

en

ha

D

an

WI

tra

10

Qu

and

cou

his

exp

con

furi

Sco

troc

mer

defe

fista

and

on

Sov

knee

in a days

celsf

whe

fion ficati

time

BOOK VIII.

her usual policy in nourishing a factious spirit among the Scottish nobles, she had taken under her protection. James absolutely refused to listen to any intercession in favor of one, who had so often, and with fo much outrage, infulted both his government and his person. With regard to the Popish conspirators, he declared his resolution to prosecute them with vigor; but that he might be the better able to do fo, he demanded a fmall fum of money from Elizabeth, which she, distrustful perhaps of the manner in which he might apply it, showed no inclination to grant. The zeal, however, and importunity of his own subjects obliged him to call a Parliament, in order to pass an act of attainder against the three Earls. But before it met, Ker made his escape out of prison, and, on pretence that legal evidence of their guilt could not be produced, nothing was concluded against them. The King himself was univerfally suspected of having contrived this artifice, on purpose to elude the requests of the Queen of England, and to disappoint the wishes of his own people; and therefore, in order to footh the Clergy, who exclaimed loudly against his conduct, he gave way to the passing of an act, which ordained those who obstinately contemned the censures of the Church to be declared out-laws'.

Bothwell furprifes the King.

While the terror excited by the Popish confpiracy possessed the nation, the court had been divided by two rival factions, which contended for the chief direction of affairs. At the head of Cald. iv. 343. Spotfw. 393. Parl. 13 Jac. VI. c. 154.

0-

y

b

nt

n-

m

to

m

10

r-

a-

he

ne

ce

as

as

115

ne

of

th

n-

ch

ne

n-

en

ed

of 4.

one, was the Chancellor, in whom the King repofed entire confidence. For that very reason, perhaps, he had fallen early under the Queen's displeasure. The Duke of Lenox, the Earl of Athol, Lord Ochiltree, and all the name of Stewart espoused her quarrel, and widened the breach. James, fond no less of domestic tranquillity, than of public peace, advised his favorite to retire, for some time, in hopes that the Queen's resentment would subside. But as he flood in need, in the present juncture, of the affiftance of an able Minister, he had recalled him to court. In order to prevent him from recovering his former power, the Stewarts had recourse to an expedient no less illegal than desperate. Having combined with Bothwell, who was of the fame furname, they brought him back fecretly into Scotland; and feizing the gates of the palace, introduced him into the royal apartment with a numerous train of armed followers. James, though deferted by all his courtiers, and incapable of refistance, discovered more indignation than fear. and reproaching them for their treachery, called on the Earl to finish his treasons, by piercing his Sovereign to the heart. But Bothwell fell on his knees, and implored pardon. The King was not in a condition to refuse his demands. A few days after he figned a capitulation with this fuccessful traitor, to whom he was really a prisoner, whereby he bound himself to grant him a remiffion for all past offences, and to procure the ratification of it in Parliament; and in the mean time to dismiss the Chancellor, the master of Gla-

BOOK VIII. 1593,

July 24.

exc

fpir

opli

fear

the .

in fi

its

happ

mad

conf

and

the b dicti

over

agai

which

Lest

acco

ties

and

incre

he w derei

into a le

them

pose.

train

time Baro

again

A

will. councils and presence. Bothwell, on his part, confented to remove from court, though he lest there as many of his associates as he thought sufficient to prevent the return of the adverse faction.

He recovers his liberty. Sept. 7.

But it was now no easy matter to keep the King under the same kind of bondage, to which he had beerroften subject during his minority. He discovered so much impatience to shake off his fetters, that those who had imposed, durst not continue, the restraint. They permitted him to call a Convention of the nobles at Stirling, and to repair thither himself. All Bothwell's enemies, and all who were defirous of gaining the King's favor by appearing to be fo, obeyed the fummons. They pronounced the infult offered to the King's person and authority to be high treason, and declared him absolved from any obligation to observe conditions extorted by force, and which violated fo effentially his royal prerogative. James, however, still proffered him a pardon, provided he would fue for it as an act of mercy, and promife to retire out of the kingdom. These conditions Bothwell rejected with disdain, and betaking himself once more to arms, attempted to surprise the King; but finding him on his guard, fled to the borders ".

Suspected of favoring the Popish Lords.

The King's ardor against Bothwell, compared with his slow and evasive proceedings against the Popish Lords, occasioned a general disgust among his subjects; and was imputed either to an Cald. iv. 326. Spotlw. 395.

1-

C

0

d

t.

e

f

t

e

excessive attachment to the persons of those confpirators, or to a fecret partiality towards their opinions; both which gave rife to no unreasonable fears. The Clergy, as the immediate guardians of the Protestant Religion, thought themselves bound. in such a juncture, to take extraordinary steps for its preservation. The provincial fynod of Fife happening to meet at that time, a motion was made to excommunicate all concerned in the late conspiracy, as obstinate and irreclaimable Papists: and though none of the conspirators resided within the bounds of the fynod, or were subject to its jurisdiction, fuch was the zeal of the members, that, overlooking this irregularity, they pronounced against them the sentence of excommunication, to which the act of last parliament added new terrors. Lest this should be imputed to a few men, and accounted the act of a small part of the church, deputies were appointed to attend the adjacent fynods, and to defire their approbation and concurrence.

An event happened; a few weeks after, which increased the people's suspicions of the King. As he was marching on an expedition against the borderers, the three Popish Earls coming suddenly into his presence, offered to submit themselves to a legal trial; and James, without committing them to custody, appointed a day for that purpose. They prepared to appear with a formidable train of their friends and vassals. But, in the mean time, the Clergy, together with many Peers and Barons, assembling at Edinburgh, remonstrated against the King's extreme indulgence with great

BOOK VIII. 1593. Sept. 25.

His lenity towards them. Od. 17.

fign

exp

incu

Dev

all

with

Earl

cont

the

noul

artic

quir

felve

amb

of th

to Ja

to p

tion

repre

pole

requi

necel

King

Zouc

dor,

the S

meafi

with

B

BOOK VIII. 1593.

boldness, and demanded of him, according to the regular course of justice, to commit to sure custody persons charged with the highest acts of treason, who could not be brought to a legal trial, until they were absolved from the censures of the Church; and to call a Convention of estates, to deliberate concerning the method of proceeding against them, At the same time they offered to accompany him in arms to the place of trial, lest such audacious and powerful criminals should overawe justice, and dictate to the judges to whom they pretended to fubmit. James, though extremely offended both with the irregularity of their proceedings, and the prefumption of their demands, found it expedient to put off the day of trial, and to call a Convention of estates, in order to quiet the fears and jealousies of the people. By being humored in this point, their fuspicions began gradually to abate, and the Chancellor managed the Convention fo artfully, that he himself, together with a few other members, was impowered to pronounce a final fentence upon the conspirators. After much deliberation, they ordained, that the three Earls, and their affociates, should be exempted from all further inquiry or profecution, on account of their correspondence with Spain; that, before the first day of February, they should either fubmit to the Church, and publicly renounce the errors of Popery, or remove out of the kingdom; that, before the first of January, they should declare which of these alternatives they would embrace; that they should find surety for their peaceable demeanour for the future; and that if they failed to

Nov. 26.

fignify their choice in due time, they should lose the benefit of this act of abolition, and remain exposed to all the pains of law ".

he

dy

n, ey

h; ate

m.

ım

us

nd

to

th

he

nt

on

of

eir

he

at ras he

d,

be on t, er he

it.

ch

at e-

to

By this lenity towards the conspirators, James incurred much reproach, and gained no advantage. Devoted to the Popish superstition, submissive to all the dictates of their priests, and buoyed up with hopes and promifes of foreign aid, the three Earls refused to accept of the conditions, and continued their treasonable correspondence with the court of Spain. A Convention of estates pronounced them to have forfeited the benefit of the articles which were offered; and the King required them, by proclamation, to furrender themselves to justice. The presence of the English ambassador contributed, perhaps, to the vigor of these proceedings. Elizabeth, ever attentive to James's motions, and imputing his reluctance to punish the Popish Lords to a fecret approbation of their defigns, had fent Lord Zouche to represent, once more, the danger to which he expoled himself, by this false moderation; and to require him to exercise that rigor, which their crimes, as well as the posture of affairs, rendered necessary. Though the steps now taken by the King silenced all complaints on that head, yet Zouche, forgetful of his character as an ambattador, entered into private negociations with fuch of the Scottish nobles as disapproved of the King's measures, and held almost an open correspondence with Bothwell, who, according to the usual artiB O O K

1594.

Jan. 13

¹¹ Cald. iv. 330. Spotsw. 397.

B O O K VIII. 1594. fice of malecontents, pretended much folicitude for reforming the diforders of the commonwealth; and covered his own ambition with the specious veil of zeal against those Counsellors who restrained the King from pursuing the avowed enemies of the Protestant faith. Zouche encouraged him, in the name of his Mistress, to take arms against his Sovereign.

A new attempt of Bothwell's.

Meanwhile, the King and the Clergy were filled with mutual distrust of each other. They were jealous, perhaps, to excess, that James's affections leaned too much towards the Popish faction; he fuspected them, without good reason, of prompting Bothwell to rebellion, and even of supplying him with money for that purpose. Little instigation. indeed, was wanting to rouse such a turbulent spirit as Bothwell's, to any daring enterprise. He appeared fuddenly within a mile of Edinburgh, at the head of four hundred horse. The pretences, by which he endeavoured to justify this insurrection, were extremely popular; zeal for religion, enmity to Popery, concern for the King's honor, and for the liberties of the nation. James was totally unprovided for his own defence; he had no infantry, and was accompanied only with a few horsemen of Lord Home's train. In this extremity, he implored the aid of the citizens of Edinburgh, and, in order to encourage them to act with zeal, he promifed to proceed against the Popish Lords with the utmost rigor of law. Animated by their Ministers, the citizens ran cheerfully to their arms, and advanced, with the King at their head, against Bothwell;

Both putti charge retire King, difcor could the fire places comp.

him to No dange The I ciation fupply this n jecture gotry , the m The a alarm; terness fentenc fynod obstina forbear ing to able ful

> " Spo Vol

with un

e

1;

us

e-

e_

d

ns

d

re

ns

ne

g

m

1, rit

d

of

ne

re

to ne

ed

as

rd

id

n-

to

ft

ne dıst

Bothwell; but he, notwithstanding his success in BOOK putting to flight Lord Home, who had rashly charged him with a far inferior number of cavalry, retired to Dalkeith without daring to attack the King. His followers abandoned him foon after, and, discouraged by so many successive disappointments, could never afterwards be brought to venture into the field. He betook himself to his usual lurkingplaces in the North of England; but Elizabeth, in compliance with the King's remonstrances, obliged him to quit that retreat

No fooner was the king delivered from one danger, than he was called to attend to another. The Popish Lords, in consequence of their negociations with Spain, received, in the spring, a supply of money from Philip. What bold designs this might inspire, it was no easy matter to conjecture. From men under the dominion of bigotry, and whom indulgence could not reclaim, the most desperate actions were to be dreaded. The affembly of the Church immediately took the alarm; remonstrated against them with more bitternels than ever; and unanimously ratified the fentence of excommunication pronounced by the fynod of Fife. James himself, provoked by their oblinacy and ingratitude, and afraid that his long forbearance would not only be generally displeafing to his own subjects, but give rise to unfavorable suspicions among the English, exerted himself with unufual vigor. He called a Parliament; laid VIII. 1594-

Fresh dangers from the Popish Lords. April 3.

[&]quot; Spotsw. 403. Cald. iv. 359. VOL. III.

BOOK VIII.

I594.

before it all the circumstances and aggravations of the conspiracy; and though there were but sew members present, and several of these connected with the conspirators by blood or friendship, he prevailed on them, by his influence and importunity, to pronounce the most rigorous sentence which the law can instict. They were declared to be guilty of high treason, and their estates and honors forseited. At the same time, statutes, more severe than ever, were enacted against the professors of the Popish religion.

Battle of Glenlivat.

How to put this fentence in execution, was a matter of great difficulty. Three powerful Barons. cantoned in a part of the country of difficult access. furrounded with numerous vaffals, and supported by aid from a foreign Prince, were more than an overmatch for a Scottish Monarch. No entreaty could prevail on Elizabeth to advance the money, necesfary for defraying the expenses of an expedition against them. To attack them in person, with his own forces alone, might have exposed James both to difgrace and to danger. He had recourse to the only expedient which remained in fuch a fituation, for aiding the impotence of Sovereign authority; he delegated his authority to the Earl of Argyll and Lord Forbes, the leaders of two clans at enmity with the conspirators; and gave them a commission to invade their lands, and to feize the castles which belonged to them. Bothwell, notwithstanding all his high pretentions of zeal for the Protestant religion, having now entered into a close confederacy with them, the danger became every day more urging.

cl arr ger bac

of all riva Hig the foor man

grac

0 thou mon marc Irvin

other perfo Jame their

Leno with of

ew

ted

he

ity,

ich

be

ors

rere

of

as a

ons,

ess.

rted

an

bluc

ecef-

tion

his

ooth

the

ion,

; he

and mity

ffion hich

g all

gion,

with ging.

Argyll, solicited by the King, and roused by the Clergy, took the field at the head of feven thousand men. Huntly and Errol met him at Glenlivat, with an army far inferior in number, but composed chiefly of gentlemen of the low countries, mounted on horseback, and who brought along with them a train of field pieces. They encountered each other with all the fury which hereditary enmity and ancient rivalship add to undisciplined courage. But the Highlanders, disconcerted by the first discharge of the cannon, to which they were little accustomed, and unable to refift the impression of cavalry, were foon put to flight; and Argyll, a gallant young man of eighteen, was carried by his friends out of the field, weeping with indignation at their difgrace, and calling on them to stand, and to vindicate the honor of their name ".

On the first intelligence of this defeat, James, though obliged to pawn his jewels in order to raise money ", assembled a small body of troops, and marched towards the North. He was joined by the Irvines, Keiths, Leslys, Forbeses, and other clans at enmity with Huntly and Errol, who having lost several of their principal followers at Glenlivat, and others resusing to bear arms against the King in person, were obliged to retire to the mountains. James wasted their lands; put garrisons in some of their castles; burnt others; and lest the Duke of Lenox as his Lieutenant in that part of the kingdom, with a body of men sufficient to restrain them from

VIII.

1594

Oct. 3.

1595.

"Cald. iv. 408.

Birch , Mem. i. 186.

ab

CO

w

on

the

Jef

fro

arg

aga

the

fera

a v able

Vin

gra

Pre

the

ceff

prej

Way

as th

pead

ditio

cour

com defe

oblig

and]

he le

King

BOOK VIII.

1595.

gathering to any head there, or from infelting the low country. Reduced at last to extreme distress by the rigor of the season, and the desertion of their followers, they obtained the King's permission to go beyond seas, and gave security that they should neither return without his licence, nor engage in any new intrigues against the Protestant religion, or the peace of the kingdom 15.

Popish Lordsdriven out of the kingdom.

The Roman Catholics incenfed against James.

By their exile, tranquillity was re-established in the North of Scotland; and the firmness and vigor which James had displayed in his last proceedings against them, regained him, in a great degree, the confidence of his Protestant subjects. But he sunk, in the same proportion, and for the same reason, in the esteem of the Roman Catholics. They had afferted his mother's right to the Crown of England with fo much warmth, that they could not, with any decency, reject his; and the indulgence, with which he affected to treat the profesfors of that religion, inspired them with fuch hopes, that they viewed his accession to the throne as no undefirable event. But the rigor with which the King had lately purfued the conspirators, and the fevere statutes against Popery to which he had given his confent, convinced them that these hopes were visionary; and they began to look about in quest of some new successor, whose rights they might oppose to his. The Papifts who refided in England turned their eyes towards the Earl of Essex, whose generous mind, though firmly established in the Protestant faith, ¹⁵ Spotfw, 404. Cald. 373, &c.

he

by ol-

go

ıld

ny he

he

ch

nst

ice

me

em

his ich

ect

to

em

to

ith

ira-

to

em

gan

or,

Pa-

yes

nd,

th,

abhorred the severities inflicted in that age on account of religious opinions. Those of the same sect, who were in exile, formed a bolder scheme, and one more fuitable to their fituation. They advanced the claim of the infanta of Spain; and Parsons the Jesuit published a book, in which, by false quotations from history, by fabulous genealogies, and abfurd arguments, intermingled with bitter invectives against the King of Scots, he endeavoured to prove the Infanta's title to the English Crown to be preferable to his. Philip, though involved already in a war both with France and England, and scarce able to defend the remains of the Burgundian provinces against the Dutch commonwealth, eagerly grasped at this airy project. The dread of a Spanish Pretender to the Crown, and the opposition which the Papists began to form against the King's succession, contributed not a little to remove the prejudices of the Protestants, and to prepare the way for that event.

Bothwell, whose name has been so often mentioned as the disturber of the King's tranquillity and of the peace of the kingdom, was now in a wretched condition. Abandoned by the Queen of England, on account of his consederacy with the Popish Lords; excommunicated by the Church for the same reason; and deserted, in his distress, by his own followers; he was obliged to fly for safety to France, and thence to Spain and Italy, where, after renouncing the Protestant saith, heled many years an obscure and indigent life, remarkable only for a low and infamous debauchery. The King, though extremely ready to sacrifice the strong-

BOOK VIII.

Bothwell forced to fly into Spain.

POOK VIII.

1595.

est refentment to the flightest acknowledgments; could never be softened by his submission, nor be induced to listen to any intercession in his behalf."

pe

Va

fiv

WE

of

arr

dić

pul

gor

fely

Kin

hor

repi

mu

prei

fom

fulp

tain

gen

it e intro

by

wer

of th

was

Eng

inva

This year the King lost Chancellor Maitland, an able Minister, on whom he had long devolved the whole weight of public affairs. As James loved him while alive, he wrote, in honor of his memory, a copy of verses, which, when compared with the compositions of that age, are far from being inelegant ".

A change in the adminiftration.

Soon after his death, a considerable change was made in the administration. At that time, the annual charges of government far exceeded the King's revenues. The Queen was fond of expensive amusements. James himfelf was a stranger to economy. It became necessary, for all these reasons, to levy the public revenues with greater order and rigor, and to husband them with more care. This important trust was committed to eight gentlemen of the law ", who, from their number, were called Octavians. The powers vested in them were ample, and almost unlimited. The King bound himself neither to add to their number, nor to supply any vacancy that might happen, without their confent: And knowing the facility of his own temper, agreed that no alienation of his revenue, no grant of a ²⁶ Winw. Mem. i. Spotsw. 410. 17 Id. 411.

Commendator of Blantyre Lord Privy Seal, David Carnegy, John Lindfay, James Elphingston, Thomas Hamilton, John Skene Clerk Register, and Peter Young Elemosynar.

ats,

be

f 10

ind. ved

mes his

omfar

was

nual

re-

use-

my.

evy

gor,

ort-

the

alled

ple,

nfelf

any

fent:

reed

of a

ewart

negy,

John

pension, or order on the treasury, should be held valid, unless it were ratified by the subscription of five of the commissioners; all their acts and decisions were declared to be of equal force with the fentence ofjudges in civil courts; and in consequence of them, and without any other warrant, any person might be arrested, or their goods seized. Such extensive jurisdiction, together with the absolute disposal of the public money, drew the whole executive part of the government into their hands. United among themselves, they gradually undermined the rest of the King's Ministers, and seized on every lucrative or honorable office. The ancient servants of the Crown repined at being obliged to quit their stations to new men. The favorites and young courtiers mur- . 1596 mured at feeing the King's liberality stinted by their prescriptions. And the Clergy exclaimed against some of them as known apostates to Popery, and suspected others of secretly favoring it. They retained their power, however, notwithstanding this general combination against them; and they owed it entirely to the order and economy which they introduced into the administration of the finances, by which the necessary expenses of government were more easily defrayed than in any other period of the King's reign ".

The rumor of vast preparations which Philip was faid to be carrying on at this time, filled both England and Scotland with the dread of a new invalion. James took proper measures for the

BOOK VIII. 1595.

Violence of the nation against the Popish Lords.

[.] Spotfw. 413. 435.

2

n

25 m

m

th

fo

pr

pu

pai

the

ftil

the

COL

Kin

inte

and

feci

a p resi

fect

Jam

on

adv

A

mer Ger

BOOK

VIII.

defence of his kingdom. But these did not satisfy the zeal of the Clergy, whose suspicions of the King's sincerity began to revive; and as he had permitted the wives of the banished Peers to levy the rents of their estates, and to live in their houses, they charged him with rendering the act of forseiture ineffectual by supporting the avowed enemies of the Protestant faith. The assembly of the Church took under consideration the state of the Kingdom, and having appointed a day of public fasting, they solemnly renewed the Covenant, by which the nation was bound to adhere to the Protestant faith, and to defend it against all aggressors. A committee.

confisting of the most eminent Clergymen, and of many Barons and gentlemen of distinction, waited on the King, and laid before him a plan for the fecuri-

They urged him to appropriate the estates of the banished Lords as a fund for the maintenance of foldiers; to take the strictest precautions for preventing the return of such turbulent subjects into of being their adherents with the utmost rigor.

The King's remiffness with regard

Nothing could be more repugnant to the King's schemes, or more disagreeable to his inclination, than these propositions. Averse, through his whole life, to any course where he expected opposition or danger; and fond of attaining his ends with the character of moderation, and by the arts of policy, he observed with concern the prejudices against him which were growing among the Roman Catholics, and resolved to make some

the

ıg's

ted

ents

hey

ure

of

rch

om,

hey

the

th,

tee,

d of

ted

uri.

on.

baof

ore-

nto ted

the

inigh

ted

his

by

the

ong

me

atonement for that part of his conduct which had drawn upon him their indignation. Elizabeth was now well advanced in years; her life had lately been in danger; if any Popish competitor should arise to dispute his right of succession, a faction so powerful as that of the banished Lords might be extremely formidable; and any division among his own subjects might prove fatal at a juncture which would require their united and most vigorous efforts. Instead, therefore, of the additional feverities which the Assembly proposed, James had thoughts of mitigating the punishment which they already suffered. And as they were furrounded, during their residence in foreign parts, by Philip's emissaries; as resentment might dispose them to listen more favorably than ever to their suggestions; as despair might drive them to fill more atrocious actions; he refolved to recal them, under certain conditions, into their native country. Encouraged by these sentiments of the King in their favor, of which they did not want intelligence, and wearied already of the dependent and anxious life of exiles, they ventured to return fecretly into Scotland. Soon after, they presented a petition to the King, begging his permission to relide at their own houses, and offering to give security for their peaceable and dutiful behaviour. James called a Convention of estates to deliberate on a matter of fuch importance, and by their advice he granted the petition.

As foon as they were informed of this, the members of a committee, appointed by the last General Assembly, met at Edinburgh, and with Clergy and

BOOK 1596.

The rash proceedings of the people.

NIII. fuch resolutions as they thought necessary for the fasety of the kingdom. They wrote circular letters to all the Presbyteries in Scotland; they warned them of the approaching danger; they exhorted them to stir up their people to the desence of their just rights; they commanded them to publish, in all their pulpits, the act excommunicating the Popish Lords; and enjoined them to lay all those who were suspected of favoring Popery under the same censure by a fummary sentence, and without observing the usual formalities of trial. As the danger seemed too pressing to wait for the stated meetings of the judicatories of the Church, they made choice of the most eminent Clergymen in different corners of the kingdom, apointed them to reside constantly the kingdom, apointed them to reside constantly at Edinburgh, and to meet every day with the Ministers of that city, under the name of the Standing Council of the Church, and vested in this body the supreme authority, by enjoining it, in imitation of the ancient Roman form, to take care that the Church should receive no detriment.

These proceedings, no less unconstitutional than unprecedented, were manifest encroachments on the royal prerogative, and bold steps towards open rebellion. The King's conduct, however, justified in some degree such excesses. His lenity towards the Papists, so repugnant to the principles of that age; his pardoning the conspirators, notwithstanding repeated promises to the contrary; the respect he paid to Lady Huntly, who was attached to the Romish religion no less than her ch cir pro and wh

hu

th

W

infi the wid diff

pre con for the mal ceiv

for nob

ther show

mar

ok

he

to

m

to

ts;

ts.

nd

of

a

pal

ef-

ca-

he

of

tly

he

he his

in

are nal

nts ds

er,

ity

CIrs,

у;

at-

ner

husband; his committing the care of his daughter, BOOK the Princess Elizabeth, to Lady Levingston, who was infected with the same superstition; the contempt with which he talked, on all occasions, both of the character of Ministers, and of their function; were circumstances which might have filled minds, not prone by nature to jealoufy, with fome suspicions; and might have precipitated into rash councils those who were far removed from intemperate zeal. But, however powerful the motives might be which influenced the Clergy, or however laudable the end they had in view, they conducted their measures with no address, and even with little prudence. James discovered a strong inclination to avoid a rupture with the Church, and, jealous as he was of his prerogative, would willingly have made many concessions for the sake of peace. By his command, some of the Privy Counsellors had an interview with the more moderate among the Clergy, and inquired whether Huntly and his affociates might not, upon making proper acknowledgments, be again received into the bosom of the Church, and be exempted from any further punishment on account of their past apostacy and treasons. They replied, that though the gate of mercy stood always open for those who repented and returned, yet as these noblemen had been guilty of idolatry, a crime deferving death both by the law of God and of man, the civil magistrate could not legally grant them a pardon; and even though the Church thould absolve them, it was his duty to inflict pumiliment upon them. This inflexibility in those

VIII. 1596.

8 0 0 K VIII. 1596. who were reckoned the most compliant of the order, filled the King with indignation, which the imprudence and obstinacy of a private Clergyman heightened into rage.

Mr. David Black, Minister at St. Andrew's, ecc

fall

upo

JUII.

fink

inst

whi

and

to f

at t

pun

whi

conf

guar

their

on t

polle

by th

enjoi

Priv

difpl

pole

or to

ings, dectin kinge

Cribe

than

Clerg

Jan

Seditions? doctrine taught by Black, discoursing in one of his fermons, according to custom, concerning the state of the nation, affirmed that the King had permitted the Popish Lords to return into Scotland, and by that action had discovered the treachery of his own heart; that all Kings were the Devil's children; that Satan had now the guidance of the court; that the Queen of England was an atheist; that the judges were miscreants and bribers; the nobility godless and degenerate; the Privy Counsellors cormorants, and men of no religion; and in his prayer for the Queen he used these words, we must pray for her for fashion-sake, but we have no cause, she will never do us good. James commanded him to be fummoned before the Privy Council, to answer for such seditions expressions; and the Clergy, instead of abandoning him to the punishment which fuch a petulant and criminal attack on his superiors deserved, were so imprudent as to espouse his cause, as if it had been the common one of the whole order. The controverly concerning the immunities of the pulpit, and the rights of the Clergy to testify against vices of every kind, which had been agitated in one thoufand five hundred and eighty-four, was now revived. It was pretended that, with regard to their facred function, Ministers were subject to the Church alone; that it belonged only to their Nov, 10. The Clergy espouse his defence. Or-

the

nan

v's;

to

ned

to

had

all

OW

and

and

the

no

ifed

ke.

od.

the

ous

ing

and

e fo

the erfy

the

of

ou-

re-

to t to

heir

ecclesiastical superiors to judge of the truth or falshood of doctrines delivered in the pulpit; that if, upon any pretence whatever, the King usurped this jurisdiction, the Church would, from that moment. fink under servitude to the civil magistrate; that, instead of reproving vice with that honest boldness which had often been of advantage to individuals. and falutary to the kingdom, the Clergy would learn to flatter the passions of the Prince, and to connive at the vices of others; that the King's eagerness to punish the indiscretion of a Protestant Minister. while he was so ready to pardon the crimes of Popish conspirators, called on them to stand upon their guard, and that now was the time to contend for their privileges, and to prevent any encroachment on those rights, of which the Church had been in possession ever fince the Reformation. Influenced by these considerations, the Council of the Church enjoined Black to decline the jurisdiction of the Privy Council. Proud of fuch an oppotunity to display his zeal, he presented a paper to that purpose, and with the utmost firmness refused to plead. or to answer the questions which were put to him. In order to add greater weight to these proceedings, the Council of the Church transmitted the declinature to all the Presbyteries throughout the kingdom, and enjoined every Minister to subkribe it in testimony of his approbation.

James defended his rights with no less vigor than they were attacked. Sensible of the contempt under which his authority must fall, if the Clergy should be permitted publicly, and with

B O O R V11f

by

Bla

refi

con

cil 1

Mi

obli

ner

civi

paff

dee mul

mit

auth

holi

forn

und

gua

ord

gov twe

wit

the

fafe

inte

the

Edi

who

300 K. VIII.

impunity, to calumniate his Ministers, and even to censure himself, and knowing, by former examples, what unequal reparation for such offences he might expect from the judicatories of the Church, he urged on the inquiry into Black's conduct, and issued a proclamation, commanding the Members of the Council of the Church to leave Edinburgh, and to return to their own parishes. Black, instead of fubmitting, renewed his declinature, and the members of the Council, in defiance of the proclamation, declared, that as they met by the authority of the Church, obedience to it was a duty still more facred than that which they owed to the King himfelf. The Privy Council, notwithstanding Black's refusing to plead, proceeded in the trial; and, after a folemn inquiry, pronounced him guilty of the crimes of which he had been accused; but referred it to the King to appoint what punishment he should suffer.

Meanwhile, many endeavours were used to bring matters to accommodation. Almost every day produced some new scheme of reconcilement; but through the King's sicklenes, the obstinacy of the Clergy, or the intrigues of the courtiers, they all proved inessectual. Both parties appealed to the people, and by reciprocal and exaggerated accusations endeavoured to render each other odious. Insolence, sedition, treason, were the crimes with which James charged the Clergy; while they made the pulpits resound with complaints of his excessive lenity towards Papists, and of the no less excessive rigor with which he oppressed the established Church. Exasperated ven

ex-

ices

ch.

and

rs of

and

d of

bers

de-

the red

The

to to mn

of

the

ffer.

l to

rery

cile-

the

the

par-

and

der

on,

the

vith fts,

he

ited

by their bold invectives , he , at last , fentenced BOOK Black to retire beyond the river Spey, and to relide there during his pleasure; and once more commanding the members of the standing Council to depart from Edinburgh, he required all the Ministers in the kingdom to subscribe a bond, obliging themselves to submit, in the same manner as other subjects, to the jurisdiction of the civil courts in matters of a civil nature.

This decifive measure excited all the violent passions which possess disappointed factions; and deeds no less violent immediately followed. These must be imputed in part to the artifices of some courtiers, who expected to reap advantage from the calamities of their country, or who hoped to lessen the authority of the Octavians, by engaging them in hostilities with the church. On one hand, they informed the King that the citizens of Edinburgh were under arms every night, and had planted a strong guard round the houses of their ministers. James, in order to put a stop to this imaginary infult on his government, iffued a proclamation, commanding twenty-four of the principal citizens to leave the town within fix hours. On the other hand, they wrote to the Ministers, advising them to look to their own fafety, as Huntly had been secretly admitted to an interview with the King, and had been the author of the severe proclamation against the citizens of Edinburgh ". They doubted no more of the truth 1596.

Though matters were industriously aggravated by persons, who wished both parties to pursue violent measures; neither of

BOOK VIII.

1596.

of this intelligence, than the King had done of that which he received, and fell as blindly into the snare. The letter came to their hands just as one of their number was going to mount the pulpit. They refolved that he should acquaint the people of their danger: and he painted it with all the strong colors

Decem. 17.

which men naturally employ in describing any dreadful and instant calamity. When the sermon was over, he desired the nobles and gentlemen to assemble in the Little Church. The whole multitude, terrified at what they had heard, crowded thither; they promised and vowed to stand by the Clergy; they drew up a petition to the King, craving the redress of those grievances, of which the Church complained, and befeeching him to deliver them from all suture apprehensions of danger, by removing such of his Counsellors as were known to be enemies of the Protestant religion. Two Peers, two Gentlemen, two Burgesses, and two Ministers, were appointed to present it. The King happened to be in the great hall of the Tolbooth, where the court of

The King in danger.

these reports was altogether destitute of foundation. As their Ministers were supposed to be in danger, some of the more zealous citizens had determined to desend them by sorce of arms. Birch. Mem. ii. 250. Huntly had been privately in Edinburgh, where he had an interview, if not with the King, at least with some of his Ministers. Birch. Ibid. 210 fession was sitting. The manner in which the petition was delivered, as well as its contents, offended him. He gave a haughty reply; the petitioners infifted with warmth; and a promif-cuous multitude pressing into the room, James retired

ret

COL

dep

affe

ing

the

to

mei

all

Son

WIC

mol

boo

ing

that giftr

by f

King

pron

fente

of th

cond

fidin

and

havir

of po

dange

donal

V

that

are. heir

re-

heir

lors

any

was

nble

dat

ifed

up a hose

be-

ap-

f his

the

nen,

nted

the

t of

the

ents,

the

mif-

mes

their

more ce of

ly in

King,

ed

retired abruptly into another apartment, and BOOK commanded the gates to be shut behind him. The deputies returned to the multitude, who were still affembled, and to whom a Minister had been reading, in their absence, the story of Haman. When they reported that the King had refused to liften to their petitions, the Church was filled in a moment with noise, threatenings, execrations, and all the outrage and confusion of a popular tumult. Some called for their arms, some to bring out the wicked Haman; others cried, The fword of the Lord and of Gideon; and, rushing out with the most furious impetuosity, surrounded the Tolbooth, threatening the King himself, and demanding some of his Counsellors, whom they named, that they might tear them in pieces. The magistrates of the city, partly by authority, partly by force, endeavoured to quell the tumult; the King attempted to footh the malecontents, by promiting to receive their petitions, when prefented in a regular manner; the Ministers, sensible of their own rashness in kindling such a flame, seconded both; and the rage of the populace fubfiding as fuddenly as it had rifen, they all dispersed, and the King returned to the palace; happy in having escaped from an insurrection, which, though the instantaneous and unconcerted effect of popular fury, had exposed his life to imminent danger, and was confidered by him as an unpardonable affront to his authority 21.

¹¹ Spotsw. 417, &c. Cald. v. 54, &c. Birch. Mem. ii. 235. Vol. III. D bu

m

joj

tha

teć

lifh

infp

tha

difa

fuff

Lor

desi

this

com

to f

and orde

obey

of fa

turni

conc

The fulpio

fhoul

A C

the 1

every

T

BOOK VIII. 1596.

As foon as he retired, the leaders of the male. contents affembled, in order to prepare their petition. The punishment of the Popish Lords; the removal of those Counsellors who were suspected of favoring their persons or opinions; the repeal of all the late acts of council, subversive of the authority of the Church; together with an act approving the proceedings of the standing council. were the chief of their demands. But the King's indignation was still so high, that the deputies; chosen for this purpose, durst not venture that night to present requests which could not fail of kindling his rage anew. Before next morning, James, with all Edinburgh, his attendants, withdrew to Linlithgow; the festion, and other courts of justice, were required to leave a city where it was no longer confistent either with their fafety, or their dignity to remain; and the noblemen and barons were commanded to return to their own houses, and not to reassemble without the King's permission. The vigor with which the King acted, struck a damp upon the spirits of his adversaries. The citizens, fensible how much they would suffer by his absence, and the removal of the courts of justice, repented already of their conduct. The Ministers alone resolved to maintain the contest. They endeavoured to prevent the nobles from difperfing; they inflamed the people by violent invectives against the King; they labored to procure subscriptions to an affociation for their mutual defence; and conscious what lustre and power the junction of some of the greater nobles would add to their cause, the Ministers of Edin-

He leaves and proceeds with feverity against the citizens.

sale-

oeti.

the

cted

peal

the

ap-

icil,

ing's

ties;

ight

lling

h all

lion,

we a

the

rn to

t the King

ries. uffer

ts of

The

itest.

dif-

t in-

pro-

mu-

and

obles

Edin-

BOOK

VIII.

1597.

burgh wrote to Lord Hamilton, that the people, moved by the word of God, and provoked by the injuries offered to the Church, had taken arms; that many of the nobles had determined to proted the Protestant religion, which owed its establishment to the piety and valor of their ancestors: that they wanted only a leader to unite them, and to inspire them with vigor; that his zeal for the good cause, no less than his noble birth, entitled him to that honor: They conjured him, therefore, not to disappoint their hopes and wishes, nor to refuse the fuffering Church that aid which she so much needed. Lord Hamilton, instead, of complying with their defire, carried the letter directly to the King, whom this new infult irritated to fuch a degree, that he commanded the magistrates of Edinburgh instantly to seize their Ministers, as manifest incendiaries, and encouragers of rebellion. The magistrates, in order to regain the King's favor, were preparing to obey: and the Ministers, who saw no other hope of fafety, fled towards England 22.

This unfuccessful insurrection, instead of overturning, established the King's authority. Those concerned in it were confounded and dispersed. The rest of James's subjects, in order to avoid suspicion, or to gain his favor, contended who should be most forward to execute his vengeance. A Convention of estates being called, pronounced the late insurrection to be high treason; ordained every Minister to subscribe a declaration of his

The King humbles the power of the Church. Jan. 3.

²¹ Spotfw. 451. Cald. v. 126.

cit

CO

tre

ma by ren

eve

and

moi

of i

zabe

by 1

abfo

at th

port

elect

many great

offeri

no le

of the

attem

of pri

He ha

and b

Eccles

memb

tremel

the mi

25 Sp

Jan

BOOK VIII. 1597.

submission to the King's jurisdiction, in all matters civil and criminal; impowered magistrates to commit, instantly, to prison any Minister, who, in his fermons, should utter any indecent reflections on the King's conduct; prohibited any Ecclefiastical judicatory to meet without the King's licence; commanded that no person should be elected a magistrate of Edinburgh, for the future, without the King's approbation; and that, in the mean time, the present magistrates should either discover and inflict condign punishment on the authors of the late tumult, or the city itself should be subjected to all the penalties of that treasonable action".

Abridges the privileges of the Armed with the authority of these decrees, James resolved to crush entirely the mutinous spicitizens of rit of his subjects. As the Clergy had, hitherto, de-Edinburgh. rived their chief credit and strength from the favor and zeal of the citizens of Edinburgh, his first care was to humble them. Though the magistrates fubmitted to him in the most abject terms; though they vindicated themselves, and their fellow-citi. zens, from the most distant intention of violating his royal person or authority; though, after the frictest scrutiny, no circumstances that could fix on them the fuspicion of premeditated rebellion had been discovered; though many of the nobles, and fuch of the clergy as still retained any degree of favor, interceded in their behalf; neither ac knowledgments, nor intercessions, were of the least avail 24. The King continued inexorable, the

Feb. 28.

²³ Cald. V. 147.

²⁴ Cald. v. 149.

nat-

s to

ho,

ions

tical

ice;

ed a

nout

nean

over

rs of

fub-

on".

rees,

fpi-

, de-

ne fa-

first

rates

ough

- citi-

ating

r the

d fix ellion

bles,

egree

er ac

f the

, the city was declared to have forfeited its privileges as a corporation, and to be liable to all the penalties of treason. The capital of the kingdom, deprived of magistrates, deserted by its ministers, abandoned by the courts of justice, and profcribed by the King, remained in desolation and despair. The courtiers even threatened to rafe the city to the foundation. and to erect a pillar where it stood as an everlasting monument of the King's vengeance, and of the guilt of its inhabitants. At last, in compliance with Elizabeth, who interposed in their favor, and moved by the continual folicitations of the nobles, James absolved the citizens from the penalties of law, but at the same time he stripped them of their most important privileges; they were neither allowed to elect their own magistrates, nor their own ministers; many new burdens were imposed on them; and a great fum of money was exacted by way of peaceoffering ".

James was, meanwhile, equally assiduous, and no less successful, in circumscribing the jurisdiction of the Church. Experience had discovered that to attempt this, by acts of parliament, and sentences of privy council, was both inessectual and odious. He had recourse now to an expedient more artful, and better calculated for obtaining his end. The Ecclesiastical judicatories were composed of many members; the majority of the Clergy were extremely indigent, and unprovided of legal stipends; the ministers in the neighbourhood of Edinburgh.

B O O K VIII. 1597.

March 21.

regard to the Church.

²⁵ Spotfw. 434. 444.

BOOK VIII.

1597.

the Canacis

notwithstanding the parity established by the Pres. byterian government, had affumed a leading in the Church, which filled their brethren with envy; every numerous body of men is susceptible of sudden and strong impressions, and liable to be influenced, corrupted, or overawed. Induced by these confiderations, James thought it possible to gain the Clergy, whom he had in vain attempted to fubdue, Proper agents were fet to work all over the kingdom: promifes, flattery, and threats were employed; the usurpations of the brethren near the capital were aggravated; the jealoufy of their power, which was growing in the distant provinces, was aug. mented; and two different General Assemblies were held, in both which, notwithstanding the zeal and boldness wherewith a few leading Clergymen defended the privileges of the Church, a majority declared in favor of those measures which were agreeable to the King. Many practices, which had continued fince the Reformation, were condemned; many points of discipline, which had hitherto been reckoned facred and uncontroverted, were given up; the licence, with which ministers discoursed of political matters, was restrained; the freedom with which they inveighed against particular persons, cenfured; fentences of fummary excommunication declared unlawful; the convoking a General Assembly, without the King's permission, prohibited; and the right of nominating ministers to the principal towns, vested in the Crown. Thus, the Clergy themselves surrendered privileges, which it would have been dangerous to invade, and voluntarily

Jar wh infl vio not crie ful

of e justi

the

E

to the clogging power the nifideli pariff author tribut clefia remai

Th Chur

2. S

ref-

the

vy;

den

ced,

con-

the

duc.

om:

the

vere

hich

aug-

vere

and

de-

rity

were

had

ned;

been

iven

ed of with

ons,

tion

lem-

ted;

cipal

ergy ould

arily

submitted to a yoke more intolerable than any BOOK James would have ventured to impose by force; while fuch as continued to oppose his measures, instead of their former popular topic of the King's violent encroachments on a jurisdiction which did not belong to him, were obliged to turn their outcries against the corruptions of their own order 26.

By the authority of these General Assemblies, the Popish Earls were allowed to make a public recan- Popish Lords tation of their errors; were absolved from the sentence pardoned. of excommunication; and received into the bosom of the Church. But, not many years after, they relapsed into their former errors, were again reconciled to the church of Rome, and by their apostacy justified, in some degree, the fears and scruples of the Clergy with regard to their absolution

The Ministers of Edinburgh owed to the intercession of these assemblies the liberty of returning to their charges in the city. But this liberty was clogged in fuch a manner as greatly abridged their power. The city was divided into distinct parishes; the number of Ministers doubled; persons on whose fidelity the King could rely were fixed in the new parishes; and these circumstances, added to the authority of the late decrees of the Church, contributed to confirm that absolute dominion in Ecclefiaftical affairs, which James possessed during the remainder of his reign.

The King was fo intent on new modelling the Church, that the other transactions of this period:

[&]quot; Spotsw. 433. Cald. v. 189. 233.

fo

be

th

pa

A

th

en

jur

Ch

ob

cat

a fi

upo

of t

nity

ing

tion

and

inte

rega

did

devi

27 fcarce deserve to be remembered. The Octavians, BOOK envied by the other courtiers, and fplitting into VIII. factions among themselves, refigned their com. 3597mission; and the administration of the revenue returning into its former channel, both the King and the nation were deprived of the benefit of their regular and frugal economy.

Dec. 19.

Towards the end of the year, a parliament was held in order to restore Huntly and his affociates to their estates and honors, by repealing the act of forfeiture passed against them. The authority of this supreme court was likewise employed to introduce a farther innovation into the Church; but, conformable to the fystem which the King had now adopted, the motion for this purpose took its rife Ecclefialties from the Clergy themselves. As the act of general feat in par- annexation, and that establishing the Presbyterian government, had reduced the few Bishops, who fill furvived, to poverty and contempt; as those who possessed the Abbeys and Priories were mere laymen, and many of them temporal Peers, few or none of the Ecclesiastical order remained to vote in parliament, and, by means of that, the influence of the Crown was confiderably diminished there, and a proper balance to the power and number of the nobles was wanting. But the prejudices the nation had conceived against the name and character of Bishops were so violent, that James was obliged, with the utmost care, to avoid the appearance of a design to revive that order. He prevailed therefore on the Commission appointed by the last General Affembly to complain to the Parliament, that the liament.

ns,

nto

m.

nue

ing

of

was

ates

of

of

trout,

wor

rife

eral

rian

nofe

nere v or e in

ence ere,

r of

the

acter

ged,

e of fore

neral

the

Church was the only body in the kingdom destitute of its representatives in that supreme court, where it so nearly concerned every order to have some, who were bound to desend its rights; and to crave that a competent number of the Clergy should be admitted, according to ancient custom, to a feat there. In compliance with this request, an act was passed, by which those Ministers, on whom the King should confer the vacant Bishoprics and Abbeys, were entitled to a vote in Parliament; and that the Clergy might conceive no jealousy of any encroachment upon their privileges, it was remitted to the General assembly, to determine what spiritual jurisdiction or authority in the government of the Church these persons should posses 27.

The King, however, found it no easy matter to obtain the concurrence of the Ecclesiastical judicatories, in which the act of Parliament met with a sierce opposition. Though the Clergy perceived how much lustre this new privilege would reslect upon their order; though they were not insensible of the great accession of personal power and dignity, which many of them would acquire, by being admitted into the supreme council of the nation, their abhorrence of episcopacy was extreme; and to that they sacrificed every consideration of interest or ambition. All the King's professions of regard for the present constitution of the Church did not convince them of his sincerity; all the devices that could be invented for restraining and

B O O K VIII.

²⁷ Spotsw. 450. Parl. 15th Jac. VI. c. 235.

tic

all

m

ne

fire

bu

diff

Bru

En

Wal

dee

cala

or

all t

to k

and

coul

Que

the

gress

all th

requ

than

entit

the h

their

B O O K VIII. 1598.

circumscribing the jurisdiction of such as were to be raised to this new honor, did not diminish their jealoufy and fear. Their own experience had taught them, with what infinuating progrefs the hierarchy advances, and though admitted at first with moderate authority, and under specious pretences, how rapidly it extends its dominion. " Varnish over this scheme, said one of lead. ing Clergymen, with what colors you please: deck the intruder with the utmost art; under all this difguise. I see the horns of his mitre." The fame fentiments prevailed among many of his brethren, and induced them to reject power and honors, with as much zeal as ever those of their order courted them. Many, however, were allured by the hopes of preferment; the King himfelf and his Ministers employed the same arts, which they had tried so successfully last year; and after long debates, and much opposition, the Ge. neral Affembly declared that it was lawful for Ministers to accept of a feat in Parliament; that it would be highly beneficial to the Church, to have its representatives in that supreme court; and that fifty-one persons, a number nearly equal to that of the Ecclesiastics, who were anciently called to Parliament, should be chosen from among the Clergy for that purpose. The manner of their election, together with the powers to be vested in them, were left undecided for the present, and furnished matter of future deliberation".

March 7.

²⁸ Spotfw. 450. Cald. v. 278.

re

ifh

ice

ess

at

ous

on.

ad.

fe:

all

he

his

ind

neir

al-

im-

rts,

and

Ge.

Mi-

t it

ave

and

to

itly

mor

ner

be

ent,

As the prospect of succeeding to the Crown of England drew nearer, James multiplied precautions in order to render it certain. As he was allied to many of the Princes of Germany by his marriage, he fent ambaffadors extraordinary to their feveral courts, in order to explain the justness of his title to the English throne, and to defire their affistance, if any competitor should arise to dispute his undoubted rights. These Princes readily acknowledged the equity of his claim; but the aid which they could afford him was distant and feeble. At the same time, Edward Bruce, abbot of Kinloss, his ambassador at the English court, solicited Elizabeth, with the utmost warmth, to recognize his title by fome public deed, and to deliver her own subjects from the calamities which are occasioned by an uncertain or disputed succession. But age had strengthened all the passions which had hitherto induced Elizabeth to keep this great question obscure and undecided; and a general and evafive answer was all that James could obtain. As no impression could be made on the Queen, the ambassador was commanded to found the disposition of her subjects, and to try what progress he could make in gaining them. Bruce possessed all the talents of fecrecy, judgment, and address, requisite for conducting a negociation no less delicate than important. A Minister of this character was entitled to the confidence of the English. Many of the highest rank unbosomed themselves to him with. out referve, and gave him repeated affurances of their resolution to afsert his master's right, in

BOOK VIII.

James endeavours with fuccifs to gain a party in England.

J

H

tl

tr

0 til

hi

20 fic

fro

ful

CO

ref

fuf

fo

COI

aft

of

luti

gen

bet

frec

pro

who

BOOK VIII.

opposition to every pretender 19. As several pam. phlets were dispersed, at this time, in England. containing objections to his title, James employed fome learned men in his kingdom to answer these cavillers, and to explain the advantages which would refult to both kingdoms by the union of the Crowns. These books were eagerly read, and contributed not a little to reconcile the English to that event. A book published this year by the King himself, produced an effect still more favorable. It was entitled Basilicon Doron, and contained precepts concerning the art of government, addressed to Prince Henry his son. Notwithstanding the great alterations and refinements in national tafte fince that time, we must allow this to be no contemptible performance, and not to be inferior to the works of most contemporary writers, either in purity of ftyle or justness of composition. Even the vain parade of erudition with which it abounds, and which now disgusts us, raised the admiration of that age; and as it was filled with those general rules which speculative authors deliver for rendering a nation happy, and of which James could discourse with great plausibility, though often incapable of putting them in practice, the English conceived a high opinion of his abilities, and expected an increase of national bonor and prosperity, under a Prince so profoundly skilled in politics, and who gave fuch a fpecimen both of his wisdom and of his love to his people ".

²⁹ Johnst. 242. 30 Camd. Spotsw. 457.

am-

ind, yed

hefe

ould

wns.

not

ook

d an

licon

rt of

Not-

ents

llow

not

rary

is of

ition

gusts

as it

ecu-

ру,

reat

ting

high

rease

ince

gave love

1501

The Queen of England's fentiments concerning BOOK James, were very different from those of her subjects. His excessive indulgence towards the Popish Lords: the facility with which he pardoned their repeated treasons; his restoring Beaton, the Popish Archbishop of Glasgow, who had fled out of Scotland at the time of the Reformation, to the possession of the temporalities of that benefice; the appointing him his Ambassador at the court of France; the applause he bestowed, in the Basilicon Doron, on those who adhered to the Queen his mother, Elizabeth confidered as fo many indications of a mind alienated from the Protestant religion; and suspected that he would foon revolt from the profession of it. These suspicions seemed to be fully confirmed by a difcovery which came from the Master of Gray, who refided at that time in Italy, and who, rather than fuffer his intriguing spirit to be idle, demeaned himself so far as to act as a spy for the English court. He conveyed to Elizabeth the copy of a letter, written by James to Pope Clement VIII. in which the King, after many expressions of regard for that pontiff, and of gratitude for his favors, declared his firm refolution to treat the Roman Catholics with indulgence; and, in order to render the intercourse between the court of Rome and Scotland more frequent and familiar, he folicited the Pope to promote Drummond, Bishop of Vaison, a Scotsman, to the dignity of a Cardinal". Elizabeth, who had received by another channel ", fome im-

VIII. -1599.

Accufes him of correfponding. with the ¹¹ Cald. 333. 32 Winw. Mem. vol. i. 37. 52.

al

ha

bi te

di

20

of

the

bu

eve

difa

ho

trie

by

Jam

enc

Phil Eng

the

falfi:

and :

a ve

to th

com

VIII.

perfect intelligence of this correspondence, was filled with just surprise, and immediately dispatched Bowes into Scotland, to inquire more fully into the truth of the matter, and to reproach James for an action so unbecoming a Protestant Prince. He was astonished at the accusation, and with a confidence, which nothing but the consciousness of innocence could inspire, affirmed the whole to be a mere calumny, and the letter itself to be forged by his enemies, on purpose to bring his fincerity in religion to be suspected. Elphingston the Secretary of State denied the matter with equal folemnity. It came to be known by a very fingular accident, which happened some years after, that the information which Elizabeth had received was well founded, though at the same time the King's declarations of his own innocence were perfectly confistent with truth. Cardinal Bellarmine, in a reply which he published to a controversial treatise, of which the King was the author, accused him of having abandoned the favorable fentiments which he had once entertained of the Roman Catholic religion, and, as a proof of this, quoted his letter to Clement VIII. It was impossible, any longer, to believe this to be a fiction; and it was a matter too delicate to be passed over without strict inquiry. James immediately examined Elphingston, and his confession unravelled the whole mystery. He acknowledged that he had shuffled in this letter among other papers, which he laid before the King to be figned, who suspecting no fuch deceit, subscribed it together with the rest, led

ned

the

an

Was

ce,

nce

aere

his

gion

tate

e to hich

tion

led,

ions

Rent

eply

, of

n of

holic

etter

iger,

mat-Arict

hing-

vhole

affled.

laid

ig no

reft,

and without knowing what it contained; that he had no other motive, however, to this action, but zeal for his Majesty's service; and, by flattering the Roman Catholics with hopes of indulgence under the King's government, he imagined that he was paving the way for his more eafy accession to the English throne. The Privy Council of England entertained very different fentiments of the Secretary's conduct. In their opinion, not only the King's reputation had been exposed to reproach. but his life to danger, by this rash imposture; they even imputed the gunpowder treason to the rage and disappointment of the Papists, upon finding that the hopes which this letter inspired were frustrated. The Secretary was fent a prisoner into Scotland, to be tried for high treason. His peers found him guilty, but, by the Queen's intercession, he obtained a pardon ".

According to the account of other historians. James himself was no stranger to this correspondence with the Pope; and, if we believe them, Elphingston, being intimidated by the threats of the English council, and deceived by the artifices of the Earl of Dunbar, concealed some circumstances in his narrative of this transaction, and salissied others; and at the expense of his own same, and with the danger of his life, endeavoured to draw a veil over this part of his master's conduct **.

But whether we impute the writing of this letter to the Secretary's officious zeal, or to the King's command, it is certain, that, about this time, James

B O O K VIII. 1599.

James at great pains to gain the Roman Catholics

State Trials, vol. i. 429. Spotsw. 456. 507. Johnst. 448. Cald. vol. v. 322. vi. 147.

VIII.

BOOK was at the utmost pains to gain the friendship of the Roman Catholic Princes, as a necessary precaution towards facilitating his accession to the English throne. Lord Home, who was himself a Papist, was intrusted with a secret commission to the Pope"; the Archbishop of Glasgow was an active instrument with those of his own religion ". The Pope expressed fuch favorable fentiments both of the King, and of his right to the Crown of England, that James thought himself bound, some years after, to acknowledge the obligation in a public manner 37. Sir James Lind. fay made great progress in gaining the English Papists to acknowledge his Majesty's title. Of all these intrigues Elizabeth received obscure hints from different quarters. The more imperfectly she knew, the more violently she suspected the King's designs; and the natural jealousy of her temper increasing with age, she observed his conduct with greater folicitude than ever.

1600. March 28. His regulations with regard to the Church.

The questions with regard to the election and power of the representatives of the Church, were finally decided this year by the General Assembly, which met at Montrose. That place was chosen as most convenient for the Ministers of the North, among whom the King's influence chiefly lay. Although great numbers reforted from the northern provinces, and the King employed his whole interest, and the authority of his own presence, to gain a majority, the following regulations were with difficulty agreed on. That the General

Affembly

A

V

P fea

to

th po

ev

WI

mu

Pa

no tha

forf

refi

whi fem

mol

Not

epife

was

their

miffi

admi

repre

Desti

jurifo

tered

Vo

Winw. Mem. vol. ii. 57.

³⁶ Cald. vol. vi. 147.

³⁷ Cald. vol. v. 604.

the

tion

glish

was

e ";

ment

effed

of his

ught

edge

Lind-

apilts thefe

from new.

igns;

aling

reater

and were

mbly,

hofen

North,

lay.

north-

whole

ce, to

were eneral

1. 147.

ably

BOOK

VIII.

1600.

Affembly shall recommend fix persons to every vacant benefice, which gave a title to a feat in Parliament, out of whom the King should nominate one; that the person so elected, after obtaining his feat in Parliament, shall neither propose, nor confent to any thing there, that may affect the interest of the Church, without special instructions to that purpose; that he shall be answerable for his conduct to every General Affembly; and submit to its censure, without appeal, upon pain of infamy and excommunication; that he shall discharge the duties of a Pastor, in a particular congregation; that he shall not usurp any ecclesiastical jurisdiction, superior to that of his other brethren; that if the Church inflict on him the censure of deprivation, he shall thereby forfeit his feat in Parliament; that he shall annually relign his commission to the General Assembly, which may be restored to him, or not, as the Affembly, with the King's approbation, shall judge most expedient for the good of the Church ". Nothing could be more repugnant to the idea of episcopal government, than these regulations. It was not in consequence of rights derived from their office, but of powers conferred by a commission, that the ecclesiastical persons were to be admitted to a feat in Parliament; they were the representatives, not the superiors of the Clergy. Destitute of all spiritual authority, even their civil jurisdiction was temporary. James, however, flattered himself that they would soon be able to shake [&]quot; Spotsw. 453. 457. Cald vol. v. 398. Vol. III.

al

he

tra

hif

dui

wa

was

wit

that man

by-p fearo

filled

had :

and,

perso

folita

impai Maje

perfo

coin .

kingd of Per into a

violen

argum

and to

while this pass

B O O K VIII. 1600. off these setters, and gradually acquire all the privileges which belonged to the episcopal order. The Clergy dreaded the same thing; and of course he contended for the nomination of these commissioners, and they opposed it, not so much on account of the powers then vested in them, as of those to which it was believed they would soon attain 3.

Gowrie's conspiracy.

During this fummer, the kingdom enjoyed an unufual tranquillity. The Clergy, after many flruggles, were brought under great subjection; the Popish Earls were restored to their estates and honors, by the authority of Parliament, and with the consent of the Church; the rest of the nobles were at peace among themselves, and obedient to the royal authority; when, in the midst of this security, the King's life was exposed to the utmost danger, by a conspiracy altogether unexpected, and almost inexplicable. The authors of it were John Ruthven, Earl of Gowrie, and his brother Alexander, the fons of that Earl who was beheaded in the year one thousand five hundred and eighty-four. Nature had adorned both these young men, especially the elder brother, with many accomplishments, to which education had added its most elegant improvements. More learned than is usual among persons of their rank; more religious than is common at their age of life; generous, brave, popular; their countrymen, far from thinking them capable of any atrocious crime, conceived the most fanguine hopes of their early virtues. Notwithstanding ³⁹ Spots. 454.

the

rder.

ourse

com-

ch on

1, as vould

ed an ftrug-

; the hon-

th the

were

o the

urity,

anger,

almost

thven,

ne fons ar one

re had

elder which

ments.

f cheir

t their

of any

nguine

anding

all these noble qualities, some unknown motive engaged them in a conspiracy, which, if we adhere to the account commonly received, must be transmitted to posterity, as one of the most wicked, as well as one of the worst concerted, of which history makes any mention.

On the fifth of August, as the King, who resided during the hunting feason in his palace of Falkland, was going out to his sport early in the morning, he was accosted by Mr. Alexander Ruthven, who, with an air of great importance, told the King, that the evening before he had met an unknown man; of a suspicious aspect, walking alone in a by-path, near his brother's house at Perth; and on fearching him, had found, under his cloak, a pot filled with a great quantity of foreign gold; that he had immediately seized both him and his treasure, and, without communicating the matter to any person, had kept him confined and bound in a folitary house; and that he thought it his duty to impart such a singular event, first of all to his Majesty. James immediately suspected this unknown person to be a seminary priest, supplied with foreign coin, in order to excite new commotions in the kingdom; and resolved to empower the Magistrates of Perth to call the person before them, and inquire into all the circumstances of the story. Ruthven violently opposed this resolution, and with many arguments urged the King to ride directly to Perth, and to examine the matter with his own eyes. Meanwhile the chase began; and James, notwithstanding his passion for that amusement, could not help rumiBOOK VIII.

Ar

thr

loc

in 1

fwc

ed i

at t

Ru

mai

"R

" fe

« fu

" or

Jame

flatte

ftud

may

to fe

the]

and,

order

armo

oath W

tion,

whith

ants e the K

of the

in the

by thi

BOOK VIII.

nating upon the strangeness of the tale, and on Ruthven's importunity. At last, he called him, and promised, when the sport was over, to set out for Perth. The chase, however, continued long; and Ruthven, who all the while kept close by the King, was still urging him to make hafte. At the death of the buck he would not allow James to stay till a fresh horse was brought him; and observing the Duke of Lenox and the Earl of Mar preparing to accompany the King, he entreated him to countermand them. This James refused; and though Ruthven's impatience and anxiety, as well as the apparent perturbation in his whole behaviour, raifed some fuspicions in his mind; yet his own curiosity, and Ruthven's folicitations, prevailed on him to fet out for Perth. When within a mile of the town, Ruthven rode forward to inform his brother of the King's arrival, though he had already dispatched two mesfengers for that purpose. At a little distance from the town, the Earl, attended by feveral of the citizens, met the King, who had only twenty persons in his train. No preparations were made for the King's entertainment; the Earl appeared pensive and embarraffed, and was at no pains to atone, by his courtely or hospitality for the bad fare with which he treated his guests. When the King's repast was over, his at tendants were led to dine in another room, and he being left almost alone, Ruthven whispered him, that now was the time to go to the chamber where the un known person was kept. James commanded him to bring Sir Thomas Erskine along with them; but instead of that, Ruthven ordered him not to follow

uth-

pro-

erth.

iven,

s still

buck

horse

ke of

command

ven's parent

fome

, and

et out

thven

King's

o mef-

om the

izens,

in his King's embar-

ourtely treated

, his at

m, tha

the un

n; but

follow

And conducting the King up a stair-case, and then through feveral apartments, the doors of which he locked behind him, led him at last into a small study, in which there stood a man clad in armour, with a sword and dagger by his side. The King, who expected to have found one disarmed and bound, started at the fight, and inquired if this was the person; but Ruthven fnatching the dagger from the girdle of the man in armour, and holding it to the King's break. "Remember," faid he, ,, how unjustly my father suf-" fered by your command; you are now my prisoner; " fubmit to my disposal without resistance, or outcry; "or this dagger shall instantly avenge his blood." James expostulated with Ruthven, entreated, and flattered him. The man whom he found in the fludy flood, all the while, trembling, and difmayed, without courage either to aid the King, or to second his aggressor. Ruthven protested, that if the King raised no outcry, his life should be safe; and, moved by some unknown reason, retired in order to call his brother, leaving to the man in armour the care of the King, whom he bound by oath not to make any noise during his absence.

While the King was in this dangerous fituation, his domestics growing impatient to know whither he had retired, one of Gowrie's attendants entered the room hastily, and told them that the King had just rode away towards Falkland. All of them rushed out into the street; and the Earl, in the utmost hurry, called for their horses. But by this time his brother had returned to the King, and swearing that now there was no remedy, he

B O O K VIII.

WI

Kin

up

the

Go

wit

rec

con

opp

they

was

of co

all h

to (

dang

of th

who

ofth

the h

and

ende

fpeak

magi

circu

by de

pock

and a parch

word

8 O O K

must die, offered to bind his hands. Unarmed as James was, he scorned to submit to that indignity: and clofing with the affaffin, a fierce ftruggle enfued, The man in armour flood, as formerly, amazed and motionless; and the King dragging Ruthven towards a window, which during his absence he had persuaded the person with whom he was left to open, cried, with a wild and affrighted voice, "Treason! "Treason! Help! I am murdered!" His attendants heard, and knew the voice; and faw, at the window, a hand which grasped the King's neck with violence. They flew with precipitation to his affiftance. Lenox and Mar, with the greater number, ran up the principal stair case, where they found all the doors shut, which they battered with the utmost fury, endeavouring to burst them open. But Sir John Ramfey, entering by a back-stair, which led to the apartment where the King was, found the door open; and rushing upon Ruthven, who was fill ftruggling with the King, ftruck him twice with his dagger, and thrust him towards the staircafe, where Sir Thomas Erskine and Sir Hugh Herries met, and killed him; he crying with his last breath, " Alas! I am not to blame for this action. " During this scuffle, the man who had been concealed in the study escaped unobserved. Together with Ramsey, Erskine, and Herries, one Wilson, a footman, entered the room where the King was, and before they had time to shut the door, Gowrie rushed in with a drawn sword in each hand; followed by feven of his attendants well armed, and with a loud voice threatened them all

rmed as dignity: enfued. ized and towards he had to open, reason! endants indow. iolence. listance. , ran up all the utmolt

Sir John

led to nd the

ho was twice

e stair-

Hugh

ith his or this ho had ferved.

es, one

ere the

out the

in each

s well

nem all with instant death. They immediately thrust the King into the little study, and shutting the door upon him, encountered the Earl. Notwithstanding the inequality of numbers, Sir John Ramfey pierced Gowrie, through the heart, and he fell down dead without uttering a word; his followers having received several wounds, immediately fled. Three of the King's defenders were likewise hurt in the conflict. A dreadful noise continued still at the opposite door, where many persons labored in vain to force a passage; and the King being affured that they were Lenox, Mar, and his other friends, it was opened on the infide. They ran to the King, whom they unexpectedly found fafe, with transports of congratulation; and he, falling on his knees, with all his attendants around him, offered folemn thanks to God for fuch a wonderful deliverance. The danger, however, was not yet over. The inhabitants of the town, whose Provost Gowrie was, and by whom he was extremely beloved, hearing the fate of the two brothers, ran to their arms, and furrounded the house, threatening revenge, with many insolent and opprobrious speeches against the King. James endeavoured to pacify the enraged multitude, by speaking to them from the window; he admitted their magistrates into the house; related to them all the circumstances of the fact; and, their fury subsiding by degrees, they dispersed. On searching the Earl's pockets for papers that might discover his designs and accomplices, nothing was found but a small parchment bag, full of magical characters and words of enchantment; and if we may believe the

BOOK VIII. 1600.

th

20 th

gr

de

mı

an

ma

tio

ren

tw

fch

WI

cun

yea plau

had

Spro

perf Gov

matt

be fe

partl

acco

opul

to all

crime

with

opera

the f

BOOK VIII. 1600.

account of the conspiracy published by the King, " while thefe were about him, the wound of " which he died, bled not; but as foon as they " were taken away, the blood gushed out in great " abundance." After all the dangerous adventures of this busy day, the King returned in the evening to Falkland, having committed the dead bodies of the two brothers to the custody of the Magistrates of Perth.

of the confpirators not eafily explained.

The motive Notwithstanding the minute detail which the King gave of all the circumstances of this conspiracy against his life, the motives which induced the two brothers to attempt an action fo detestable, the end they had in view, and the accomplices on whose aid they depended, were altogether unknown. The words of Ruthven to the King gave some grounds to think that the defire of revenging their father's death had instigated them to this attempt. But, whatever injuries, their father had fuffered, it is scarcely probable that they could impute them to the King, whose youth, as well as his subjection at that time to the violence of a faction, exempted him from being the object of resentment, on account of actions which were not done by his command. James had even endeavoured to repair the wrongs which the father had suffered, by benefits to his children; and Gowrie himself, sensible of his favor, had acknowledged it with the warmest expressions, of gratitude. Three of the Earl's attendants, being convicted of affifting him in this affault on the King's fervants, were executed at Perth; but they could give no light into the motives which had prompted

ing,

d of

they

great

ven-

the dead

f the

King

ainst

thers

y had

they

ds of

think

had

tever

rcely

Ling,

me to being

which

even

ather

owrie edged

itude.

victed

's fer-

d give

their master to an action so repugnant to these acknowledgments. Diligent search was made for the person conceased in the study, and from him great discoveries were expected. But Andrew Henderson the Earl's steward, who, upon a promise of pardon, confessed himself to be the man, was as much a stranger to his master's design as the rest; and though placed in the study by Gowrie's command, he did not even know for what end that station had been assigned him. The whole transaction remained as impenetrably dark as ever, and the two brothers, it was concluded, had concerted their scheme without either consident or accomplice, with unexampled secrecy as well as wickedness.

An accident, no less strange than the other circumstances of the story, and which happened nine years after, discovered that this opinion, however plaufible, was ill founded; and that the two brothers had not carried on their machinations all alone. One Sprot, a notary, having whifpered among feveral persons that he knew some secrets relating to Gowrie's conspiracy, the privy council thought the matter worthy of their attention, and ordered him to be seized. His confession was partly voluntary, and partly forced from him by torture. According to his account, Logan of Restalrig, a gentleman of an opulent fortune, but of dissolute morals, was privy to all Gowrie's intentions, and an accomplice in his crimes.Mr. Ruthven, he faid, had frequent interviews with Logan, in order to concert the plan of their operations; the Earl had corresponded with him to the same purpose; and one Bour, Logan's confiB O O K VIII. 1600.

Sprot's difcoveries concerning

his

infa

for

felli

adop

69.

ceive

restri

The

Lords and p

and of

but a

comm

realm to bet

in the

judged

the fai

tence

He wa

in the question

that thi

liament

deserve

can be t

their fo

them;

fon, his

of this o

Corrichi

in parlia against brother w in parliar

were dug

B O O K. VIII.

dent, was trusted with the secret, and carried the letters between them. Both Logan and Bour were now dead. .But Sprot affirmed that he had read letters written both by Gowrie and Logan on that occasion; and, in confirmation of his testimony, several of Logan's letters, which a curiofity fatal to himself had prompted Sprot to steal from among Bour's papers, were produced". These were compared, by the privy council, with papers of Logan's hand-writing, and the refemblance was manifest. Persons of undoubted credit. and well qualified to judge of the matter, examined them, and fwore to their authenticity. Death itself did not exempt Logan from profecution; his bones were dug up and tried for High Treason and by a fentence, equally odious and illegal ",

By the Roman law, persons guilty of the crime of High Treason might be tried even after death. This practice was Logan's letters were five in number. One to Bour, another to Gowrie, and three of them without any direction; nor could Sprot discover the name of the person to whom they were written. Logan gives him the appellation of Right Honorable. It appears from this, however, and from other words in the letter; Crom. 95. that there were several persons privy to the conspiracy. The date of the first letter is July 18th. Mr. Ruthven had communicated the matter to Logan only five days before. Ibid. It appears from the original fummons of forfaulture against Logan's heirs, that Bour, though he had letters addressed to him with regard to a conspiracy equally dangerous and important, was so illiterate that he could not read. "Jacobus Bour, literarum prorfus ignatus, dicti Geor-" gii opera in legendis omnibus scriptis ad eum missis, vel " pertinentibus, utebatur." This is altogether strange, and nothing but the capricious character of Logan can account for his chusing such a confident.

he

ur

att

an

his

cu-

to +0 ith

m-

lit,

red

ath

n;

fon

+1

her

rit-

ble.

the

the

ith-

be-

for-

let-

ally

not

or-

vel

and

unt

ligh

was

his lands were forseited, and his posterity declared infamous. Sprot was condemned to be hanged for misprission of treason. He adhered to his confession to the last, and having promised, on the adopted by the Scots, without any limitation, Parl. 1540. c. 60 But the unlimited exercise of this power was soon conceived to be dangerous; and the Crown was laid under proper restrictions, by an act A. D. 1542. which has never been printed. The words of it are, "And because the said Lords (i. e. the Lords of Articles) think the faid act (viz. in 1540) too general, and prejudicial to the Barons in the realm, therefore statutes and ordains that the faid act shall have no place in time coming, but against the heirs of them that notoriously commit or shall commit lese Majesty against the King's person, against the realm for averting the fame, and against them that shall happen to betray the King's army allenarly, and being notourly known in their time; and the heirs of these persons to be called and judged within five years after the decease of the said persons committers of the faid crimes; and the faid time being bypast, the faid heirs never to be purfued for the fame." The fentence against Logan violated this statute in two particulars. He was not notourly known during his life to be an accomplice in the crime for which he was tried; and his heir was called in question more than five years after his death. It is remarkable that this statute seems not to have been attended to in the parliament which forfeited Logan. Another fingular circumstance deserves notice. As it is a maxim of justice that no person can be tried in absence; and as lawyers are always tenacious of their forms, and often abfurd in their devices for preferving them, they contrived that, in any process against a dead perion, his corple or bones shall be presented at the bar. Examples of this occur frequently in the Scottish history. After the battle of Corrichie, the dead body of the Earl of Huntly was presented in parliament, before fentence of forfaulture was pronounced against him. For the same reason the bodies of Gowrie and his brother were preserved, in order that they might be produced in parliament. Logan's bones, in compliance with the same rule, were dug up. Mackenz. Crim. Law, Book i. Tit. 6. § 22.

VIII.

BOOK VIII. 1600.

scaffold, to give the spectators a sign in confirmation of the truth of what he had deposed, he thrice clapped his hands after he was thrown off the ladder by the executioner ".

It appears that Archbishop Spotswood was present at the execution of Sprot, Crom. 115. and yet he feems to have given no credit to his discoveries. The manner in which he speaks of him is remarkable, "Whether or not I should mention the ar-" raignment and execution of George Sprot, who suffered at " Edinburgh, I am doubtful. His confession, though voluntary and constant, carrying small probability. The man deposed, &c. It feemed to be a very fiction, and a mere invention of the man's own brain, for neither did he show the letter, nor could any wife man think that Gowrie, who went about the " treason so secretly, would have communicated the matter to " fuch a man as Logan was known to be." p. 508. Spotswood could not be ignorant of the folemnity with which Logan had been tried, and of the proof brought of the authenticity of his letters. He himself was probably present in parliament at the trial. The Earl of Dunbar, of whom he always speaks with the highest respect, was the person who directed the process against Logan. Such a peremptory declaration against the truth of Sprot's evidence, notwithstanding all these circumstances, is surprising. Sir Thomas Hamilton, the King's advocate at that time, and afterwards Earl of Hadington, represents the proof produced at Logan's trial as extremely convincing; and in an original letter of his to the King, the 21st of June 1609, (in Bibl. Facult. Jurid.) after mentioning themanner in which the trial had been conducted, he thus goes on:

"When the probation of the summons was referred to the Lords of Articles votes, they found uniformly, all in one voice, the faid summons to be so clearly proved, that they feemed to contend who should be able most zealously to express the satisfaction of his heart, not only by the most pithy words, but by tears of joy; diverse of the best rank confessing, that that whereof they doubted at their entry into the house was now fo manifest, that they behoved to esteem them traitors who should any longer refuse to declare their affured resolution of the truth of that treason."

that addi the almo ting duty mure prob unde If th conc prop If th the more hand unfo wou Rutl hand was the F tentic to th as H time. whor fword

brue

what his d

B

n-

he

off

he

en

of ar-

at

ary

ed,

of

he

to.

od

een

he

ct, h a

ce,

nas

arl

ng,

ng

on:

he

ne

efs

is,

at:

as

on

But though it be thus unexpectedly discovered that Gowrie did not act without affociates, little additional light is thrown, by this discovery, on the motives and intention of his conduct. It appears almost incredible that two young men of such diftinguished virtue should revolt all at once from their duty, and attempt a crime so atrocious, as the murder of their Sovereign. It appears still more improbable, that they should have concerted their undertaking with so little foresight and prudence. If they intended that the deed should have remained concealed, they could not have chosen a more improper scene for executing it, than their own house. If they intended that Henderson should have struck the blow, they could not have pitched on a man more destitute of the courage that must direct the hand of an affaffin; nor could they expect that he, unfolicited, and unacquainted with their purpose, would venture on fuch a desperate action. Ruthven meant to stab the King with his own hand, why did he withdraw the dagger, after it was pointed at his breast? How could he leave the King, after such a plain declaration of his intention? Was it not preposterous to commit him to the keeping of fuch a timid and false affociate, as Henderson? For what purpose did he waste time, in binding the hands of an unarmed man, whom he might eafily have dispatched with his sword? Had Providence permitted them to imbrue their hands in the blood of their Sovereign, what advantage could have accrued to them by his death? and what claims or pretentions could

B O O K VIII. vIII. Inevitable and instant vengeance, together with perpetual insamy, were the only consequences they could expect to follow such a crime.

On the other hand, it is impossible to believe that the King had formed any design against the life of the two brothers. They had not incurred his indignation by any crime; and were in no degree the objects of his jealousy or hatred "; nor death, the Earl of Gowrie might have pretended to the Crown of England, as the fon of Dorothea Stewart daughter of Lord Methven by Margaret of England, who, after her divorce from the Earl of Angus, took that nobleman for her third husband. Burnet, Hist. of his own times. But this affertion is ill founded. It appears, from undoubted evidence, that Lord Methven had only one child by Queen Margaret, which died in its infancy, and Dorothea Lady Ruthven was not the daughter of Queen Margaret, but of Janet Steward, Lord Methven's second wise, a daughter of John Earl of Athol. Crawf. Peer. 329. And though Gowrie had really been descended from the blood-royal of England, the King at that time had a son and a daughter; and besides them, Lady Arabella Stewart, daughter of Charles Earl of Lenox, had a preferable title to the Crown of England.

 Sir Henry Neville, in a letter to Sir Ralph Winwood, imputes the death of the two brothers to a cause not mentioned by any of our historians. "Out of Scotland we hear that there is no good agreement, but rather an open dissidence betwixt the King and his wife, and many are of opinion that the discovery of some affection between her and the Earl of Gowrie's brother (who was killed with him) was the truest cause and motive of that tragedy." Winw Mem. vol. i. 274. Whether the following passages in Nicholson's letter be any confirmation of that suspicion, is submitted to the reader. In his letter, Sept. 22, 1602, he mentions the return of Gowrie's two younger brothers into and ther roun and affill of t

was

aid; affor and close the

W

Gow and v tradic fpirac deriv difco Scotlar Queen nilhing

Sir Th

King o

plot."
writing Paifley,
the cou
her by and co fhowed

for it , fame , a discretic 19

ith

ey'

ve

the

red

no

nor

ng's

n of

ord

rom

and.

d. It

had

cy,

een

e,a ugh l of

and

Earl

and.

od,

ned

e is

the

y of

who

that ving

ıfpi-

, he

inta

was he of a spirit so sanguinary, or so noted for rash and desperate valor, as to have attempted to murder them in their own house, where they were surrounded with many domestics, he only with a slender and unarmed train; where they could call to their assistance the inhabitants of a city, at the devotion of their family, while he was at a distance from all aid; and least of all would he have chosen for his associates, in such an enterprise, the Earl of Mar, and the Duke of Lenox, the former connected in close friendship with the house of Gowrie, and the latter married to one of the Earl's sisters.

Whichfoever of these opposite fystems we embrace; whether we impute the intention of murder to Gowrie, or to the King; insuperable difficulties arise, and we are involved in darkness, mystery, and contradictions. Perhaps the source of the whole conspiracy ought to be searched for deeper, and by deriving it from a more remote cause, we may discover it to be less criminal.

Scotland, and adds, "The coming in of these two, and the Queen of Scots dealing with them, and sending away and surnishing Mrs. Beatrix (their sister) with such information as Sir Thomas Erskine has given, hath bred great suspicion in the King of Scots that they come not in but upon some dangerous plot." In another letter, January 1, 1603. "The day of writing my last, Mrs. Beatrix Ruthven was brought by the Lady Pailley, and Mrs. of Angus, as one of their gentlewomen into the court in the evening, and stowed in a chamber prepared for her by the Queen's direction, where the Queen had much time and conference with her. Of this the king got notice, and showed his dislike thereof to the Queen, gently reproving her for it, and examining quietly of the Queen's servants of the same, and of other matters thereunto belonging, with such discretion and secrecy as requires such a matter."

B O O K VIII.

A conjecture concerning the intention of the confpirators. B O O K VIII.

To keep the King of Scots in continual depend. ance, was one great object of Elizabeth's policy. In order to this, she sometimes soothed him; and sometimes bribed his Ministers and favorites; and when she failed of attaining her end by these means, she encouraged the Clergy to render any administration which she distrusted unpopular, by decrying it, or stirred up some faction of the nobles to oppose and to overturn it. In that fierce age, men little acquainted with the arts of undermining a Ministry by intrigue, had recourse to the ruder practice of rendering them. selves masters of the King's person, that they might thereby obtain the direction of his councils. Those nobles, who feized the King at the Raid of Ruthven, were instigated and supported by Elizabeth. Roth. well, in all his wild attempts, enjoyed her protection, and when they miscarried, he was secure of retreat in her dominions. The connexions which James had been forming of late with the Roman Catholic Princes, his fecret negociations in England with her subjects, and the maxims by which he governed his own kingdom, all contributed to excite her jealousy. She dreaded some great revolution in Scotland to be approaching, and it was her interest to prevent it. The Earl of Gowrie was one of the most powerful of the Scottish nobles, and descended from ancestors warmly attached to the English interest. He had adopted the same system, and believed the welfare of his country to be inseparably connected with the fubfistence of the alliance between the two kingdoms. During his residence at Paris, he had contracted

Ne con grea as l mar. ces : racy cert and in So datio fome Earl' the il by E ceale howe to hu his au the fu Popil tors, patien urged to mu have Nor d the tw

" W

deavou

contracted an intimate friendship with Sir Henry Neville the Queen's ambassador there, and was recommended by him to his court, as a person of whom great use might be made ". Elizabeth received him, as he passed through England, with distinguished marks of respect and favor. From all these circumstances a suspicion may arise, that the plan of the conspiracy against the King was formed at that time, in concert with her. Such a suspicion prevailed in that age, and from the letters of Nicholson, Elizabeth's agent in Scotland, it appears not to be destitute of foundation. An English ship was observed hovering, for some time, in the mouth of the frith of Forth. The Earl's two younger brothers fled into England after the ill success of the conspiracy, and were protected by Elizabeth. James himfelf, though he prudently concealed it, took great umbrage at her behaviour. None, however, of Elizabeth's intrigues in Scotland tended to hurt the King's person, but only to circumscribe his authority, and to thwart his schemes. His life was the furest safe-guard of her own, and restrained the Popilh pretenders to her Crown, and their abettors, from desperate attempts, to which their impatience and bigotry might, otherwise, urged them on. To have encouraged Gowrie to murder his Sovereign, would, on her part, have been an act of the utmost imprudence. Nor does this feem to have been the intention of the two brothers. Mr. Ruthven, first of all, endeavoured to decoy the King to Perth, without

BOOK VIII. 1600.

VOL III.

nd-

In

me-

hen

fhe

tion

or,

d to ited

rue,

em-

ight

hose

wen,

oth-

pro-

cure

ions

the

ions

s by

ntri-

ome

ing,

Earl

the

ftors had

elfare

with two had ted

[&]quot; Winw. i. 156.

th

cil

to

the

the

Bu

wri

the

pafl

exa

holo

than

the c

and

A

burg

own

the p cumf

felf,

thoug

tranfa

city,

tinued

efteem

the Ki

improl

BOOK VIII.

any attendants. When these proved more numerous than was expected, the Earl employed a stratagem in order to separate them from the King, by pretending that he had rode away towards Falkland, and by calling hastily for their horses, that they might follow him. By their shutting James up, meanwhile, in a distant corner of the house, and by attempting to bind his hands, their defign feems to have been rather to feize, than to affassinate him. Though Gowrie had not collected his followers in such num. bers as to have been able to detain him long a prifoner, in that part of the kingdom, by open force, he might foon have been conveyed aboard the English ship, which waited perhaps to receive him, and he might have been landed at Fast-Castle, a house of Logan's, in which, according to many obscure hints in his letters, fome rendezvous of the conspirators was to be held. Amidst the surprise and terror, into which the King must have been thrown by the violence offered to him, it was extremely natural for him to conclude that his life was fought. It was the interest of all his followers to confirm him in this belief, and to magnify his danger, in order to add to the importance and merit of their own fervices. Thus his fear, and their vanity, aided by the credulity and wonder which the contemplation of any great and tragical event, when not fully understood, is apt to infpire, augmented the whole transaction. On the other hand, the extravagance and improbability of the circumstances which were added, detracted from the credit of those which really happened; and even furnished pretences for calling in question the truth of the whole conspiracy.

us

em

nd-

ind

ght

ile,

ing

een

agh

ım.

pri-

rce,

En-

and

cure

conprife

oeen

ex-

life

low-

gnify

and

and nder

gical

o ina the bility

acted

ened;

The account of what had happened at Perth reached Edinburgh next morning. The privy council commanded the Ministers of that city instantly to affemble their people; and after relating to them the circumstances of the conspiracy formed against the King's life, to return public thanks to God, for the protection which he had so visibly afforded him. But as the first accounts transmitted to Edinburgh, written in a hurry, and while the circumstances of the conspiracy were but imperfectly known, and the passions which it excited strongly felt, were indistinct, exaggerated, and contradictory, the Ministers laid hold of this, and though they offered to give public thanks to God for the King's fafety, they refused to enter into any detail of particulars, or to utter from the chair of truth, what appeared to be still dubious and uncertain.

A few days after, the King returned to Edinburgh; and though Galloway, the Minister of his own chapel, made an harangue to the people at the public cross, in which he recited all the circumstances of the conspiracy; though James himself, in their hearing, confirmed his account; though he commanded a narrative of the whole transaction to be published; the Ministers of that city, as well as many of their Brethren, still continued incredulous and unconvinced. Their high esteem of Gowrie, their jealousy of every part of the King's conduct, added to some salse and many improbable circumstances in the narrative, not

BOOK VIII.

Many difbelieve the account published by the King.

mem

decla

vine

fifth of pu

47 publist

again/

lifhed "Gowr

He fee

himfelf

cal part from the by the F

the two

tifes our fpiracy i expect t

recent, ofperfon

ought to relations

But as e

problema

witneffes circumsta

historical and most count and account,

brealt, " Difc. 17.

dagger o

Henderfor twice fave

BOOK VIII. 1600.

only led them to suspect the whole, but gave their fuspicions an air of credibility. But at length, the King, partly by arguments, partly by threats, prevailed on all of them, except Mr. Robert Bruce, to own that they were convinced of the truth of the conspiracy. He could be brought no further than to declare, that he reverenced the King's account of the transaction, but could not say that he himself was perfuaded of the truth of it. The scruples or obstinacy of a fingle man would have been little regarded; but as the same spirit of incredulity began to spread among the people, the example of one in fo high reputation for integrity and abilities, was extremely dangerous. The King was at the utmost pains to convince and to gain Bruce, but finding it impossible to remove his doubts, he deprived him of his benefice, and after repeated delays, and many attempts towards a reconcilement, banished him the kingdom ".

Proceedings the confpirators.

The proceedings of Parliament were not rement against tarded by any scruples of this fort. The dead bodies of the two brothers were produced there, according to law; an indictment for High Treason was preferred against them; witnesses were examined; and by an unanimous fentence, their estates and honors were forfeited; the punishment due to traitors was inflicted on their dead bodies; and, as if the punishment hitherto in use did not express sufficient detestation of their crimes, the Parliament enacted that the furname of Ruthven should be abolished; and in order to preserve the memory of the King's miraculous escape, and to declare the sense which the nation had of the divine goodness, to all suture ages, appointed the fifth of August to be observed, annually, as a day of public thanksgiving ¹⁷.

^{461, &}amp;c. Cald. v. 389. &c.

BOOK VIII.

47 A few weeks after the death of the two brothers, the King published a discourse of their vile and unnatural conspiracy against bis life. In the year 1713, George Earl of Cromertie published an "Historical account of the conspiracy by the Earl of "Gowrie, and Robert Logan of Restalrig, against King James VI." He feems not to have feen the account which the King himself had given of that matter, and borrows the whole historical part from Spotswood and other authors; but he has extracted from the public records the depositions of the witnesses produced by the King's Council, in order to make good the charge against the two brothers, and Logan their affociate. From thefe two treatiles our knowledge of all the material circumstances of the confpiracy is derived. The evidence which they contain, one would expect to be authentic and decifive. An account of a fact, still recent, published by royal authority, and the original depositions of persons examined in presence of the highest court in the nation, ought to convey a degree of evidence feldom attained in historical relations, and to exclude all remaining doubt and uncertainty. But as every thing with regard to this transaction is dark and problematical, the King's account and the depositions of the witnesses not only vary, but contradict each other in formany circumftances, that much room is still left for hefitation and hiltorical scepticism. The testimony of Henderson is the fullest and most important, but in several particulars the King's account and his are contradictory. I. According to the King's account, while Mr. Ruthven was holding the dagger at his breast, "the fellow in the study stood quaking and trembling." Difc. 17. But Henderson says, that he himself wrested the dagger out of Mr. Ruthven's hands. Disc. 53. Crom. 50. Henderson likewise boasted to his wife, that he had that day mice faved the King from being stabbed. Disc. 54. Crom. 53,

)

1

1

t

t

BOOK
VIII.
1601.
Effex's confpiracy againft Elizabeth.

Though Gowrie's conspiracy occasioned a sudden and a great alarm, it was followed by no consequences of importance; and having been concerted by the two brothers either without any associates,

II. The King afferts that Henderson opened the window during Mr. Ruthven's absence. Disc. 23. Henderson deposes that he was only attempting to open it when Mr. Ruthven returned, and that during the struggle between the King and him, he opened it. Difc. 53, 54. Crom. 51, 52. III. If we may believe the King, the fellow in the study stood, during the struggle. behind the King's back, inactive and trembling all the time, Difc. 27. But Henderson affirms, that he snatched away the garter with which Mr. Ruthven attempted to bind the King; that he pulled back Ruthven's hand, while he was endeavouring to stop the King's mouth, and that he opened the window. Difc. 54. Crom. 52. IV. By the King's account, Mr. Ruthven left him in the study, and went away in order to meet with his brother, and the Earl came up the stairs for the same purpose. Disc. 23. Henderson deposes, that when Mr. Ruthven left the King, "he believes that he did not pass from the door." Crom. 51. It is apparent both from the situation of the house, and from other circumstances, that there could not possibly have been any interview between the brothers at this time. Difc. 23.

Henderson was twice examined, first at Falkland before the privy council in August, and next at Edinburgh before the parliament in November. Not to mention some lesser variations between these depositions, we shall point out two which are remarkable. In his first deposition Mr. Henderson relates the most material circumstance of the whole in these words:

Mr. Ruthven pulled out the deponent's dagger, and held the same to his Majesty's breast, saying, remember you of my father's murder; you shall now die for it, and minting to his Highness's heart, with the dagger, the deponent threw the same out of Mr. Ruthven's hands, and swore that as God shall judge his soul, that if Mr. Ruthven had retained the dagger in his hand, the space a man may go six steps, he would have stricken the King to the

fo, the

" hilts he varie words w while he " must Secondly deter hin " Christ of Mr. Ri had left " must a " remed The mate tion feem murder t he had n testimonie lished by inhabitani fome art confirms council fu riot is stil of the to that they 2. Hender John Mon ing, beca man knoy crief depo George H Scotland . presence.

There

or with fuch as were unknown, and chose to remain so, the danger was over, as soon as discovered. But not long after, a conspiracy broke out in England

e-

d

he

10 ve

e,

e.

10

ng

V.

en

th

1

en

27

٠,

re

10

10

25

re

ne

:

d

24 ld

e-

d

1-

n

10

BOOK VIII.

" hilts with it. " Difc. 52. But at his fecond examination he varied from this in two material circumstances. First, the words which he at that time put in Mr. Ruthven's mouth while he held the dagger at the King's breast are, " Sir, you " must be my prisoner; remember on my father's death." Secondly, when he threatened him with death, it was only to deter him from making any noise. " Hold your tongue, or by "Christ you shall die." 2. In this first deposition, the words of Mr. Ruthven, when he returned to the chamber where he had left the King, are, " There is no remedy, by God you " must die." But in his second deposition, " By God there is no " remedy, and offered to bind his Majesty's hands." Crom. 51. The material words you must die are omitted. The first deposition feems plainly to intimate that it was Ruthven's intention to murder the King. The fecond would lead us to conclude that he had no other design than to detain him as a prisoner.

There are likewise some remarkable contradictions in the tellimonies of the other witnesses. 1. In the discourse published by authority, it is infinuated that the tumult of the inhabitants was raised against the king, and that it required some art to pacify them. Difc. 32. The Duke of Lenox confirms this in his deposition. Crom. 44. An act of privy council fummoning the Magistrates of Perth to answer for that riot is still extant. And yet Andrew Roy, one of the baillies of the town, deposes, that he himself raised the people, and that they took arms in order to affift the King. Crom. 66. 2. Henderson deposes, that he gave an evalive answer to Mr. John Moncrief, who inquired where he had been that morning, because the Earl had commanded him not to let any man know that he had been at Falkland. Difc. 54. Moncrief deposes to the same purpose. Crom. 64. And yet George Hay, afterwards Lord Kinnoul, and Chancellor of Scotland, and Peter Hay, depose, that the Earl, in their presence, asked Henderson, "Whom he found with the against Elizabeth, which, though the first danger was instantly dispelled, produced tragical effects; that rendered the close of that Queen's reign dismal and unhappy. As James was deeply interested in that event, it merits our particular notice.

VIII.

The court of England was at this time divided between two powerful factions, which contended for the supreme direction of affairs. The leader of the one was Robert D'Evreux, Earl of Effex; Sir Robert Cecil, the fon of Lord Treasurer Burleigh, was at the head of the other. The former was the most accomplished and the most popular of all the English nobles; brave, generous, affable; though impetuous, yet willing to liften to the counfels of those whom he loved; an avowed, but not an implacable enemy; a friend no less constant than warm; incapable of disguising his own sentiments, or of misrepresenting those of others; better fitted for a camp than for a court; and of a genius that qualified him for the first place in the administration, with a spirit which scorned the second as below his merit. He was foon distinguished by the Queen, who, with a profusion uncommon to her, conferred on him, even in his earliest youth, the highest honors. Nor did this diminish the esteem and affection of his countrymen; but, by a rare felicity, he was at once the favorite of his Sovereign, and the King at Falkland?" Crom. 70, 71. Which question seems to prove that he did not aim at keeping that journey a secret. In the Collection of Criminal Trials, published by Mr. Amot in 1785, the evidence against the two brothers has been considered with great attention, P. 20, &c.

darling educated deeply ing, incomplete which not rely but avanuable own adhim. The enemies and base peared litary monother control of the co tween the in order of friendship succession close comprincipal alone, rothis service the reward impetu of a Mistre toward him who confidence.

more ne

As El

Modely. H Malicious him at a d 19

S;

al

ın

ed

ed

he

Sir

h, oft

ih

us,

m у;

of

ng

ra rst

ch

725

-01

en

or his at

he

mg

ret.

not

een

darling of the people. Cecil, on the other hand, educated in a court, and trained under a father deeply skilled in all its arts, was crafty, infinuating, industrious; and though possessed of talents which sitted him for the highest offices, he did not rely upon his merit alone for attaining them, but availed himself of every advantage, which his own address, or the mistakes of others, afforded him. Two such men were formed to be rivals and enemies. Essex despised the arts of Cecil as low and base. To Cecil, the Earl's magnanimity appeared to be presumption and folly. All the military men, except Raleigh, savored Essex. Most of the courtiers adhered to Cecil, whose manners more nearly resembled their own.

As Elizabeth advanced in years, the struggle between these factions became more violent. Essex, in order to strengthen himself, had early courted the friendship of the King of Scots, for whose right of fuccession he was a zealous advocate, and held a close correspondence both with him and with his principal Ministers. Cecil, devoted to the Queen alone, rose daily to new honors by the affiduity of his services, and the patience with which he expected the reward of them; while the Earl's high spirit and mpetuofity fometimes exposed him to checks from a Mistress, who, though partial in her affection toward him, could not eafily bear contradiction, and who conferred favors often unwillingly, and always flowly. His own folicitations, however, feconded maliciously by his enemies, who wished to remove him at a distance from court, advanced him to the command of the army employed in Ireland against Tyronne, and to the office of Lord Lieutenant of that kingdom, with a commission almost unlimited. His success in that expedition did not equal either his own promises, or the expectations of Elizabeth. The Queen, peevish from her difappointment, and exasperated against Essex by the artifices of his enemies, wrote him a barsh letter, full of accusations and reproaches. These his impatient fpirit could not bear, and, in the first transports of his refentment, he proposed to carry over a part of his army into England, and, by driving his enemies from the Queen's presence, to reinstate himself in favor and in power. But upon more mature thoughts he abandoned this rash design, and, setting sail with a few officers devoted to his person, landed in England, and posted directly to court. Elizabeth received him without any fymptom either of affection or of displeasure. By proper compliances and acknowledgments, he might have regained his former afcendant over the Queen. But he thought himself too deeply injured to submit to these. Elizabeth, on the other hand, determined to subdue his haughty temper; and though her feverity drew from him the most humble letters, she confined him to the Lord Keeper's house, and appointed commissioners to try him, both for his conduct during his government of Ireland, and for leaving that kingdom without her permission. By their fentence, he was suspended from all his offices, except that of Master of the horse, and continued a prisoner during the Queen's pleasure. Satisfied with I after a thefe 1 Effex his So fometi other. prevail encour fucceffi belides Englan Ireland that kin lofing a obtain it. Mo Effex ac of ambi

BOOK VIII.

His correfpondence with the Scottish King. VIII.

This in difgust a nuance; to renew bestower fence, this impatien despair or restra their imp

anxious his mind

f

.

1

of

e

11

it

ıf

25

n

ts

in

h

of

es is

nt

e.

ie

W

d

d

a

11

X.

d

ed

with having mortified his pride thus far, Elizabeth did not fuffer the sentence to be recorded, and soon after allowed him to retire to his own house. During these transactions, which occupied several months, Effex fluctuated between the allegiance he owed to his Sovereign, and the defire of revenge; and fometimes leaned to the one, and fometimes to the other. In one of the intervals when the latter prevailed, he fent a messenger into Scotland, to encourage the King to affert his own right to the succession by force of arms, and to promise that, besides the assistance of the Earl and all his friends in England, Lord Mountjoy, now Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, would join him with five thousand men from that kingdom. But James did not chuse to hazard the losing a kingdom, of which he was just about to obtain possession, by a premature attempt to seize it. Mountjoy, too, declined the enterprise, and Effex adopted more dutiful schemes; all thoughts of ambition appearing to be totally effaced out of his mind.

B O O K VIII.

James's cautious conduct.

This moderation, which was merely the effect of disgust and disappointment, was not of long continuance; and the Queen, having not only resused to renew a lucrative grant which she had formerly bestowed, but even to admit him into her presence, that new injury drove a temper, naturally impatient, and now much fretted, to absolute despair. His friends, instead of soothing his rage, or restraining his impetuosity, added to both by their imprudent and interested zeal. After many anxious consultations, he determined to attempt to redress his wrongs by violence. But being confcious how unpopular fuch an enterprife would be, if it appeared to proceed from motives of private revenge alone, he endeavoured to give it the femblance of public utility, by mingling the King of Scotland's interest with his own. He wrote to James, that the faction which now predominated in the English court had refolved to support the pretensions of the Infanta of Spain to the crown; that the places of the greatest importance in the kingdom were put into the hands of his avowed enemies; and that unless he sent ambas. fadors, without delay, to infift on the immediate declaration of his right of succession, their measures were so well concerted, that all his hopes would be desperate. James, who knew how disagreeable such a proposal would be to the Queen of England, was not willing rashly to expose himself to her displeafure. Essex nevertheless, blinded by resentment, and impatient for revenge, abandoned himself to these passions, and acted like a man guided by frenzy or despair. With two or three hundred followers in completely armed, he attempted to affault a throne the best established in Europe. Sallying at their head out of his own house, he called on the citizens of London, if they either valued his life, or wished to preserve the kingdom from the dominion of the Spaniards, to take arms, and to follow his standard. He advanced towards the palace with an intention to drive Cecil and his faction out of the Queen's presence, and to obtain a declaration of the Scottish King's right of succession ". But, though almost adored by the squis Birch. Mem. ii. 477. ad . anoint idnos anoints enterp by fon by the differe own h to his reputa As f appoin citizer

The wild attempts of Effex.

BOOK VIII. .160I.

Kinlofs of Eng whole with th Earl's thing t united to feco pole of choice to folic life, an his frier contribu lay afide put him to him fadors o the pun

" Johr

Perhaps

on-

, if

re-

nce

nd's

the

urt

nta test

nds oaf-

ate

ires

be

ich

was ea-

nt,

to

ZY

in•

ne

ead

of

to

the

rd.

to

ce,

ght

he

citizens, not a man would join him in this wild enterprise. Dispirited by their indifference, deserted by some of his own attendants, and almost surrounded by the troops, which marched against him under different leaders into the city, he retreated to his own house; and without any bold effort, suitable to his present condition, or worthy of his former reputation for courage, he surrendered to his enemies.

As foon as James heard of Effex's ill fuccefs, he appointed the Earl of Mar, and Bruce, Abbot of Kinloss, to repair as his Ambassadors to the Court of England. The former of these was the person by whose means Essex had carried on his correspondence with the King. He was a passionate admirer of the Earl's character, and disposed to attempt every thing that could contribute to his fafety. Bruce, united in a close friendship with Mar, was ready to fecond him with equal zeal. Nor was the purpose of the embassy less friendly to Essex, than the choice of his Ambassadors; they were commanded to folicit, in the warmest manner, for the Earl's life, and if they found that the King, by avowing his friends, could either promote their designs, or contribute to their fafety, they were empowered to lay aside all disguise, and to promise that he would put himself at their head, and claim what was due to him by force of arms ". But before the Ambasfadors could reach London, Essex had suffered the punishment which he merited by his treason. Perhaps the fear of their interpoling, in order to care;

BOOK VIII. 1601.

His death.

[&]quot; Johnst. 289. Birch. Mem. ii. 510.

name,

confpi

King's

blema

Crown

to the

congra

all pot

order t

of uni

fublidy

fadors

emplo

extend entered

advanc

more a

to prev

future

feffions

offered

Cecil

founde

and w it, tho

distance

come l

time h

prove, whose j he ente

BOOK VIII.

1601.

obtain his pardon, hastened his death. Elizabeth continued, for some time, irresolute concerning his fate, and could not bring herself to confign into the hands of the executioner, a man who had once possessed her favor so entirely, without a painful ftruggle between her resentment against his late misconduct, and her ancient affection towards him. The distress to which he was now reduced, tended naturally to foften the former, while it revived the latter with new tenderness; and the intercession of one faithful friend, who had interest with the Queen, might perhaps have faved his life, and have procured him a remission, which, of herself, she was ashamed to grant. But this generous no. bleman had at that time no fuch friend. Elizabeth, folicited incessantly by her Ministers, and offended with the haughtiness of Essex, who, as she imagined, scorned to sue for pardon, at last commanded the fentence to be put in execution. No sooner was the blow struck, than she repented of her own rashness, and bewailed his death with the deepelt forrow. James always confidered him as one who had fallen a martyr to his fervice, and after his accession to the English throne, restored his son to his honors, as well as all his affociates in the conspiracy, and distinguished them with his favor ".

James continues his intrigues in England. The Scottish Ambassadors, finding that they had arrived too late to execute the chief business committed to their charge, not only concealed that part of their instructions with the utmost ¹º Camd. Spotsw. 464.

eth

his

nto

nce

ful

ate

im.

ded

ved

ion

the

and

felf,

no-

eth,

ded

ed,

the

was

own pest

vho

his

n to

con-

50 hey

nels

aled

nof

care; but congratulated the Queen, in their Master's name, on her happy escape from such an audacious conspiracy. Elizabeth, though no stranger to the King's correspondence with Essex, or to that nobleman's intentions of afferting James's right to the Crown, was not willing that thefe should be known to the people, and, for that reason, received the congratulations of the Scottish Ambassadors with all possible marks of credit and good will; and in order to footh James, and to preferve the appearances of union between the two courts, increased the subsidy which she paid him annually. The Ambasfadors refided for some time in England, and were employed, with great fuccess, in renewing and extending the intrigues, which Bruce had formerly entered into with the English nobles. As Elizabeth advanced in years, the English turned their eyes more and more towards Scotland, and were eager to prevent each other in courting the favor of their future Monarch. Affurances of attachment, professions of regard, and promises of support, were offered to James from every corner of the kingdom. Cecil himself, perceiving what hopes Essex had founded on the friendship of the Scottish King, and what advantages he might have derived from it, thought it prudent to stand no longer at a distance from a Prince, who might so soon become his master. But being sensible at the same time how dangerous fuch an intercourse might prove, under a Mistress naturally jealous, and whole jealoufy grew stronger with old age; though he entered into a correspondence with him, he car-

BOOK VIII.

No

politi

freque

into h

tranqu

enemy

long

endear

Ifles,

by for it was

long | tunity

derers

often

to the

Count

arms,

But t

pine, by the

licitous

render

times

ducive

Clans,

fide in furety

quired

" Basi

BOOK VIII.

ried it on with all the fecrecy and caution necessary in his fituation, and peculiar to his character'. James hav. ing gained the man whose opposition and influence he had hitherto chiefly dreaded, waited, in perfect fecurity, till that event should happen, which would open his way to the throne of England ". It was with some difficulty that he restrained within proper bounds his adherents in that kingdom, who, laboring to distinguish themselves by that officious zeal, with which a Prince, who has a near prospect of mounting the throne, is always ferved, urged him to allow a motion to be made in Parliament for declaring his right of fuccession to the Crown. James prudently discouraged that design; but it was with no small satisfaction that he observed the ascendant he was acquiring in a court, the dictates of which he had been folong obliged to obey; and which had either prescribed or thwarted every step he had taken during the whole course of his reign ".

53 Spotsw. 467. 471. Birch. Mem. ii. 514.

See Appendix, No. 1.

fome account of the mysterious mode in which this correspondence was carried on, and how the letters were conveyed from London to Dublin, and from thence to Scotland. Notwithstanding the solicitude which Cecil repeatedly discovers, that his letters should be destroyed as soon as the King had read them, a considerable number of them has been preserved, and published by Sir David Dalrymple in the year 1-66. They were written by Lord Henry Howard, under the inspection of Cecil, in a style affectedly obscure. The whole correspondence is more curious than instructive.

Notwithstanding.

in

av-

nce

ect

uld

rith

per

or-

eal,

of

to

ing

tly

nall

ac-

een

pre-

ing

iven

orreeyed

Not-

vers.

had

pre-

the

vard.

tive.

g

Notwithstanding the violent struggles of the political factions which divided the court, and the frequent revolutions which had happened there, fince the King first took the reins of government into his own hands, Scotland had enjoyed unusual tranquillity, being undisturbed by any foreign enemy, and free from any intestine commotion of long continuance. During this period, James endeavoured to civilize the Highlands and the liles, a part of his dominions too much neglected by former Monarchs, though the reformation of it was an object highly worthy of their care. The long peace with England had afforded an opportunity of fubduing the licentious spirit of the borderers, and of restraining their depredations, often no less ruinous to their countrymen than to their enemies. The inhabitants of the Low Country began, gradually, to forget the use of arms, and to become attentive to the arts of peace. But the Highlanders, retaining their natural fierceness, averse from labor, and inured to rapine, infested their more industrious, neighbours by their continual incursions. James, being folicitous, not only to repress their inroads, but to render them useful subjects ", had at different times enacted many wife laws extremely conducive to these ends. All landlords, or chiefs of Clans, were enjoined to permit no persons to reside in their estates, who could not find sufficient surety for their good behaviour; they were required to make a list of all suspicious persons

BOOK

Attempts to civilize the Highlanders.

"Basil. Dor. 139. Vol. III.

G

BOOK VIII. 1602.4 under their jurisdiction, to bind themselves to deliver them to justice, and to indemnify those who should fuffer by their robberies; and, in order to ascertain the faithful performance of these articles, the chiefs them. felves were obliged to give hostages to the King, or to put pledges in his hands. Three towns, which might ferve as a retreat for the industrious, and a nursery for arts and commerce, were appointed to be built in different parts of the Highlands; one in Cantire, another in Lochaber, and a third in the isle of Lewis; and in order to draw inhabitants thither, all the privileges of Royal Boroughs were to be conferred upon them. Finding it, however, to be no easy matter to inspire the inhabitants of those countries with the love of industry, a resolution was taken to plant among them colonies of people from the more industrious counties. The first experiment was made in the isle of Lewis; and as it was advantageously situated for the fishing-trade, a source from which Scotland ought naturally to derive great wealth, the colony transported thither was drawn out of Fife, the natives of which were well skilled in that branch of commerce. But before they had remained there long enough to manifest the good effects of this institution, the islanders, enraged at feeing their country occupied by those intruders, took arms, and furprifing them in the night-time murdered some of them, and compelled the ref to abandon the fettlement. The King's attention being foon after turned to other objects, we hear no more of this falutary project. Though James did n cation

poffibl ple, h
first cc pointed civil a Afte
the effi
of unco began to be s

Richm

compla

pulse w

Her dil

choly,

behavio

No f than po and pa King o fessions miles of some o nefits,

length

to get r

rer

ld

he

mto

ht

for

in

re,

of

er,

to

er,

bit-

ry,

CO-

oun-

ifle

ated

cot-

the

ife,

that

re-

rood

aged

lers.

ime

rel

ntion

hear

did not pursue the design with that steady application and perseverance, without which it is impossible to change the manners of a whole people, he had the glory, however, not only of having first conceived the thoughts, but of having first pointed out the proper method of introducing the civil arts of life into that part of the island. 55.

After having long enjoyed a good state of health, the effect of a sound constitution, and the reward of uncommon regularity and temperance, Elizabeth began this winter to feel her vigor decrease, and to be sensible of the infirmities of old age. Having removed on a very stormy day from Westminster to Richmond, whither she was impatient to retire, her complaints increased. She had no formed sever; her pulse was good; but she ate little, and could not sleep. Her distemper seemed to proceed from a deep melancholy, which appeared both in her countenance and behaviour. She delighted in solitude, she sat constantly in the dark; and was often drowned in tears.

No fooner was the Queen's indisposition known, than persons of all ranks, and of all different sects and parties, redoubled their applications to the King of Scots, and vied with each other in professions of attachment to his person, and in professes of submission to his government. Even some of Elizabeth's own servants, weary of the length of her reign, fond of novelty, impatient to get rid of the burden of gratitude for past benefits, and expecting to share in the liberality of

B O O K VIII.

Elizabeth's last illness and death.

1603. January 31.

[&]quot;Parl. 1587. 1594. 1597. Spotfw. 468.

could

her cl

fenter

don II

fcribe

of his

in any

ken, it

Scroop

to pre

hands

commi

fex's m

tocarry

Earl. T

begged

now far how u flinacy.

can; " a

57 Thi

Osborne,

of de Mau

Lady Eliz

Camden r

the causes which pro

Birch. Me

two years

other reass

of time.

BOOK VIII. 1603. a new Prince, began to desert her. And crowds of people hurried towards Scotland, eager to preoccupy the favor of the successor, or afraid of being too late in paying homage to him.

Meanwhile, the Queen's disease increased, and her melancholy appeared to be fettled and incurable, Various conjectures were formed concerning the causes of a disorder, from which she seemed to be exempted by the natural cheerfulness of her temper. Some imputed it to her being forced, contrary to her inclination, to pardon the Earl of Tyronne, whole rebellion had for many years created her much trouble. Others imagined that it arose from observing the ingratitude of her courtiers, and the levity of her people, who beheld her health declining with most indecent indifference, and looked forward to the accession of the Scottish King, with an impatience which they could not conceal. The most common opinion, at that time, and perhaps the most probable, was, that it flowed from grief for the Earl of Essex. She retained an extraordinary regard for the memory of that unfortunate nobleman; and though she often complained of his obstinacy, seldom mentioned his name without tears ". An accident happened soon after her retiring to Richmond, which revived her affection with new tenderness, and embittered her forrows. The Countess of Nottingham, being on her death bed, desired to see the Queen, in order to revea fomething to her, without discovering which, she ⁵⁶ Birch. Mem. ii. 505.

ds

re-

of

ner ole.

he

be er.

her

ofe

ou-

the

her

oft

the

pa-

nost

the

for

ble-

his

out

re-

tion

WS.

ath

vea

fhe

could not die in peace. When the Queen came into her chamber, she told her, that while Effex lay under fentence of death, he was defirous of imploring pardon in the manner which the Queen herself had preferibed, by returning a ring, which during the height of his favor she had given him, with a promife that if, in any future distress, he fent that back to her as a token, it should entitle him to her protection; that Lady Scroop was the person he intended to employ in order to present it; that, by a mistake, it was put into her hands instead of Lady Scroop's; and that she having communicated the matter to her husband, one of Effex's most implacable enemies, he had forbid her either to carry the ring to the Queen, or to return it to the Earl. The Countess, having thus disclosed her secret, begged the Queen's forgiveness; but Elizabeth, who how faw both the malice of the Earl's enemies, and how unjustly she had suspected him of inflexible obstinacy, replied, "God may forgive you, but I never can;" and left the room in great emotion ". From that

BOOK VIII. 1603

This anecdote concerning Elizabeth was first published by Osborne, Mem. of Eliz. p. 23; is confirmed by the testimony of de Maurier, Mem. 260, and by the traditional evidence of Lady Elizabeth Spelman published by Dr. Birch, Negoc. 106. Camden mentions the Queen's grief for Essex's death as one of the causes of her melancholy. Some original papers remain which prove that this was commonly believed at the time. Birch. Mem. ii. 506. Essex, however, had been beheaded two years before her death, and there seems to have been no other reason, but that which we have assigned, why her sorrows should revive with so much violence at so great a distance of time. As the death of the Counters of Nottingham hap.

they to

The n

tioned

warmt

bleffing

of Eliz

of that people

her stea

of her

the tra

the inc

which her am

the del

not of ceffive

love of great u

her adn

many b

or mor

flowner

courage

defervi

which

of thos

right to

tions,

to her

people.

BOOK VIII.

moment, her spirit sunk entirely; she could scarce taste food; she refused all the medicines prescribed by her physicians; declaring that she wished to die, and would live no longer. No entreaty could prevail on her to go to bed; she sat on cushions, during ten days and nights, pensive and filent, holding her finger almost continually in her mouth, with her eyes open, and fixed on the ground. The only thing to which she seemed to give any attention, were the acts of devotion performed in her apartment by the Arch. bishop of Canterbury; and in these she joined with great appearance of fervor. Wasted, at last, as well by anguish of mind, as by long abstinence, she expired, without a struggle, on Thursday the twenty-fourth day of March, in the seventie th year of her age, and in the forty-fifth of her reign".

Her cha-

Foreigners often accuse the English of indisference and disrespect towards their Princes. But without reason; no people are more grateful than pene'd about a fortnight before the Queen's death, the coincidence of these events, together with the other evidence mentioned, adds so much probability to the story related by Osborne, as will entitle it to a place in history. The only objection to the account we have given of Elizabeth's attachment to Essex, arises from her great age. At the age of 68, the amorous passions are commonly abundantly cool, and the violence of all the passions, except one, is much abated. But the force of this objection is entirely removed by an author who has illustrated many passages in the English History, and adorned more. Catalogue of Royal and Noble Authors, Article Essex.

Strype, iv. 373.

rce

by

nd

on ays

al-

en, ich

of

ch-

ith

rell

she

the

ear

58 dif.

But

an

en-

06 ob-

ent the

But

100

rs,

6.

they to those Monarchs who merit their gratitude. The names of Edward III. and Henry V. are mentioned by the English of this age with the same warmth as they were by those who shared in the bleffings and splendor of their reigns. The memory of Elizabeth is still adored in England. The historians of that kingdom, after celebrating her love of her people; her fagacity in differning their true interest; her steadiness in pursuing it; her wisdom in the choice of her Ministers; the glory she acquired by arms; the tranquillity she secured to her subjects; and the increase of fame, of riches, and of commerce, which were the fruits of all thefe; justly rank her among the most illustrious Princes. Even the defects in her character, they observe, were not of a kind pernicious to her people. Her excessive frugality was not accompanied with the love of hoarding; and though it prevented fome great undertakings, and rendered the success of others incomplete, it introduced acconomy into her administration, and exempted the nation from many burdens, which a Monarch, more profuse or more enterprising, must have imposed. Her flowness in rewarding her servants sometimes discouraged useful merit; but it prevented the undeferving from acquiring power and wealth, to which they had no title. Her extreme jealouly of those Princes who pretended to dispute her right to the Crown, led her to take fuch precautions, as tended no less to the public safety, than to her own; and to court the affections of her people, as the firmest support of her throne.

BOOK VIII, 1603.

Cro

her

wish

had ,

Scot

was

the b ferve

Adm

that and i

her fu

As fo

Privy

All th

kingd

the I

hostili

domir with acceffi

tumul

who p fuccess fome

throne

it, ad

Sir Ch

umber

Worce

BOOK Such is the picture which the English draw of this VIII. great Queen.

1603.

Whoever undertakes to write the History of Scotland, finds himself obliged, frequently, to view her in a very different, and in a less amiable light. Her authority in that kingdom, during the greater part of her reign, was little inferior to that which the possessed in her own. But this authority, acquired at first by a service of great importance to the nation, the exercifed in a manner extremely pernicious to its happiness. By her industry in fomenting the rage of the two contending factions; by supplying the one with partial aid; by feeding the other with false hopes; by balancing their power so artfully, that each of them was able to diffress, and neither of them to subdue the other; the rendered Scotland long the feat of difcord, confusion, and bloodshed: and her craft and intrigues, effecting what the valor of her ancestors could not accomplish, reduced that kingdom to a state of dependance on England. The maxims of policy, often little confonant to those of morality, may, perhaps, justify this conduct. But no apology can be offered for her behaviour to Queen Mary; a scene of diffimulation without necessity; and of severity beyond example. In almost all her other actions, Elizabeth is the object of our highest admiration; in this we must allow that she not only laid aside the magnanimity which became a Queen, but the feelings natural to a woman.

James proelaimed King of England. Though Elizabeth would never permit the question concerning the right of succession to the

nis

of TY.

nt.

er

ch

ed

n,

to

ge

he

th

у,

er

nd

d:

he

ed

g-

0-uf.

ed

of

ty

s,

n;

de

he

he

he

Crown to be determined in parliament; nor declare her own fentiments concerning a point which she wished to remain an impenetrable mystery; she had, however, formed no defign of excluding the Scottish King from an inheritance to which his title was undoubted. A short time before her death. he broke the filence which she had so long preferved on that subject, and told Cecil and the Lord Admiral, "That her throne was the throne of Kings; that she would have no mean person to ascend it, and that her cousin the King of Scots should be her successor." This she confirmed on her death-bed. As foon as the breathed her last, the lords of the Privy Council proclaimed James King of England. All the intrigues carried on by foreigners in favor of the Infanta, all the cabals formed within the kingdom to support the titles of Lady Arabella and the Earl of Hartford, disappeared in a moment; the nobles, and people, forgetting their ancient hostilities with Scotland, and their aversion for the dominion of strangers, testified their fatisfaction with louder acclamations than were usual at the accession of their native princes. Amidst this tumult of joy, a motion made by a few patriots, who proposed to prescribe some conditions to the luccellor, and to exact from him the redress of some grievances, before they called him to the throne, was scarcely heard; and Cecil, by stifling it, added to his stock of merit with his new master. Sir Charles Percy, brother of the Earl of Northumberland, and Thomas Somerset, the Earl of Worcester's son, were dispatched to Scotland, with a letter to the King, figned by all the Peers and Privy Counfellors then in London; informing him of the Queen's death, of his accession to the throne, of their care to recognize his title, and of the universal applause with which the public proclamation of it had been attended. They made the utmost haste to deliver this welcome message; but were prevented by the zeal of Sir Robert Carey. Lord Hunsdon's youngest son, who setting out a few hours after Elizabeth's death, arrived at Edin. burgh on Saturday night, just as the King had gone to bed. He was immediately admitted into the royal apartment, and kneeling by the King's bed, acquainted him with the death of Elizabeth, faluted him king of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, and as a token of the truth of the intelligence which he brought, presented him a ring, which his fifter Lady Scroop had taken from the Queen's finger after her death. James heard him with a decent composure. But as Carey was only a private messenger, the information which he brought was not made public, and the King kept his apartment till the arrival of Percy and Somerfet. Then his titles were folemnly proclaimed; and his own subjects expressed no less joy, than the English, at this increase of his dignity. As his presence was absolutely necessary in England, where the people were extremely impatient to fee their new Sovereign, he prepared to fet out for that kingdom without delay. He appointed his Queen to follow him within a few weeks. He committed the government of Scotland to his Privy Council.

BOOK VIII. 1603. BOOK

VIII.

1603.

He noble repai a feri ness thron tion grati pinel up,a profe prom that fence no le ftill t petiti rupte thoug melte On

and 1

a fple day h menfe and t throu wealt for h

" S

He intrusted the care of his children to different noblemen. On the Sunday before his departure, he repaired to the church of St. Giles, and after hearing aseimon, in which the preacher displayed the greatness of the divine goodness in raising him to the throne of fuch a powerful kingdom without opposition or bloodshed, and exhorted him to express his gratitude, by promoting, to the utmost, the happiness and prosperity of his subjects; the King rose up, and addressing himself to the people, made many professions of unalterable affection towards them; promifed frequently to visit Scotland; assured them that his Scottish subjects, notwithstanding his absence, should feel that he was their native Prince, no less than when he resided among them; and might fill trust that his ears should be always open to their petitions, which he would answer with the alacrity and love of a parent. His words were often interrupted by the tears of the whole audience; who, though they exulted at the King's prosperity, were melted into forrow by these tender declarations ". On the fifth of April he began his journey, with a splendid, but not a numerous train; and next day he entered Berwick. Wherever he came, immenie multitudes were assembled to welcome him; and the principal persons in the different counties through which he passed, displayed all their wealth and magnificence in entertainments prepared for him at their houses. Elizabeth had reigned so long in England, that most of her subjects

BOOK VIII. 1603.

Takes polfession of the throne.

nd

ım

ne,

the

la-

he

out

y, t a

innad

nto

g's

th,

ce,

the

1 a

om

min

nly

he

ept

fet.

his

ish,

nce

the

ew

om

fol-

icil.

[&]quot; Spotfw. 476.

1

as n

full

bein

the

ener

Prin

in th

able

obv

rejo

if it

hone

how

from

polit

verte

their

prog

force

grad

noble

every

the a

weal

rever

and

exerc

He v

the 1:

to ex

T

BOOK VIII. 1603.

remembered no other court but hers; and their notions of the manners and decorums fuitable to a prince were formed upon what they had observed there. It was natural to apply this standard to the behaviour and actions of their new Monarch. and to compare him, at first fight, with the Queen, on whose throne he was to be placed. James, whose manners were extremely different from hers, suffered by the comparison. He had not that flowing affability, by which Elizabeth captivated the hearts of her people; and, though easy among a few whom he loved, his indolence could not bear the fatigue of rendering himself agreeable to a mixed multitude. He was no less a Aranger to that dignity with which Elizabeth tempered her familiarity. And, instead of that well-judged frugality with which the conferred titles of honor, he bestowed them with an undistinguishing profusion, that rendered them no longer marks of distinction, or rewards of ment. But these were the reflections of the few alone; the multitude continued their acclamations; and, amidst these, James entered London on the 7th of May, and took peaceable possession of the throne of England.

Conclusion.

Thus were united two kingdoms, divided from the earliest accounts of time, but destined, by their situation, to form one great monarchy. By this junction of its whole native force, Great Britain hath risen to an eminence and authority in Europe, which England and Scotland could never have attained.

eir

to

red

to

h,

n,

es,

m ot

p-ſy

ld

e-

a

th

at

ed

n.

10

it.

e;

ł,

th

ne

m ir

By

11-

in

ld

The Scots had so long considered their monarchs as next heirs to the English throne, that they had full leisure to reflect on all the consequences of their being advanced to that dignity. But, dazzled with the glory of giving a Sovereign to their powerful enemy, relying on the partiality of their native Prince, and in full expectation of sharing liberally in the wealth and honors which he would now be able to bestow, they attended little to the most obvious consequences of that great event, and rejoiced at his accession to the throne of England, as if it had been no less beneficial to the kingdom, than honorable to the King. They foon had reason, however, to adopt very different fentiments; and from that period we may date a total alteration in the political constitution of Scotland.

The feudal Aristocracy, which had been subverted in most nations of Europe by the policy of their Princes, or had been undermined by the progress of commerce, still subsisted with full force in Scotland. Many causes had contributed gradually to augment the power of the Scottish nobles; and even the Reformation, which in every other country where it prevailed added to the authority of the Monarch, had increased their wealth and influence. A King possessed of a small revenue, with a prerogative extremely limited, and unsupported by a standing army, could not exercise much authority over such potent subjects. He was obliged to govern by expedients; and the laws derived their force not from his power to execute them, but from the voluntary submifBOOK
VIII.
A view of the Revolutions in the constitution of lutions in the conftitution of Scotland fince the accession of James VI. BOOK VIII.

fion of the nobles. But though this produced a species of government extremely feeble and ir. regular; though Scotland, under the name, and with all the outward enfigns of a monarchy, was really subject to an Aristocracy, the people were not altogether unhappy; and even in this wild form of a constitution, there were principles, which tended to their fecurity and advantage. The King, checked and overawed by the nobles, durst venture upon no act of arbitrary power. The nobles, jealous of the King, whose claims and pretentions were many, though his power was small, were afraid of irritating their dependants by unreasonable exactions, and tempered the rigor of aristocratical tyranny, with a mildness and equality to which it is naturally a ftranger. As long as the military genius of the feudal government remained in vigor, the vaffals both of the Crown and of the Barons were generally not only free from oppression, but were courted by their superiors, whose power and importance were founded on their attachment and love.

But, by his accession to the throne of England, James acquired such an immense accession of wealth, of power, and of splendor, that the nobles, astonished and intimidated, thought it vain to struggle for privileges which they were now unable to defend. Nor was it from sear alone that they submitted to the yoke; James, partial to his countrymen, and willing that they should partake in his good fortune, loaded them with riches and honors; and the hope of his favor concurred with the dread of his power, in taming the E and t most form with King prifd right hands milita being remai which their upon the n neigh who woul move of the was p most at on the o fuffer

forms

its no

groan

one e

Du

their da

Ir-

ind

was ere

rm

led

ced

no

the

ıy,

ing

ind

ha y a dal

of

not

by

nce

ng.

ion

the

ain

OW

one

tial

uld

rith

vor

ing

their fierce and independent spirits. The will of the Prince became the supreme law in Scotland; and the nobles strove, with emulation, who should most implicitly obey commands, which they had formerly been accustomed to contemn. Satisfied with having subjected the nobles to the Crown, the King left them in full possession of their ancient jurisdiction over their own vassals. The extensive rights, vested in a feudal Chief, became in their hands dreadful instruments of oppression, and the military ideas, on which these rights were founded, being gradually loft or difregarded, nothing remained to correct or to mitigate the rigor with which they were exercised. The nobles, exhausting their fortunes by the expense of frequent attendance upon the English court, and by attempts to imitate the manners and luxury of their more wealthy neighbours, multiplied exactions upon the people, who durst hardly utter complaints which they knew would never reach the ear of their Sovereign, nor move him to grant them any redrefs. From the union of the Crowns to the revolution in 1688, Scotland was placed in a political fituation, of all others the most singular, and the most unhappy; subjected at once to the absolute will of a Monarch, and to the oppressive jurisdiction of an Aristocracy, it luffered all the miseries peculiar to both these forms of government. Its Kings were despotic; its nobles were flaves and tyrants; and the people groaned under the rigorous domination of both. During this period, the nobles, it is true, made one effort to shake off the yoke, and to regain their

BOOK VIII.

BOOK VIII. ancient independency. After the death of James, the Scottish nation was no longer viewed by our Monarchs with any partial affection. Charles I. educated among the English, discovered no peculiar attachment to the kingdom of which he was a native. The nobles, perceiving the sceptre to be now in hands less friendly, and swayed by a Prince with whom they had little connexion, and over whose councils they had little influence, no longer submitted with the same implicit obedience. Provoked by some encroachments of the King on their order, and apprehensive of others, the remains of their ancient spirit began to appear. They complained and remonstrated. The people being, at the same time, violently disgusted at the innovations in religion, the nobles fecretly heightened this difgust; and their artifices, together with the ill-conduct of the court, raifed fuch a spirit, that the whole nation took arms against their Sovereign, with an union and animofity of which there had formerly been no example. Charles brought against them the forces of England, and notwithstanding their own union, and the zeal of the people, the nobles must have sunk in the struggle. But the disaffection which was growing among his English subjects, prevented the King from acting with vigor. A civil war broke out in both kingdoms; and after many battles and revolutions, which are well known, the Scottish nobles, who first began the war, were involved in the same ruin with the throne. At the Restoration, Charles II. regained full possession of the royal prerogative in Scotland; or they willing During dictar land to we derect tyran ed, with the state of the sta

land

and those Th the g thorit the no of ou ever 1 Atten welfar liberti reprefe acquir ment. greater to for industr fpirit :

many

and ha

Vo

es;

our s I.

pe-

was.

be !

ince

ver

nger

Pro-

s of

t the

ions

dif-

duct

hole

h an

erly

hem

their

obles

ction

ects,

r. A

after

well

1 the n the gain-

Scot-

nd;

hand; and the nobles, whose estates were wasted, or their spirit broken, by the calamities to which they had been exposed, were less able and less willing than ever to resist the power of the Crown. During his reign, and that of James VII. the dictates of the Monarch were received in Scotland with most abject submission. The poverty to which many of the nobles were reduced, rendered them meaner slaves, and more intolerable tyrants, than ever. The people, always neglected, were now odious, and loaded with every injury, on account of their attachment to religious and political principles, extremely repugnant to those adopted by their Princes.

The Revolution introduced other maxims into the government of Scotland. To increase the authority of the Prince, or to fecure the privileges of the nobles, had hitherto been almost the sole object of our laws. The rights of the people were hardly ever mentioned, were difregarded, or unknown. Attention began, henceforward, to be paid to the welfare of the people. By the claim of right, their liberties were fecured'; and the number of their representatives being increased, they gradually acquired new weight and confideration in parliament. As they came to enjoy more fecurity and greater power, their minds began to open, and to form more extensive plans of commerce, of industry, and of police. But the aristocratical spirit which still predominated, together with many other accidents, retarded the improvement and happiness of the nation.

Vol. III.

BOOK VIII.

tion

out

form

diff

tive

thei

Sco

insta

exer

men

refif

arist

with

Scot

emin

felve

and

Com

and :

into

patio

purch

must

in the

in th

which revolu

ting t

But th

pre-en

BOOK.

Another great event completed what the Revolution had begun. The political power of the nobles, already broken by the union of the two Crowns, was almost annihilated by the union of the two kingdoms. Instead of making a part, as formerly, of the supreme affembly of the nation, instead of bearing the most considerable sway there, the Peers of Scotland are admitted into the British parliament by their representatives only, and form but an inconfiderable part of one of those bodies in which the legis. lative authority is vested. They themselves are excluded absolutely from the house of Commons, and even their eldest sons are not permitted to represent their countrymen in that august assembly. Nor have their feudal privileges remained, to compensate for this extinction of their political authority. As commerce advanced in its progress, and government attained nearer to perfection, these were insensibly circumscribed, and at last, by laws no less falutary to the public, than fatal to the nobles, they have almost totally abolished. As the nobles were deprived of power, the people acquired liberty. Exempted from burdens, to which they were formerly subject, screened from oppression, to which they had been long exposed, and adopted into a constitution whose genius and laws were more liberal than their own, they have extended their commerce, refined their manners, made improvements in the elegancies of life, and cultivated the arts and sciences.

This survey of the political state of Scotland, in which events and their causes have been men-

Rei

the

WO

the

rly;

of

sof

by nfi-

gif

ex-

and

lent

ave

for

om-

bly

y to

bles

li-

hey

on, and

and

ave

ers.

and

ind.

nen-

tioned rather than developed, enables us to point out three eras, from each of which we may date fome great alteration in one or other of the three different members of which the supreme legislative affembly in our constitution is composed. At their Accession to the throne of England, the Kings of Scotland, once the most limited, became, in an instant, the most absolute Princes in Europe, and exercised a despotic authority, which their parliaments were unable to control, or their nobles to relift. At the Union of the two kingdoms, the feudal aristocracy, which had subsisted so many ages, and with power so exorbitant, was overturned, and the Scottish nobles having furrendered rights and preeminences peculiar to their order, reduced themselves to a condition which is no longer the terror and envy of other subjects. Since the Union, the Commons, anciently neglected by their Kings, and feldom courted by the nobles, have emerged into dignity; and, being admitted to a participation of all the privileges which the English had purchased at the expense of so much blood, must now be esteemed a body not less considerable in the one kingdom, than they have long been in the other.

The church felt the effects of the absolute power which the King acquired by his accession; and its revolutions, too, are worthy of notice. James, during the latter years of his administration in Scotland, had revived the name and office of Bishops. But they possessed no ecclesiastical jurisdiction or pre-eminence, their revenues were inconsiderable,

BOOK VIII.

WI

of

the

aga

is I

the

gen

a n

by

and

wer

ofv

emb

for

mate

time

the

of the

not

but

they

confe

their

atten

in w

which

the fu

Ityle 1

with

Viii.

E O O K and they were scarcely distinguished by any thing but by their feat in parliament, and by being the object of the clergy's jealoufy, and the people's hatred. The King, delighted with the splendor and authority which the English Bishops enjoyed, and eager to effect an union in the ecclefiaftical policy, which he had, in vain, attempted in the civil government of the two kingdoms, resolved to bring both Churches to an exact conformity with each other. Three Scots. men were confecrated Bishops at London. From them, their brethren were commanded to receive orders. Ceremonies unknown in Scotland were imposed; and though the Clergy, less obsequious than the nobles, boldly opposed these innovations, James, long practifed and well-skilled in the arts of managing them, obtained at length their compliance. But Charles I. a superstitious Prince, unacquainted with the genius of the Scots, imprudent and precipitant in all the measures he purfued in that kingdom, pressing too eagerly the reception of the English liturgy, and indifcreetly attempting a refumption of Church-lands, kindled the flames of civil war; and the people being left at liberty to indulge their own wishes, the Episcopal church was overturned, and the Presbyterian government and discipline were reestablished with new vigor. Together with Monarchy, Episcopacy was restored in Scotland. A form of government, fo odious to the people, required force to uphold it; and though not only the whole rigor of authority, but all the barbarity of perfecution were employed in its support, the aversion of the nation was infurmountable, and it subfifted

out

ect

he

ity

to

he

of

nes

otf-

om

ive

ere

ous

ns,

ma-

ted

eci-

om,

tur-

of

the

wn

and

re-

nar-

nof

orce

e ri-

erfe-

fion

Sted

with difficulty. At the Revolution, the inclinations of the people were thought worthy the attention of the legislature, the Presbyterian government was again established, and, being ratified by the Union, is still maintained in the kingdom.

Nor did the influence of the Accession extend to the civil and ecclefiastical conftitution alone; the genius of the nation, its tafte and spirit, things of a nature still more delicate, were sensibly affected by that event. When learning revived in the fifteenth and fixteenth centuries, all the modern languages werein a state equally barbarous, devoid of elegance, of vigor, and even of perspicuity. No author thought of writing in languages fo ill adapted to express and embellish his sentiments, or of erecting a work for immortality, with fuch rude and perishing materials. As the spirit, which prevailed at that time, did not owe its rife to any original effort of the human mind, but was excited by admiration of the ancients, their compositions were deemed not only the standards of taste and of sentiment, but of style; and even the languages in which they wrote were thought to be peculiar, and almost confecrated to learning and the muses. Not only the manner of the ancients was imitated, but their language copied: and, extravagant as the attempt may appear, to write in a dead tongue, in which men were not accustomed to think, and which they could not speak, or even pronounce, the success of it was astonishing. As they formed their style upon the purest models; as they were uninfected with those barbarisms, which the inaccuracy of

A111' B 0, 0 Æ

and

equ

lite

of

diff

gra

we

ftat

or i

wh

mal

his

lang

in i

of a

gua

in th

have begi

tafte

pass

be a

Acce

and

obje

prefe

bles.

univ

the n

B

BOOK VIII.

familiar conversation, the affectation of courts; intercourse with strangers, and a thousand other causes introduce into living languages; many moderns have attained to a degree of elegance in their Latin compositions, which the Romans themfelves scarce possessed beyond the limits of the Augustan age. While this was almost the only species of composition, and all authors, by using one common language, could be brought to a nearer comparison, the Scottish writers were not inferior to those of any other nation. The happy genius of Buchanan, equally formed to excel in profe and in verse, more various, more original, and more elegant, than that of almost any other modern who writes in Latin, reflects, with regard to this particular, the greatest lustre on his country.

But the labor attending the study of a dead tongue was irksome; the unequal return for their industry which authors met with, who could be read and admired only within the narrow circle of the learned, was mortifying; and men, instead of wasting half their lives in learning the language of the Romans, began to refine and to polish their own. The modern tongues were found to be fulceptible of beauties and graces, which, if not equal to those of the ancient ones, were at least more attainable. The Italians having first fet the example, Latin was no longer used in the works of taste; it was confined to books of science; and the politer nations have banished it even from these. The Scots, we may prefume, would have had no cause to regret this change in the public taste,

ts,

her

iny

in

em-

the

nly

ing

) a

not

ру

rose

and

ern

this

ead

heir

be

rcle

ead

age

heir

fuf-

not

eaft

the

orks

and

efe.

had

ifte,

and would still have been able to maintain some BOOK equality with other nations, in their pursuit of literary honor. The English and Scottish languages. derived from the same sources, were, at the end of the fixteenth century, in a state nearly similar, differing from one another fomewhat in orthography, though not only the words, but the idioms were much the same. The letters of several Scottish flatesmen of that age are not inferior in elegance, or in purity, to those of the English Ministers with whom they corresponded. James himself was master of a style far from contemptible; and, by his example and encouragement, the Scottish language might have kept pace with the English in refinement. Scotland might have had a feries of authors in its own, as well as in the Latin language, to boast of; and the improvements in taste, in the arts, and in the sciences, which spread over the other polished nations of Europe, would not have been unknown there.

But, at the very time when other nations were beginning to drop the use of Latin in works of taste, and to make trial of the strength and compass of their own languages, Scotland ceased to be a kingdom. The transports of joy, which the Accession at first occasioned, were soon over: and the Scots, being at once deprived of all the objects that refine or animate a people; of the presence of their Prince, of the concourse of nobles, of the splendor and elegance of a court, an universal dejection of spirit seems to have seized the nation. The Court being withdrawn, no domestic

H 4

wer

the

ing t

cont

ry d

age,

and

amo

of d

ferm

fuch

man

may

lawy

profe

matt

comr

vicio

Scotti

langu tafte

a moi

been

the L devo

prior

the fp

the E

and t debafi

the b

Th

BOOK

standard of propriety and correctness of speech remained; the few compositions that Scotland produced were tried by the English standard, and every word or phrase that varied in the least from that, was condemned as barbarous; whereas, if the two nations had continued diffinct, each might have retained idioms and forms of speech peculiar to itself; and thefe, rendered fashionable by the example of a Court, and supported by the authority of writers of reputation, might have been considered in the fame light with the varieties occasioned by the different dialects in the Greek tongue; might have been considered as beauties; and, in many cases. might have been used promiseuously by the authors of both nations. But, by the Accession, the English naturally became the fole judges and law-givers in language, and rejected as folecisms, every form of fpeech to which their ear was not accustomed. Nor did the Scots, while the intercourse between the two nations was inconsiderable , and ancient prejudices

A remarkable proof of the little intercourse between the English and Scots before the union of the Crowns, is to be found in two curious papers, one published by Haynes, the other by Strype. In the year 1567, Elizabeth commanded the Bishop of London to take a furvey of all the strangers within the cities of London and Westminster. By this report, which is very minute, it appears that the whole number of Scots at that time was 58. Haynes, 455. A survey of the same kind was made by Sir Thomas Row, Lord Mayor, A. D. 1568. The number of Scots had then increased to 88. Strype, iv. Supplement, No. I. On the accession of James, a considerable number of Scots, especially of the higher rank; resorted to England; but it was not still the Union hat the intercourse between the two kingdoms became great

ech

oro.

ery

was ons

ned

and

fa

ters

the

the

fes,

lish

s in

of Vor

WO

ices

the

s to nes,

om-

the By hole

rvey

yor,

d to

of the

nion

reat

were still so violent as to prevent imitation, possess the means of refining their own tongue according to the purity of the English standard. On the contrary, new corruptions flowed into it from every different fource. The Clergy of Scotland, in that age, were more eminent for piety than for learning; and though there did not arife many authors among them, yet being in possession of the privilege of discoursing publicly to the people, and their fermons being too long, and perhaps too frequent, fuch hasty productions could not be elegant; and many flovenly and incorrect modes of expression may be traced back to that original. The pleadings of lawyers were equally loofe and inaccurate, and that profession having furnished more authors and the matters of which they treat mingling daily in common discourse and business, many of those vicious forms of speech, which are denominated Scotticisms, have been introduced by them into the language. Nor did either the language or public talte receive any improvement in Parliament, where amore liberal and more correct eloquence might have been expected. All business was transacted there by the Lords of Articles, and they were so fervilely devoted to the Court, that few debates arose, and, prior to the Revolution, none were conducted with the spirit and vigor natural to a popular affembly.

Thus, during the whole feventeenth century, the English were gradually refining their language and their taste; in Scotland the former was much debased, and the latter almost entirely lost. In the beginning of that period, both nations were

BOOK VIII.

bein

ation

polle

which ever

or I

BOOK VIII.

emerging out of barbarity, but the distance between them, which was then inconsiderable, became, before the end of it, immense. Even after science had once dawned upon them, the Scots feemed to be finking back into ignorance and obscurity; and, active and intelligent as they naturally are, they continued, while other nations were eager in the pursuit of fame and knowledge, in a state of languor, This, however, must be imputed to the unhappiness of their political fituation, not to any defect of genius; for no fooner was the one removed in any degree, than the other began to display itself. The act abolishing the power of the Lords of Articles, and other falutary laws passed at the Revolution, having introduced freedom of debate into the Scottifi Parliament, eloquence, with all the arts that accompany or perfect it, became immediate objects of attention; and the example of Fletcher of Salton alone is fufficient to show that the Scots were still capable of generous fentiments, and, notwithstanding some peculiar idioms, were able to express themselves with energy, and with elegance.

At length the Union having incorporated the two nations, and rendered them one people, the distinctions which had substitted for many ages gradually wear away; peculiarities disappear; the same manners prevail in both parts of the island; the same authors are read and admired; the same entertainments are frequented by the elegant and polite; and the same standard of taste, and of purity in language, is established. The Scots, after

tween

ecame.

ce had to be

and,

they

in the

guor,

piness ect of n any heach
, and aving ottish
at acbjects
r of Scots
and,
able n ele-

the ages the and; fame and pu-being placed, during a whole century, in a fituation no less fatal to the liberty than to the taste and genius of the nation, were at once put in possession of privileges more valuable than those which their ancestors had formerly enjoyed; and every obstruction that had retarded their pursuit, or prevented their acquisition of literary same, was totally removed.

BOOK VIII.

A CRITICAL

DISSERTATION

CONCERNING

The Murder of King HENRY, and the Genuineness of the Queen's Letter to Bothwell.

IT is not my intention to engage in all the controversies to which the murder of King Henry, or the letters from Queen Mary to Bothwell have given rife; far less to appear as an adversary to any particular author, who hath treated of To repeat, and to expose all the ill founded affertions with regard to these points which have flowed from inattention, from prepared dice, from partiality, from malevolence, and from dishonesty, would be no less irksome to myself than unacceptable to most of my readers. All propose, is to affift others in forming some judge ment concerning the facts in dispute, by stating the proofs produced on each fide, with as much brevity as the cafe will admit, and with the fame attention and impartiality which I have endea voured to exercise in examining other contro verted points in the Scottish history.

In order to account for the King's murder, two different fystems have been formed. The one supposes Bothwell to have contrived and executed this Muri

They with this paccor with whol

be co

well,

their

ferent them fudde fon, i ments foon i pathy breach ble; descer on dif

It wie

this crime. The other imputes it to the Earls of Murray, Morton, and their party.

The decision of many controverted sacts in history, is a matter rather of curiosity than of use. They stand detached; and whatever we determine with regard to them, the sabric of the story remains untouched. But the sact under dispute in this place is a sundamental and essential one, and according to the opinion which a historian adopts with regard to it, he must vary and dispose the whole of his subsequent narration. A historical system may be tried in two different ways, whether it be consistent with probability, and whether it be supported by proper evidence.

id the

etters

e con

lenry,

hwell

erfary

ted of

oints

preju-

d from

All I

Rating

much e fame

endea

ontro

, two

e one

ecuted

Those who charge the King's murder upon Bothwell, argue in the following manner; and though their reasonings have been mentioned already in different places of the narrative, it is necessary to repeat them here. Mary's love for Darnly, fay they, was a sudden and youthful passion. The beauty of his perfon, set off by some external frivolous accomplishments, was his chief merit. His capricious temper soon raised in the Queen a disgust, which broke out on different occasions. His engaging in the conspiracy against Rizio, converted this difgust into an antipathy which she was at no pains to conceal. This breach was perhaps, in its own nature, irreparable; the King certainly wanted that art and condescension which alone could have repaired it. It widened every day, and a deep and fettled hatred effaced all remains of affection. Bothwell observed this, and was prompted by ambition, and perhaps by love, to found upon it a scheme, which proved fatal both to the Queen and to himfelf, He had ferved Mary at different times with fidelity and success. He infinuated himself into her favor, by address and by flattery. By degrees he gained her heart. In order to gratify his love, or at least his ambition, it was necessary to get rid of the King. Mary had rejected the proposal which, it is said, had been made to her for obtaining a divorce. The King was equally hated by the partifans of the house of Hamilton, a considerable party in the kingdom; by Murray, one of the most powerful and popular persons in his country; by Morton and his affociates, whom he had deceived; and whom Bothwell had bound to his interest by a recent favor. Among the people Darnly was fallen under extreme contempt. Bothwell might expect, for all these reasons, that the murder of the King would pass without any inquiry, and might trust to Mary's love, and to his own address and good fortune, for the accomplishment of the rest of his wishes. What Bothwell expected really came to pass. Mary, if not privy herself to the design, connived at an action which rid her of a man whom she had such good reason to detest. A few months after the murder of her husband, she married the person who was both suspected and accused of having perpetrated that odious crime.

Those, who charge the guilt upon Murray and his party, reason in this manner. Murray, they say, was a man of boundless ambition. Notwiths standing the illegitimacy of his birth, he had early

Que into his possible by hinto and Hen All Que mure

forn

bility
ances links of w on th
with
tion
enabl

to d leader induction pacity the no reduc after me,

felf.

lity

vor,

ned

leaft

ing.

aid,

orce.

the

the

erful

and

hom

cent

nder

for

King

ift to

boog

f his

e to

ign,

hom

nths

the d of

and they with

early

formed a design of usurping the Crown. On the Queen's return into Scotland, he infinuated himself into her favor, and engroffed the whole power into his own hands. He fet himfelf against every proposal of marriage which was made to her, lest his own chance of succeeding to the Crown should be destroyed. He hated Darnly, and was no less hated by him. In order to be revenged on him, he entered into a sudden friendship with Bothwell, his ancient and mortal enemy. He encouraged him to affaffinate Henry, by giving him hopes of marrying the Queen. All this was done with a defign to throw upon the Queen herfelf the imputation of being accessary to the murder, and under that pretext, to destroy Bothwell, to depose and imprison her, and to seize the sceptre which he had wrested out of her hands.

The former of these systems has an air of probability, is confistent with itself, and solves appearances. In the latter, some affertions are false, some links are wanting in the chain, and effects appear, of which no fufficient cause is produced. Murray, on the Queen's return into Scotland, served her with great fidelity, and by his prudent administration rendered her so popular, and so powerful, as enabled her with ease to quash a formidable infurrection raised by the party of which he was the leader in the year 1565. What motive could induce Murray to murder a Prince without capacity, without followers, without influence over the nobles, whom the Queen, by her neglect, had reduced to the lowest state of contempt, and who, after a long difgrace, had regained (according to

trtif

H

evic

to e app

thol

miff

deta

the

who whe

the e

fame

Hon

at h

him

racy

he v

the

mur

Dou

in t

Mon

own

adhe

puni

App

1

the most favorable supposition) the precarious post fession of her favor only a few days before his death? It is difficult to conceive what Murray had to fear from the King's life. It is still a more difficult matter to guess what he could gain by his death. If we suppose that the Queen had no previous attachment to Bothwell, nothing can appear more chimerical than a scheme to persuade her to marry a man, whose wife was still alive, and who was not only fuspected, but accused, of murdering her former husband. But that fuch a scheme should really succeed is still more extraordinary.-If Murray had instigated Bothwell to commit the crime, or had himself been accessary to the commission of it, what hopes were there that Bothwell would filently bear from a fellow - criminal all the perfecutions which he fulfered, without ever retorting upon him the accusation, or revealing the whole scene of iniquity? An ancient and deadly feud had subsisted between Murray and Bothwell; the Queen with difficulty had brought them to some terms of agreement. But is it probable that Murray would chuse an enemy, to whom he had been fo lately reconciled, for his confident in the commission of such an atrocious crime? Or, on the other hand, would it ever enter into the imagination of a wife man, first to raise his rival to supreme power, in hopes that afterwards he should render him odious, by accusing him of crimes which he had not committed, and, in consequence of this unjust charge, should be enabled to deprive him of that power? The molt adventurous politician never hazarded fuch a dangerous pos

his

had

ficult

th. If

tachnime-

man,

only r huf-

cceed

Stiga-

mfelf

opes

from

e fuf-

ccufa-

nity?

ween

culty

. But

emy,

, for

cious

ever

rst to

that culing

and,

ld be molt

dan-

rerous

gerous experiment. The most credulous folly never trusted such an uncertain chance.

How strong soever these general reasonings may appear to be, it is not upon them alone that we must decide, but according to the particular evidence that is produced. This we now proceed to examine.

That Bothwell was guilty of the King's murder, appears, 1. From the concurring testimony of all the contemporary historians. 2. From the confession of those persons who suffered for affisting at the commission of the crime, and who enter into a minute detail of all its circumstances. Anders. ii. 165. 3. From theacknowledgment of Mary's own commissioners, who allow Bothwell to have been one of those who where guilty of this crime. Good. ii. 213. 4. From the express testimony of Lesly, Bishop of Ross, to the same effect with the former. Def. of Q. Mary's Honor, And. i. 76. Id. ii. p. 31. 5. Morton, at his death, declared that Bothwell had solicited him, at different times, to concur in the conspiacy formed against the life of the King; and that he was informed by Archibald Douglas, one of the conspirators, that Bothwell was present at the murder Crawf. Mem. App. 4. The letter from Douglas to the Queen, which I have published in the Appendix to Vol. II. No. 34. confirms Morton's testimony. 6 Lord Herries promises, in his own name, and in the name of the nobles who adhered to the Queen, that they would concur in punishing Bothwell as the murderer of the King. Append. Vol. II. No. 11. VOL. III.

150

the

cia

a 1

" c

" [

" C

a re

and

affer

touc

the e

add

" K " ho

" an

" co

" ma

" wa

is no

fonal

conc

with

T

The most direct charge ever brought against Murray is in these words of Bishop Lesly. "Is it " unknown," addressing himself to the Earl of Murray, " what the Lord Herries faid to your face openly " even at your own table, a few days after the murder " was committed? Did he not charge you with the " foreknowledge of the same murder; did he not, " nulla circumlocutione usus, flatly and plainly burden ".you, that riding in Fife, and coming with one of " your most assured and trusty servants the same day " whereon you departed from Edinburgh, faid to " him, among other talk. This night ere morning " Lord Darnly shall lose his life?" Defence of O. Mary, Anders. ii. 75. But the affertion of a man fo heated with faction as Leffy, unless it were supported by proper evidence, is of little weight. The fervantto whom Murray is faid to have spoken these words, is not named; nor the manner in which this fecret conversation was brought to light mentioned. Lord Herries was one of the most zealous advocates for Mary, and it is remarkable that, in all his negociation at the court of England, he never once repeated this accusation of Murray. In answering the challenge given him by Lord Lindsay, Herries had a fair opportunity of mentioning Murray's knowledge of the murder; but though he openly accuses of that erime some of those who adhered to Murray, he industriously avoids any infinuation against Murray himself. Keith, Pref. xii. Mary berfelf, in conversation with Sir Francis Knolles, accused Morton and Maitland of being privy to the murder, but does not mention Murray. And. iv. 55. When the Bishop of Ross and Lord Herries inft

s it

lur-

nly

der

the

ot,

den

e of day

d to

ing Q.

n fo

rted

ntto

, 19

con-

ord s for

tion

is ac-

iven

inity

der;

ne of

voids

Pref.

ancis

rivy

And.

erries

appeared before the English council, January 11. 1569, they declared themselves ready, in obedience to the Queen's command, to accuse Murray and his associates of being accessory to the murder, but "they " being also required, whether they, or any of them. " as of themselves, would accuse the faid Earl in " special, or any of his adherents, or thought them " guilty thereof; " they answered, "that they took "God to witness that none of them did ever know " any thing of the conspiracy of that murder, or were "council and foreknowledge thereof; neither who were devisers, inventors, and executors of the fame, "till it was publicly discovered long thereafter by " some of the assassins, who suffered death on that ac-"count." Good. ii. 308. These words are taken out of a register kept by Ross and Herries themselves. and feem to be a direct consutation of the Bishop's affertion.

The Earls of Huntly and Argyll, in their Protestation touching the murder of the King of Scots, after mentioning the conference at Craigmillar concerning a divorce, add, "So after these premisses, the murder of the "King following, we judge in our consciences, and "hold for certain and truth, that the Earl of Murray and secretary Lethington were authors, inventors, "counsellors and causers of the same murder, in what manner, or by whatsomever persons the same "was executed." Anders. iv. 188. But, 1. This is nothing more than the private opinion or personal affirmation of these two noblemen. 2. The conclusion which they make has no connexion with the premisses on which they found it. Because

anf

wh

ene

1V.

wer

Hui

The

incl

and

Writ

to w

in th

by t

This

inter

not f feen

took prop

held

fufpi

lo lia

them

coule

at Cr

be fe

houl

be a

given

Murray proposed to obtain for the Queen a divorce from her husband with her own consent, it does not follow that therefore he committed the murder without her knowledge. 3 Huntly and Argyll were at that time the leaders of that party opposite to Murray, and animated with all the rage of faction. 4 Both of them were Murray's personal enemies. Huntly, on account of the treatment which his family and clan had received from that nobleman. Argyll was defirous of being divorced from his wife, with whom he lived on no good terms, Knox, 328. and by whom he had no children. Crawf. Peer. 19. She was Murray's fifter, and by his interest he had obstructed that design. Keith, 551. These circumstances would go far towards invalidating a positive testimony; they more than counterbalance an indeterminate suspicion. 5. It is altogether uncertain whether Huntly and Argyllever fubscribed this protestation. A copy of such a protestation as the Queen thought would be of advantage to her cause, was transmitted to them by her. Anders. iv. p. ii. 186. The protestation itself, published by Anderson, is taken from an unsubscribed copy with blanks for the oath and place of subscribing. On the back of this copy, there is pasted, indeed a paper, which Cecil has marked "Answer of the Earl of Murray toa "writing of the Earls of Huntly and Argyll." Anders. 194, 195. But it can hardly be deemed a reply to the above-mentioned protestation. Murray's answer bears date at London, January 19, 1568. The Queen's letter, in which the inclosed the copy of the protestation, bears date at Bowton, Jan. 5. 1568. Now it is scarce to be supposed that the copy could be fent into Scotland, be subscribed by the two Earls, and be seen and

K. HENRY'S MURDER, &c.

rce

not

der

ere

to

on.

ies.

was

om.

om

ay's.

gn.

ards

han

t is

ver

efta-

to

iv.

by

vith

the

nich

toa

lerf.

the

ears

ter,

on,

e to

and,

and

117 answered by Murray within so short a time. Murray's reply feems intended only to prevent the impression which the vague and uncertain accusations of his enemies might make in his absence. Cecil had got the original of the Queen's letter into his custody. Anders. iv. 185. This naturally leads us to conjecture that the letter itself, together with the inclosed protestation, were intercepted before they came to the hands of Huntly and Argyll. Nor is this mere conjecture alone. The letter to Huntly, in which the protestation was inclosed, is to be found; Cott. Lib. Cal. C. 1. fol. 280. and is an original subscribed by Mary, though not written with her own hand, because she seldom chose to write in the English language. The protestation is in the same volume, fol. 282. and is manifestly written by the same person who wrote the Queen's letter. This feems to render it highly probable that both were intercepted. So that much has been founded on a paper not subscribed by the two Earls, and probably never feen by them. Befides, this method which the Queen took of fending a copy to the two Earls, of what was proper for them to declare with regard to a conference held in their own presence, appears somewhat suspicious. It would have been more natural, and not so liable to any misinterpretation, to have desired them to write the most exact account, which they could recollect, of what had passed at the conversation at Craigmillar. 6. But even if all this reasoning should be set aside, and the authenticity of the Protestation hould be admitted in its full extent, it may still be a question, what degree of credit should be given to the affertion of the two Earls, who were not only present in the first Parliament, held by Murray as Regent in December 1567, in which the one carried the sceptre, and the other the sword of state, Spotsw, 214. but were both members of the Committee of Lords of Articles, and in that capacity affifted in framing all the acts by which the Queen was deprived of the crown, and her son seated on the throne; and in particular concurred in the act by which it was declared, that whatever had befallen the Queen, " was in her awin default in fa far as, be divers hir previe letters written halelie with hir awin hand, and fend by hir, to James sometyme Erle of Bothwell, cheif executour of the faid horribill murthour, as weill befoir the committing thairof as thairaftir: And be hir ungodlie and dishonourabill proceeding to ane pretendit marriage with him, suddaindlie and unprovisitlie thairaftir, it is maist certane that sche was previe, airt and pairt, of the actual devise and deid of the foirnamit murthour of the King her lauchfull husband, and thairfoir justlie desirvis quhatsumever hes bene done to hir in ony tyme bygaine, or that fal be usit towards hir, for the said cause." Anders ii. 221.

I 3

The Queen's commissioners at the Conferences in England accused Murray and his affociates of having murdered the King Good. ii. 281. But this charge is to be considered as a recrimination, extorted by the accusation preferred against the Queen, and contains nothing more than loose and general affirmations, without descending to such particular circum-

their by 1566 may A according poli

the p

and

catio

him

Lefly
130.
Scott
could king
tion;
er of

vindi

tion,

of E

publi

Answe alle Ear ven

then

of the

It is

flances as either afcertain their truth, or discover their falshood. The same accusation is repeated by the nobles affembled at Dumbarton Sept. 1568. Good. ii. 359. And the fame observation may be made concerning it. a sylving mu ı

e

y

2

y

n

e

n

of

II

ill

1, 15

t,

nt

br

ne

be

14.

14

ſ.

d.

ed

on

10s,

m.

All the Queen's advocates have endeavoured to account for Murray's murdering of the King, by suppoling that it was done on purpole that he might have the pretence of disturbing the Queen's administration, and thereby rendering ineffectual her general Revocation, of Crown lands, which would have deprived him and his affociates of the best part of their estates. Lefly Def. of Mary's Hon. p. 73. Anderf. iv. Part ii. 130. But whoever confiders the limited powers of a Scottish Monarch, will see that such a revocation could not be very formidable to the nobles. Every king of Scotland began his reign with fuch a revocation; and as often as it was renewed, the power of the nobles rendered it ineffectual. The best vindication of Murray and his party from this accusation, is that which they presented to the Queen of England, and which hath never hitherto been published.

Answers to the objections and alledgance of the Queen, Paperalledging the Earl of Murray, Lord Regent, the Office. Earl of Morton, Murt, Glencairn, Hume, Ruthven, &c. to bave been moved to armour, for that they abborred and might not abide ber revocation of the alienation made of ber property.

It is answered, that is alledged but (i. e. without all appearance, and it appears God has bereft the alledgance of all wit and good remembrance, for thir reasons following:

Imprimis, as to my Lord Regent, he never had occasion to grudge thereat, in respect the Queen made him privy to the same, and took resolution with him for the execution thereof, letting his Lordship know she would affuredly in the famine except all things she had given to him, and ratefy them in the next parliament as she did indeed; and for that cause wished my Lord to leave behind him Master John Wood; to attend upon the same, to whom she declared, that als well in that as in all others her grants it should be provided, yea of free will did promise and offer before ever he demanded, as it came to pass without any lett or impediment, for all was ratified by her command, and hand write, at the parliament, but (i. e. without) any difficulty.

Item as to my Lord of Morton, he could not grudge thereat quha never had of her property worth twenty dollars that ever I knew of.

Item the same, may I say of my Lord Glensairn. Item the same, I may say of my Lord Hume. Item the same, I may say of my Lord Ruthven. Item the same, I may say of my Lord Lindsay. Only my Lord of Marr, had ane little thing of the property quilk alsua was gladly and liberally confirmed to him, in the said parliament preceeding a year; was never ane had any cause of miscontent of that revocation, far less to have put their lives and heritage to so open and manifest ane danger as they did for sic ane frivole cause.

France timent unfavor her no a grea

feem t

lounde

Some

that the

Deeds

fectly 1

Gy

thow

it wa

largel

the Q

nifest

her N

tion :

the K

quhat

nor n

Hav

been

Bothy

ther t

der of

know

of her

to the

No

K. HENRY'S MURDER, &c. 121

Gyf ever any did make evill countenance, and show any miscontentment of the said revocation, it was my Lord of Argyll in speciall, quha spak largely in the time of Parliament thairanents to the Queen herself, and did complain of the manifest corruption of ane act of parliament past upon her Majesty's return, and sa did lett any revocation at that time; but the armour for revenge of the King's deid was not till twa months after, att quhat time there was no occasion given thereof, nor never a man had mind thereof.

1

d

n

n

15 le

fy

ł;

d

e,

Ill

ee

de-

d

t)

ot

ty

n.

n. y.

ng

e-

nt

ise

ve

ni-

ſe,

Having thus examined the evidence which has been produced against the Earls of Murray and Bothwell; we shall next proceed to inquire whether the Queen herself was accessory to the murder of her husband.

No fooner was the violent death of Darnly known, than strong suspicions arose, among some of her subjects, that Mary had given her consent to the commission of that crime. And. ii. 156. We are informed, by her own ambassador in France, the Archbishop of Glasgow, that the sentiments of foreigners, on this head, were no less unsavorable to her. Keith, Pres. ix. Many of her nobles loudly accused her of that crime, and a great part of the nation, by supporting them, seem to have allowed the accusation to be well sounded.

Some crimes, however, are of fuch a nature, that they hardly admit of a positive or direct proof. Deeds of darkness can seldom be brought perfectly to light. Where persons are accused not of being Principal, but only of being Accessaries in the commission of a crime; not of having perpetrated it themselves, but only of giving consent to the commission of it by others; the proof becomes still more difficult: and unless when some accomplice betrays the secret, a proof by circumstances, or presumptive evidence, is all that can be attained. Even in judicial trials, such evidence is sometimes held to be sufficient for condemning criminals. The degree of conviction which such evidence carries along with it; is often not inserior to that which arises from positive testimony; and a concurring series of circumstances satisfies the understanding no less than the express declaration of witnesses.

Evidence of both these kinds has been produced against Mary. We shall first consider that which is founded upon circumstances alone.

Some of these suspicious circumstances preceded, the King's death; others were subsequent to it. With regard to the former, we may observe that the Queen's violent love of Darnly was soon converted into an aversion to him no less violent; and that his own ill conduct, and excesses of every kind, were such, that if they did not justify, at least they account for this sudden change of her disposition towards him. The rise and progress of this domestic rupture, I have traced with great care in the history, and to the proofs of it which may be found in papers published by other authors, I have added those contained in App. Vol. II. No. III. and IV. Le Croc, the French amballador, who was an eye-witness of what he defcribe beext of a re the ha all we difeafe it feen repeat know exceed it-T upon betwee effectu incural from h was I p how al fublist!

with fu

Henry

have be the Que

her. N

afterwa

the Qu

nion of an ever

neither

this, w

K. HENRY'S MURDER, &c. 123

he

it

he

till

ice

10

ed.

nes

he ies

fes

of

nan

ro-

hat

led

it.

hat

onery

aft dif-

of

eat

ich

au-

II.

oaf.

describes, not only represents her aversion to Darnly to beextreme, but declares that there could be no hopes of areconcilement between them. " The Queen is in the hands of physicians, and I do assure you is not at all well; and do believe the principal part of her difease to consist in deep grief and forrow; nor does iffeem possible to make her forget the same. Still she repeats these words, I could wish to be dead. You know very well that the injury she has received is exceeding great, and her majesty will never forget it-To speak my mind freely to you, I do not expect, upon feveral accounts, any good understanding between them (i. e. the King and Queen), unless God effectually put to his hand .- His bad deportment is incurable; nor can there ever be any good expected from him, for feveral reasons, which I might tell you was I present with you. I cannot pretend to foretell how all may turn, but I will fay, that matters cannot sublist long as they are, without being accompanied with fundry bad confequences. "Keith, Pref. vii Had Henry died a natural death, at this juncture, it must have been confidered as a very fortunate event to the Queen, and as a feafonable deliverance from a husband who had become altogether odious to her. Now as Henry was murdered a few weeks afterwards, and as nothing had happened to render the Queen's aversion to him less violent, the opinion of those who consider Mary as the author of an event which was manifestly so agreeable to her, will appear perhaps to some of our readers to be neither unnatural nor over-refined. If we add to this, what has been observed in the history, that in proportion to the increase of Mary's hatred of her husband, Bothwell made progress in her savor, and that he became the object not only of her confidence but her attachment, that opinion acquires new strength. It is easy to observe many advantages which might redound to Mary as well as to Bothwell from the King's death; but excepting them, no person and no party in the kingdom could derive the least benefit from that event. Bothwell, accordingly murdered the King, and it was, in that age, thought no unwarranted imputation on Mary's character, to suppose that she had consented to the deed.

Dec. 12,

Dec. 23.

The steps which the Queen took after her husband's death add strength to that supposition. i. Melvil, who was in Edinburgh at the time of the King's death, afferts, that " every body suspected the Earl of Bothwell; and those who durst speak freely to others, faid plainly that it was He," p. 155. 2. Mary having iffued a proclamation, on the 12th of February, offering a reward to any person who should discover those who had murdered her husband; And.i. 36.a paper in consequence of this was affixed to the gates of the Tolbooth, February 16, in which Bothwell was named as the chief person guilty of that crime, and the Queen herfelf was accused of having given her confent to it. And. ii. 156. 3, Soon after, February 20, the Earl of Lenox, the King's father, wrote to Mary, conjuring her, by every motive, to profecute the murderers with the utmost rigor. He plainly declared his own suspicions of Bothwell, and pointed out a method of proceeding against him, and for discovering the ot than ec to fure already of the Bothw encour to hol withou Beatou Mary, weight with th lays he that fen rigorou notactu that ze I that I v prejudil all may may be shaw no vertue, grantit z this mos thereof, ze have

> wayis m that the

and give

ner

nd

nce

ew

ich

om

nd

efit

red

no

to uf-

1.

the

ted

eak p.

the

fon her

vas

, in

lty of

oon the

by ith

wn

rod ing 125

the other authors of that crime, no less obvious than equitable. He advised her to seize, and to commit to fure custody Bothwell himself, and such as were already named as his accomplices; to call an affembly of the nobles; to iffue a proclamation, inviting Bothwell's accusers to appear; and if, on that encouragement, no person appeared to accuse them. to hold them as innocent, and to dismiss them without farther trial. And. i. 40. 4. Archbishop Beatoun, her ambassador in France, in a letter to Mary, March 9th, employs arguments of the utmost weight to persuade her to prosecute the murderers with the greatest severity. " I can conclude nathing (lays he) by quhat zour Majesty writes to me zourself, that sen it has plefit God to conserve zow to make a ngorous vengeance thereof, that rather than it be notactually taine, it appears to me better in this warld that ze had lost life and all. I ask your Majestie pardon that I writ sa far, for I can heir nathing to zour prejudife, but I man constraindly writ the samin, that all may come to zour knawlege; for the better remede may be put therto. Heir it is needfull that ze forth haw now rather than ever of before, the greite vertue, magnanimitie, and constance that God has grantit zow, be quhais grace, I hope ze fall overcome this most heavy envie and displesir of the committing thereof, and conserve that reputation in all godliness, ze have conquist of lang, quhich can appear na wayis mair clearlie, than that zow do fich justice that the haill world may declare zour innocence, and give testimony forever of thair treason that has committed (but fear of God or man) so cruel must

fuch whole

without

over to kee

Copy

Edin

ority

Mari

nibus f

rum et

mæ ma

noritate

intra pa

tionem factorum

confang

dominu

regni ne

habenter poluit;

vitii, fu

rum huje

ex nostra

confangu

dine rece conceder

temporib

bus cauf

missorun

fideration

comitem nottros le

&c. per

balivos,

Edinburg

que hære

&c. fupe

nos dictis um mam

much

too

and ungodlie a murther, quhairof there is fa meikle ill spoken, that I am constrainit to ask zow mercy, that neither can I or will I make the rehearfal thereof, which is owr odious. But alas! Madame, all over Europe this day there is na purpose in head sa frequent as of zour Majestie, and of the present state of zour realm, quhilk is in the most part interpretit finisterly." Keith. Pref. ix. 5. Elizabeth, as appears from Append. Vol II. No. VI. urged the fame thing in strong terms. 6. The circumstances of the case itself, no less than these folicitations and remonstrances, called for the utmost vigor in her proceedings. Her husband had been murdered in a cruel manner, almost in her own prefence. Her subjects were filled with the utmost horror at that crime. Bothwell, one of her principal favorites. had been publicly accused as the author of it. Re flections, extremely dishonorable to herself, had been thrown out. If indignation, and the love of justice, did not prompt her to pursue the murderers with ardor, decency, at least, and concern for vindicating her own character, should have induced her to avoid any appearance of remissiness or want of zeal.

But instead of this, Mary continued to discover, in all her actions, the utmost partiality towards Bothwell. On the 15th of February, five days after the murder, she bestowed on him the reversion of the superiority of the town of Leith, which in the year 1565 she had mortgaged to the citizens of Edinburgh. This grant was of much importance, as it gave him not only the command of the principal port in the kingdom, but a great ascendant over the citizens of Edinburgh, who wished much to keep possession of it. 2. Bothwell being ex-

e ill

that

nich

ope

s of

ılın.

ith.

1 11.

ms.

hefe

noft

een

pre

rrot

ites.

Re

had

ove

nur

con-

ould

re

ver.

ards

fter

1 0

the

5 0

ice.

rin

lant

Copy from the original in the Charter-house of the city of Elinburgh of an Assignation to the reversion of the superiority of Leith by Queen Mary, to the Earl of Bothwell.

Maria Dei gratia Regina Scotorum, omnibus probis hominibus suis ad quos præsentes literæ pervenerint salutem. Sciais, quod nos ad memoriam reducentes multiplex bonum veum et fidele fervitium, non tantum quondam nostræ chariffime matri Mariæ Reginæ regni nostri pro tempore in nostra minoritate factum et impensum, verum etiam nobismet ipsis, tam intra partes Galliæ quam intra hoc nostrum regnum, ad extentionem nostri honoris et auctoritatis in punitione furum, malefactorum, et transgressorum infra idem, per nostrum confisum confanguineum et confilarium Jacobum comitem Bothuile. dominum Halis, Creighton et Liddisdale, magnum admirallum regni nostri, commissionem et operationem ad hunc effectum habentem, per quas ipfe fuum corpus et vitam in magno periculo poluit; ac etiam, in performatione et extentione nostri dicti sernii, fuam hereditatem, fupra fummam viginti millium mercarumhujus nostri regni, alienavit ac lætir. Et nos cogitantes quod, ex nostra principali honore et devoria dictum nostrum confisum confanguineum & confiliarium cum quodam accidente et gratitudine recompensare et gratificare incumbit que nos commode sibi concedere poterimus, unde ipse magis habilis omnibus affuturis temporibus esse poterit, et ad hujusmodi performandum in omnibus causis seu eventibus: In recompensationem quorum præmillorum, ac pro diversis aliis nostris rationabilibus causis et confiderationibus nos moventibus, Fecimus, &c. dictum Jacobum omitem Bothuile, &c. ac fuos hæredes masculos quoscunque noltros legitimos, &c. affignatos in et ad literas reversionis factas, de per Symonem Preston de eodem, militum præpositum, balivos, consules, et communitatem hujus nostri burgi de Edinburgh, pro feiplis ac fuis fuccessoribus, &c. nobis, nostrifque haredibus, fuccessoribus, et assignatis pro redemptione, de fuperioritatis totius villæ de Leith, &c. impignoratæ pet nos dictis præposito, &c. sub reversione alienatæ continentis ummam decem millium mercarum monetæ præscriptæ nutremely defirous to obtain the command of the castle of Edinburgh, the Queen, in order to prevail on the Earl of Mar to furrender the government of it, offered to commit the young Prince to his custody. Mar confented; and she instantly appointed Bothwell governor of the castle. And. i. Pref. 64. Keith, 379. note (d). 3 The inquiry into the murder, previous to Bothwell's trial, feems to have been conducted with the utmost remissness. Buchanan exclaims loudly against this. And. ii. 24 Nor wasit without reason that he did so, as is evident from a circumstance in the affidavit of Thomas Nelson, one of the King's servants, who was in the house when his master was murdered, and was dug up alive out of the rubbish. Being examined on the Monday after the King's death, "This deponar shew that Bonkle had the key of the cellare, and the Queenis servandis the keyis of her shalmir. Quhilk the Laird of Tillibardin hearing, faid, Hald thair, here is ane ground. Efter quhilk words spokin, thai left of, and procedit na farther in the inquistion." And. iv. p. 2. 167. Had there been any intention to fearch into the bottom of the matter, a circumstance of so much importance merited the most careful inquiry. 4. Notwithstanding Lenox's merandum et calculandum in parochiali ecclesia de Edinburgh, super premonitione quadriginta dierum, ut moris est, veluti in dictis reversionis literis, &c. de data 8vo Octob. 1565, &c. (The rest is form, and contains a clause of absolute warrandice) In cujus rei Testimonium præsentibus magnum sigillum nostrum apponi secimus. Apud Edinburgh, decimo quinto die mensis Februarii, anno Domini millesimo quingentesimo sexagesimo sexto, et regni nostri vicesimo quinto.

The great seal entire.

repeated

the vail fit, dy. oth-th, ous fled dly hat nts, ed, exa-his are, mir. ald po-uifi-ten-cir-the ox's rgh, eluti 65, war-num imo gen-

d

po fat fel the Kin we ban It a lift his i tended date forgethe lead a faid a well) her to August Lething "that person tented Prince land, E as to and cr their b felves, their S Vol.

nower and favor, but from any hope of personal fafety. On this account they long confined themselves to that which was originally declared to be the reason of their taking arms; the avenging the King's death, the diffolving the marriage with Bothwell, the inflicting on him condign punishment, or banishing him for ever from the Queen's presence. ltappears from the letters of Throkmorton, published by Bishop Keith, and in my Appendix, that his fagacity early discovered that this would be the tenor of their conduct; in his letter from Edinburgh, dated July 14th, he observes that "they do not forget their own peril conjoined with the danger of the Prince, but as far as I perceive, they intend not to touch the Queen either in furety or in honor; for they speak of her with respect and reverence, and do affirm, as I do learn, that, the condition aforefaid accomplished, (i. e. the separation from Bothwell) they will both put her to liberty, and restore her to her estate." Vol. III p. 247. His letter of August 22d; contains a declaration made to him by Lethington, in name and in prefence of his affociates. "that they never meant harm neither to the Queen's person nor to her honor—that they have been contented hitherto to be condemned, as it were, of all Princes, strangers, and, namely, of the Queen of England, being charged of grievous and infamous titles, as to be noted rebels, traitors, seditious, ingrate and cruel, all which they fuffer and bear upon their backs, because they will not justify themselves, nor proceed in any thing that may touch their Sovereign's honor. But in case they be VOL. III.

with these defamations continually oppressed, or with the force, aid, and practices of other Princes, and namely of the Queen of England, put in danger, or to an extremity, they shall be compelled to deal otherwise with the Queen than they intend, or than they desire; for, added he, you may be sure we will not lose our lives, have our lands forfeited, and be reputed rebels through the world, seeing we have the means to justify ourselves. "Keith, 448. From this view of the slippery ground on which they stood at that time, their conduct in not producing the letters for several months, appears not only to have been prudent but essential to their own safety.

But, at a subsequent period, when the Confederates found it necessary to have the form of government, which they had established, confirmed by authority of Parliament, a different mode of proceeding became requisite. All that had hitherto been done with respect to the Queen's dismission, the seating the young King upon the throne, and the appointment of a Regent, was in reality nothing more than the deed of private men. It required some exhibition of some legal evidence to procure a constitutional act giving the fanction of its approbation to fuch violent measures, and to obtain "a perfect law and security for all them that either by deed, counsel, or subscription, had entered into that cause since thebeginning." Haynes, 453. This prevailed with the Regent and his fecret counsel, after long deliberation to agree to produce all the evidence of which they were possessed; and upon that production Parliament passed the acts which were requii the ki upon 1 combi leading nation ackno and ha tly, Ar that pa curred ton, an were n France Hugon the cap would rates in æmber. proof o the circ immedia nopubli Queen, i given b dence fu inalette xii. and r edfrom I

the paper

pointed

that th

10

s,

r, eal

an

rill

be

he

his

ers

een

nfe-

ern-

au-

ing

the

tof

leed

ome

ring

lent

rity

fub-

e be-

the

libe-

e of

pro-

were required. Such a change had happened in the state of the kingdom as induced the Confederates to venture upon this change in their conduct. In June, a powerful combination was forming against them, under the leading of the Hamiltons. In December, that combination was broken; most of the members of it had acknowledged the King as their lawful Sovereign, and had fubmitted to the Regent's government. Hundy, Argyll, Herries, the most powerful noblemen of that party, were present in the Parliament, and concurred in all its acts. Edinburgh, Dunbar, Dunbaron, and all the chief strong holds in the kingdom, were now in the hands of the Regent; the arms of France had full occupation in its civil war with the Hugonots. The ardor of Elizabeth's zeal in behalf of the captive Queen feems to have abated. A step that would have been followed with ruin to the Confederates in June, was attended with little danger in Deamber. From this long deduction it appears, that no proof of the letters being forged can be drawn from the circumstance of their not having been produced immediately after the twentieth of June; but though mpublic accusation was brought instantly against the Queen, in confequence of feizing the casket, hints were given by the Confederates, that they possessed evidence sufficient to convict her. This is plainly implied maletter of Throkmorton, July 21st, Keith, Pref. p. and more clearly in the paffage which I have quotedfrom his letter of August 22. In his letter of July 25, the papers contained in the casket are still more plainly pointed out. " They (i. e. the Confederates) fay, that they have as apparent proof against her as may be, as well by the testimony of her own handwriting, which they have recovered, as also by sufficient witnesses." Keith, 426.

L 2

II. With regard to the internal proofs of the genuineness of the Queen's letters to Bothwell, we may obferve, 1. That whenever a paper is forged with a particular intention, the eagerness of the forger to estab. lish the point in view, his solicitude to cut off all doubts and cavils, and to avoid any appearance of uncertainty, always prompt him to use expressions the most explicit and full to his purpose. The passages foisted into ancient authors by Heretics in different ages; the legendary miracles of the Romish faints; the supposititious deeds in their own favor produced by monasteries; the false charters of homage mentioned. Vol. I. p. 13. are fo many proofs of this affertion. No maxim feems to be more certain than this, that a for ger is often apt to prove too much, but seldom falls into the error of proving too little. The point which the Queen's enemies had to establish, was, " that a the Earl of Bothwell was chief executor of the horrible and unworthy murder perpetrated, &c. fo was she o the foreknowledge, counsel, device, persuader, and commander of the faid murder to be done." Good. i 207. But of this there are only imperfect hints, obscur intimations, and dark expressions in the letters, which however convincing evidence they might furnifh, found in real letters, bear no refemblance to that glar and superfluity of evidence which forgeries common ly contain. All the advocates for Mary's innocent in her own age, contend that there is nothing in th letters which can serve as a proof of her guilt. Lesly purpo age d ed (f of the made to be letters der, fa as littl murde adverf fomar fo ill had in courfe would decifiv ration e nute pa with re this re circum ones, v

plied, tl

Now M

amultir

a real co

purpose would 1

if they

Black

nd-

by

nu-

ob-

par-

tab-

all

e of

ions

iges

rent

the

d by

ned.

No

for

falls

hick

at as rible

he o

and

d. i

fcur

hich

fh, i

glar

mon

cenc

n th

efly

Blackwood, Turner, &c. abound with passages to this purpole; nor are the fentiments of those in the present age different. "Yet still it might have been expected (fays her latest defender) that some one or other of the points or articles of the accusation should be made out clearly by the proof. But nothing of that is to be feen in the present case. There is nothing in the letters that could plainly show the writer to have been in the foreknowledge, counsel, or device of any murder, far less to have persuaded or commanded it; and as little is there about maintaining or justifying any murderers." Good. i. 76. How ill advised were Mary's adversaries, to contract so much guilt, and to practise somany artifices, in order to forge letters, which are hill contrived for establishing the conclusion they had in view? Had they been so base as to have recourse to forgery is it not natural to think that they would have produced fomething more explicit and decifive? It is almost impossible to inventalong narration of fictitious events, confifting of various minute particulars, and to connect these in such a manner with real facts, that no mark of fraud shall appear. For this reason, skilful forgers avoid any long detail of circumstances, especially of foreign and superfluous ones, well knowing that the more these are multiplied, the more are the chances of detection increased. Now Mary's letters, especially the first, are filled with amultiplicity of circumstances, extremely natural in areal correspondence, but altogether foreign to the purpose of the Queen's enemies, and which it would have been extreme folly to have inferted, if they had been altogether imaginary, and without foundation. 3. The truth and reality of fever circumstances in the letters, and these, too, of n very public nature, are confirmed by undoubte collateral evidence. Lett. 1. Good. ii. p. 1. Th Queen is faid to have met one of Lenox's gentle men, and to have had some conversation with him Thomas Crawford, who was the person, appeared before Elizabeth's commissioners, and confirmed upon oath, the truth of this circumstance. He likewil declared, that during the Queen's stay at Glasgow the King repeated to him, every night, whatever ha passed through the day, between her Majesty and him; and that the account given of these converts tions in the first letter, is nearly the same with whatth King communicated to him. Good. ii. 245. Accord ing to the same letter there was much discourse be tween the King and Queen concerning Mynto, His gait, and Walcar. Good. ii. 8. 10, 11. What this might be, was altogether unknown, until a letter Mary's, preserved in the Scottish college at Paris, an published, Keith, Pref. vii. discovered it to be an affai of fo much importance as merited all the attention h paid to it at that time. It appears by a letter fromth French ambassador, that Mary was subject to avid lent pain in her side. Keith, ibid. This circumstand is mentioned, Lett. 1. p. 30. in a manner so natural can scarcely belong to any but a genuine production If we shall still think it probable to suppose that many real circumstances were artfully introduce into the letters by the forgers, in order to give an a of authenticity to their production; it will hard be possible to hold the same opinion concerning the foll first let who w jects, n wished a great were af her lett merly r notice o I desire now, a letter. I Excuse zesterda Good. middle naturall find the posed, placing at firft fi appeara fo far , to thro the appe that the forgers,

L 3

meaning

but we

gine tha

points c

evera

of n

ubte

Th

gentle

h him

реаге

rmed

cewil

fgow

er ha y an verfa

nat th

ccord

rse be , Hie

at thi

etter d

n affai

on la

om th

a vio

Stano

ural a hat I

duce an a

hardl ernin

the following particular. Before the Queen began her fift letter to Bothwell, she, as usual among those who write long letters containing a variety of subjeds, made notes or memorandums of the particulars she wished to remember; but as she sat up writing during a great part of the night, and after her attendants were asleep, her paper failed her, and she continued her letter upon the same sheet on which she had formerly made her memorandums. This she herself takes notice of, and makes an apology for it: "It is late; I defire never to cease from writing unto you, yet now, after the kiffing of your hands, I will end my letter. Excuse my evil writing, and read it twice over. Excuse that thing that is scriblit, for I had na paper resterday, quhen I wrait that of the memorial." Good. ii. 28. These memorandums still appear in the middle of the letter; and what we have faid feems naturally to account for the manner how they might find their way into a real letter. It is scarce to be supposed, however, that any forger would think of placing memorandums in the middle of a letter, where, athrift fight, they make so absurd and so unnatural an appearance. But if any shall still carry their refinement fo far, as to suppose that the forgers were so artful as to throw in this circumstance, in order to preserve the appearance of genuineness, they must at least allow that the Queen's enemies, who employed thefe forgers, could not be ignorant of the design and meaning of these short notes and memorandums; but we find them mistaking them so far as to imagine that they were the credit of the bearer, i. e. points concerning which the Queen had given him verbal instructions. Good. ii. 152. This they cannot possibly be; for the Queen herself writes with so much exactness concerning the different points in the me. morandums, that there was no need of giving any credit or instructions to the bearer concerning them. The memorandums are indeed the contents of the letter. 5. Mary, mentioning her conversation with the King, about the affair of Mynto, Hiegait, &c. fays, " The morne (i. e. to-morrow) I will speik to him upon that point;" and then adds, "As to the reft of Wille Hiegait's, he confessit it; but it was the morne (i. e. the morning) after my coming or he did it." Good. ii. 9. This addition, which could not have been made till after the conversation happened, seems either to have been inserted by the Queen into the body of the letter, or, perhaps, she having written it on the margin, it was taken thence into the text. If we suppose the letter to be a real one, and writtenat different times, as it plainly bears, this circumstance appears to be very natural; but no reason could have induced a forger to have ventured upon such an anachronism, for which there was no necessity. At addition perfectly fimilar to this made to a genuine paper, may be found, Good. ii. 282.

L 4

But, on the other hand, Mary herfelf, and the advocates for her innocence have contended, that these letters were forged by her enemies, on purpose to blast her reputation, and to justify their own rebellion. It is not necessary to take notice of the arguments which were produced, in her own age, in support of this opinion; the observations which we have already made, contain a full reply to them. An author, who has inquired into th who h lished of Mai evider the for Queen Latin o the Sco of the in Frei letters: fucces! forgery pable o ters wh they we French stand t lated th rendere

whatev
The ma
every m
and the great, r complic
to proc language

It is

But observe granted

not

ich

me-

ny

em.

the

ith &c.

to rest

the

did

ave

ms

the

ten

If

at

nce

ave

an An

ine

the hat ur-

leit

tice

her fer-

n 2

red

into the affairs of that period with great industry, and who has acquired much knowledge of them, has published (as he affirms) a demonstration of the forgery of Mary's letters. This demonstration he founds upon evidence both internal and external. With regard to the former, he observes, that the French copy of the Oueen's letters is plainly a translation of Buchanan's Latin copy; which Latin copy is only a translation of the Scottish copy; and, by consequence, the affertion of the Queen's enemies, that she wrote them originally in French, is altogether groundless, and the whole letters are gross forgeries. He accounts for this strange fuccession of translations, by supposing that when the forgery was projected, no person could be found capable of writing originally in the French language letters which would pass for the Queen's; for that reason they were first composed in Scottish; but unluckily the French interpreter, as he conjectures, did not understand that language; and therefore Buchanan translated them into Latin, and from his Latin they were rendered into French. Good. i. 79, 80.

It is hardly necessary to observe, that no proof whatever is produced of any of these suppositions. The manners of the Scots, in that age, when almost every man of rank spent a part of his youth in France, and the intercourse between the two nations was great, render it altogether improbable that so many complicated operations should be necessary in order to procure a sew letters to be written in the French language.

But without infifting farther on this, we may observe, that all this author's premises may be granted, and yet his conclusion will not follow, unless he likewise prove that the French letters, as we now have them, are a true copy of those which were produced by Murray and his party in the Scot. tish Parliament, and at York and Westminster. But this he has not attempted; and if we attend to the history of the letters, fuch an attempt, it is obvious, must have been unsuccessful. The letters were first published at the end of Buchanan's Detection, The first edition of this treatife was in Latin, in which language three of the Queen's letters were subjoined to it; this Latin edition was printed A. D. 1571. Soon after, a Scottish translation of it was published, and at the end of it were printed, likewise in Scottish, the threelet. ters which had formerly appeared in Latin, and five other letters in Scottish, which were not in the Latin edition. Next appeared a French translation of the Detection, and of feven of the letters; this bears to have been printed at Edinburgh by Thomas Waltem, 1572. The name of the place, as well as the printer, is allowed by all parties to be a manifest imposture. Our author, from observing the day of the month, from which the printing is faid to have been finished, has afferted that this edition was printed at London; but no stress can be laid upon a date found in a book, where every other circumstance with regard to the printing is allowed to be false. Blackwood, who (next to Lesly) was the best informed of all Mary's advocates in that age, affirms that the French edition of the Detection was published in France; "Il (Buchanan) a depuis adjousté a ceste declamation un petit libelle du pretendu mariage du Duc de Norfolk, et de la façon de son proc lesqu l'ont Edin Wal Mari Mari the I com depu Poite genti Fran of tw Franc must lator letter decla 1. 103 Stance many copy

The fo far W was f thefe

Good lished by hi been , as

nich

cot-

But

the

ous,

first

first

age this

r, a

end let-

five

atin

the

s to

em,

ter,

ith,

led,

onind

re-

ck-

ned

hat

ned

a

ndu

fon

proces, et la tout envoyè aux freres à la Rochelle, lesquels voyant qu'il pouvoit servir à la cause, l'ont traduit en François, et iceluy fut imprimé à Edinbourg, c'est à dire, à la Rochelle, par Thomas Waltem, nom aposté et fait à plaisir. Martyre de Marie. Jebb. ii. 256." The author of the Innocence de Marie goes farther, and names the French translator of the Detection. " Et icelui premierement composé comme il semble) par George Buchanan Escossoys, et depuis traduit en langue Françoise par un Hugonot, Poitevin (advocat de vocation) Camuz, foy difant gentilhomme, et un de plus remarquez seditieuz de France Jebb, i. 425: 443." The concurring testimony of two contemporary authors, whose residence in France afforded them sufficient means of information, must outweigh a slight conjecture. This French trans. lator does not pretend to publish the original French letters as written by the Queen herfelf; he expressly declares that he translated them from the Latin. Good. 1.103. Had our author attended to all these circumstances, he might have faved himself the labor of so many criticisms to prove that the present French copy of the letters is a translation from the Latin. The French editor himself acknowledges it, and, so far as I know, no person ever denied it.

We may observe that the French translator was so ignorant, as to affirm that Mary had written these letters, partly in French, partly in Scottish. Good. i. 103. Had this translation been published at London by Cecil, or had it been made by his direction, so gross an error would not have been admitted into it. This error, however, was owing to an odd circumstance. In the Scottish translation of the Detection, two or three sentences of the original French were prefixed to each letter, which breaking off with an &c. the Scottish translation of the whole letter followed. This method of printing translations was not uncommon in that age. The French editor observing this, foolishly concluded that the letters had been written partly in French, partly in Scottish.

If we carefully confider those few French sentences of each letter, which still remain, and apply to them that species of criticism, by which our author has examined the whole, a clear proof will arise, that there was a French copy not translated from the Latin, but which was itself the original from which both the Latin and Scottish have been translated. This minute criticism must necessarily be disagreeable to many readers; but luckily a few sentences only are to be examined, which will render it extremely short.

In the first letter, the French sentence prefixed to it ends with these words, y faisoit bon. It is plain this expression, veu ce que peut un corps sans cœur, is by no means a translation of cum plane perinde essem atque corpus sine corde. The whole sentence has a spirit and elegance in the French, which neither the Latin nor Scottish have retained. Jusques à ladinée is not a translation of toto prandit tempore; the Scottish translation, quhile denner-time, expresses the sense of the French more properly; for anciently quhile signified until as well as during. Je n'ay pastenu grand propos is not justly rendered neque contulerim sermonem cum quoquam; the phrase used in the

Fren gives the o latio fente evide have puis c 3. en plain fense I hav affair gotia. Latin tranfl

In fonnet not p the o The fure a from numb Now furd late a an ec

and 1

are p

autho

ifh

en-

ich.

ish

od

nat

ily

tly

ces em

nas nat

ın,

he

ite

ny

be

ed

un

15

em

a

ner

la ·

he

he

tly

pas

tu-

he

French copy is one peculiar to that language, and gives a more probable account of her behaviour than the other. Jugeant bien qu'il n'y faisoit bon, is not a translation of ut qui judicarent id non effe ex ufu. The French sentence prefixed to Lett. 2. ends with apprendre. It is evident that both the Latin and Scottish translations have omitted altogether these words, et toutefois je ne puis apprendre. The French sentence prefixed to Lett. 3, ends with presenter. Paye veille plus tard la haut is plainly no translation of diutius illic morata sum; the fense of the French is better expressed by the Scottish I have walkit later there up. Again, Pour excuser vostre affaire is very different from ad excusandum nostra negotia. The five remaining letters never appeared in Latin; nor is there any proof of their being ever translated into that language. Four of them, however, are published in French. This entirely overturns our author's hypothesis concerning the necessity of a translation into Latin.

In the Scottish edition of the Detection the whole fonnet is printed in French as well as in Scottish. It is not possible to believe that this Scottish copy could be the original from which the French was translated. The French consists of verses which have both measure and rhyme, and which, in many places, are far from being inelegant. The Scottish consists of an equal number of lines, but without measure or rhyme. Now no man could ever think of a thing so absurd and impracticable, as to require one to translate a certain given number of lines in prose into an equal number of verses, where both measure and rhyme were to be observed. The Scottish, on the contrary, appears manifestly to be a translation of the French; the phrases, the idioms, and many of the words are French, and not Scottish. Besides, the Scottish translator has, in several instances, mistaken the sense of the French, and in many more expresses the sense impersectly. Had the sonnet been forged, this could not have happened. The directors of the fraud would have understood their own work. I shall satisfy myself with one example, in which there is a proof of both my affertions. Stanza viii. ver. 9.

Pour luy j'attendz toute bonne fortune, Pour luy je veux garder fantè et vie, Pour luy tout vertu de suivre j'ay envie. For him I attend all good fortune, For him I will conserve helthe and lyse, For him I desire to ensue courage.

Attend in the first line is not a Scottish, but a French phrase; the two other lines do not express the sense of the French, and the last is absolute nonsense.

The eighth letter was never translated into French. It contains much refined mysticism about devices, a folly of that age, of which Mary was very fond, as appears from several other circumstances, particularly from a letter concerning impresas by Drummond of Hawthornden. If Mary's adversaries forged her letters, they were certainly employed very idly when they produced this.

From these observations it seems to be evident that there was a French copy of Mary's letters, of wh lation those Scotti of the to the vile ar Latin; we ha origina tranfla It is and Sc the Sc the fer And a tranflat bable from t Were might mentio Jum be plus tar

Thef
well for concern to the in

watche

chanan

he mig

error ir

of which the Latin and Scottish were only translations. Nothing now remains of this copy but those sew sentences which are prefixed to the Scottish translation. The French editor laid hold of these sentences, and tacked his own translation to them, which, so far as it is his work, is a servile and a very wretched translation of Buchanan's Latin; whereas, in those introductory sentences, we have discovered strong marks of their being originals, and certain proofs that they are not translated from the Latin.

t-

e-

1,

r.

d

d

I

za

a

ess

te

to ut

as

m-y's

ly

ent

rs,

It is apparent, too, from comparing the Latin and Scottish translations with these sentences, that the Scottish translator has more perfectly attained the fense and spirit of the French than the Latin. And as it appears that the letters were very early translated into Scottish, Good. ii. 76. it is probable that Buchanan made his translation not from the French, but from the Scottish copy. Were it necessary, several critical proofs of this might be produced. One that has been already mentioned feems decifive. Diutius illic morata Jum bears not the least ressemblance to j'ay veillé plus tard la haut; but if, instead of I walkit (i. e. watched) laiter there up, we suppose that Buchanan read I waitit, &c. this mistake into which he might so easily have fallen, accounts for the error in his translation.

These criticisms, however minute, appear to be well founded. But whatever opinion may be formed concerning them, the other arguments, with regard to the internal evidence, remain in full force.

The external proofs of the forgery of the Queen's letters, which our author has produced, appear at first fight to be specious, but are not more folid than that which we have already examined. These proofs may be classed under two heads. 1. The erroneous and contradictory accounts which are faid to be given of the letters, upon the first judicial production of them. In the Secret Council held Decem. 4, 1567, they are described " as her privie letters written and sub. scrivit with her awin hand. " Haynes, 454. Good.ii. 64. In the act of parliament, passed on the 15th of the fame month, they are described as "her privie letters writtin halelie with hir awin hand." Good. ib. 67. This diversity of description has been considered as a strong prefumption of forgery. The manner in which Mr. Hume accounts for this is natural and plausible, vol. vi. p. 491. And several ingenious remarks, tending to confirm his observations, are made in a pamphlet lately published, entitled, Mifcellaneous Remarks on the Inquiry into the Evidence against Mary Queen of Scots. To what they have observed it may be added, that the original act of Secret Council does not now exist; we have only a copy of it found among Cecil's papers, and the transcriber has been manifestly so ignorant, or so careless, that an argument founded entirely upon the supposition of his accuracy is of little force. Several errors into which he has fallen, we are enabled to point out, by comparing his copy of the act of Secret Council with the act of Parliament passed in consequence of it. The former contains a po tition to Parliament; in the latter the real pet tion tion i In the is cal was n of bar and v nomin proper party. and bl tyran, affectio virtuo In the eviden meanin of the f poffibil time w fuppos tainly 1 cording which is form set out 1567; [on the Linlithg one nig end of t

> the Que January

> > VOL.

een's

ar at

than

oofs

eous

iven

n of

they

fub-

d. ii.

h of

rivie I. ib.

ered

er in

and ious

Mif-

ainst ved

cret

opy iber

that

tion

rors

oint

cret

10 peti-

n

tion is resumed verbatim, and converted into a law. In the copy, the Queen's marriage with Bothwell is called "a priveit marriage," which it certainly was not; for it was celebrated, after proclamation of banns, in St. Giles's church three feveral days. and with public folemnity, but in the act it is denominated "ane pretendit marriage," which is the proper description of it according to the ideas of the party. In the copy, the Queen is faid " to be fo thrall and bludy affectionat to the privat appetite of that tyran," which is nonfense, but in the act it is "blindly affectionat." In the copy, it is faid, "all nobill and virtuous men abhorring their traine and company." In the act, "their tyrannie and companie," which is evidently the true reading, as the other has either no meaning, or is a mere tautology. 2. The other proof of the forgery of the letters, is founded upon the impossibility of reconciling the account, given of the time when, and the places from which, the letters are supposed to have been written, with what is certainly known concerning the Queen's motions. According to the paper published, Anders. ii. 269. which has been called Murray's Diary, and which is formed upon the authority of the letters, Mary let out from Edinburgh to Glasgow, January 21, 1567; she arrived there on the 23d; left that place on the 27th; she, together with the King, reached Linlithgow on the 28th, stayed in that town only one night, and returned to Edinburgh before the end of the month. But, according to Mr. Goodal, the Queen did not leave Edinburgh until Friday January 24th; as she stayed a night at Callendar, VOL. III \mathbf{M} fhe could not reach Glafgow sooner than the evening of Saturday the 25th, and the returned to Linlithgow on Tuesday the 28th. By consequence, the first letter, which supposes the Queen to have been at least four days in Glafgow, as well as the fecond letter, which bears date at Glasgow Saturday morning, whereas the did not arrive there until the evening, must be forge. ries. That the Queen did not fet out from Edinburgh fooner than the 24th of January, is evident (as he contends) from the public records, which contain a Precept of a confirmation of a life-rent by James Boyd to Margaret Chalmers, granted by the Queen, on the 24th of January, at Edinburgh; and likewise a letter of the Queen's dated at Edinburgh on the fame day, appointing James Inglis taylor to the Prince her fon. That the King and Queen had returned to Linlithgow on the 28th, appears from a deed, in which they appoint Andrew Ferrier keeper of their palace there, dated at Linlithgow January 28. Good. i. 118.

This has been represented to be not only a convincing, but a legal proof of the forgery of the letters said to be written by Mary; but how far it falls short of this will appear from the following confiderations:

1. It is evident, from a declaration or confession made by the Bishop of Ross, that before the conferences at York, which were opened in the beginning of October 1568, Mary had, by an artifice of Maitland's, got into her hands a copy of those letters which her subjects accused her of having written to Bothwell. Brown's trial of the Duke that th he wr the ye world. 1571. gross, as the days at burgh; gow Sa there ti felf, wl zealous age, sh contradi once, t quisition cate, th cover m tion, or formerly matter of stance of felf, or monstrati

a our

either of

rom cal

concernin Glasgow ng

W

er,

ur

ich

he

ge.

lin-

125 onby

by din-

nes

the

on

ap-

ere,

118.

con-

the

ar it

ving

fion

cone bearti-

y of

r of

f the

Duke of Norfolk, 31. 36. It is highly probable that the Bishop of Ross had seen the letters before he wrote the defence of Queen Mary's honor in the year 1570. They were published to all the world, together with Buchanau's Detection, A. D. 1571. Now, if they had contained an error fo gross, and, at that time, so obvious to discovery, as the supposing the Queen to have passed several days at Glafgow, while she was really at Edinburgh; had they contained a letter dated at Glafgow Saturday morning, though she did not arrive there till the evening; is it possible that she herfelf, who knew her own motions, or the able and zealous advocates who appeared for her in that age, should not have published and exposed this contradiction, and, by fo doing, have blafted, at once, the credit of fuch an imposture? In difquisitions which are naturally abstruse and intricate, the ingenuity of the latest author may discover many things which have escaped the attention, or baffled the fagacity of those who have formerly confidered the same subject. But when a matter of fact lay so obvious to view, this circumfance of its being unobserved by the Queen herlelf, or by any of her adherents, is almost a demonstration that there is some mistake or fallacy our author's arguments. So far are any, ither of our historians, or of Mary's defenders, rom calling in question the common account oncerning the time of the Queen's fetting out to Glasgow and her returning from it, that there is not the least appearance of any difference among them with regard to this point. But farther,

2. Those papers in the public records, on which our author rests the proof of his affertion concerning the Queen's motions, are not the originals fubscribed by the Queen, but copies only, or trans. lations of copies of those originals. It is not necessary, nor would it be very easy to render this intelligible to persons unacquainted with the forms of law in Scotland; but every Scotsman converfant in business will understand me, when I say that the precept of confirmation of the life-ren to Boyd is only a Latin copy or note of a precept which was fealed with the Privy-feal, on a war rant from the fignet-office, proceeding on a fig nature which bore date at Edinburgh the 24th of January; and that the deed in favor of Jame Inglis is the copy of a letter, fealed with the Privy feal, proceeding on a fignature which bore date a Edinburgh January 24. From all this we may argue with some degree of reason, that a proof founded on papers, which are so many remove distant from the originals, cannot but be ver lame and uncertain.

3. At that time all public papers were iffued in the name both of the King and Queen, by law, the King's subscription was no less requisit to any paper than the Queen's; and therefore un less the original signatures be produced, in orde to ascertain the particular days when each of them signed, or to prove that it was signed only by one of them, the legal proof arising from the figner figner nuary 4.

by the in a pleafur thefe and can came nicious declare be Hig

5. T

a great ceffity author' matter; any pa flances thing is King w yet the Fol. 166 Archiba bed by were to records a ment to the Que at Edin

on the 2

papers would be, that both the King and Queen figned them at Edinburgh on the 24th of Ja-

4. The dates of the warrants or precepts issued by the fovereign, in that age, feem to have been in a great measure arbitrary, and affixed at the pleasure of the writer; and, of consequence, these dates were seldom accurate, are often false, and can never be relied upon. This abuse became so frequent, and was found to be so pernicious, that an act of parliament, A. D. 1592. declared the fixing a falle date to a fignature to be High Treason.

ong

nich

con-

nals

anf-

ne-

this

rms

ver

fay

rent

cept

war

fig

24th

ame

rivy

te a

may

proof

ove

very ffued

uifit

e un

orde

then

ly by

thel

5. There still remain, in the public records, a great number of papers, which prove the necessity of this law, as well as the fallacy of our author's arguments. And though it be no easy matter, at the distance of two centuries, to prove any particular date to be falle, yet surprising instances of this kind shall be produced. thing is more certain from history, than that the King was at Glasgow 24th January 1567; and yet the record of fignatures from 1565 to 1582, fol. 16th, contains the copy of a fignature to Archibald Edmonston, said to have been subscribed by our Sovereigns, i. e. the King and Queen, at Edinburgh, January 24, 1567; so that if we were to rely implicitly upon the dates in the records of that age, or to hold our author's argument to be good, it would prove that not only the Queen, but the King too, was at Edinburgh on the 24th of January.

M 3

It appears from an original letter of the Bishop of Ross, that on the 25th of Octobre 1566, Mary lay at the point of death; Keith, App. 134; and yet a deed is to be found in the public records, which bears that it was signed by the Queen that day. Privy-seal; lib. 35. fol. 89. Ouch erlong *.

Bothwell seized the Queen as she returned from Stirling, April 24th, 1567, and (according to her own account) conducted her to Dunbar with all diligence. And, i. 95. But our author, relying on the dates of some papers which he found in the records, supposes that Bothwell allowed her to stop at Edinburgh, and to transact business there. Nothing can be more improbable than this supposition. We may therefore rank the date of the deed to Wright, Privy-seal, lib. 36. fol. 43. and which is mentioned by our author, vol. i. 124. among the instances of the false dates of papers which were issued in the ordinary course of business in that age. Our author has mistaken the date of the other paper to Forbes, ibid. it is signed April 14th, not April 24th.

If there be any point agreed upon in Mary's history, it is, that she remained at Dunbar from the time that Bothwell carried her thither, til fhe beg that No bear bar bear there feal be 1 Chai 157. 28th. Char Id. fuppo know that > the chappe not, as app by the From

the c

pende

of the dent to to den Ano these le

^{*} N. B. In some of the early editions of this Differtation another instance of the same nature with those which go be fore and follow was mentioned; but that, as has since been discovered, was founded on a mistake of the person employed to search the records, and is therefore omitted it this edition. The reasoning, however, in the Differtation stands still in sorce, notwithstanding this omission.

qor

ary

and

rds,

that

rom

her

all

g on e restop

hing

We

ight!

oned

es of

n the tho

rbes

lary's

from

tation

go be fince tted i

ertatio

the returned to Edinburgh along with him in the beginning of May. Our author himself allows that she resided twelve days there, vol. i. 367. Now though there are deeds in the records which bear that they were figned by the Queen at Dunbar during that time, yet there are others which bear that they were figned at Edinburgh; e. g. there is one at Edinburgh, April 27th, Privyseal, lib. 36. fol. 97. There are others said to be figned at Dunbar on that day. Lib. 31. Chart. No. 524. 526. Ib. lib. 32. No. 154. 157. There are some figned at Dunbar April 28th. Others at Edinburgh April 30th, lib. 32. Chart. No. 492. Others at Dunbar May 1st. ld. ibid. No. 158. These different charters suppose the Queen to have made so many unknown, improbable, and inconsistent journeys, that they afford the clearest demonstration that the dates in these records ought not to be depended on.

This becomes more evident from the date of the charter faid to be figned April 27th, which happened that year to be a Sunday, which was not, at that time, a day of business in Scotland, as appears from the books of federunt, then kept by the Lords of Session.

From this short review of our author's proof of the forgery of the Letters to Bothwell, it is evident that his arguments are far from amounting to demonstration.

Another argument against the genuineness of these letters is founded on the style and composition, which are faid to be altogether unworthy of the Queen, and unlike her real productions. It is plain, both from the great accuracy of composition in most of Mary's letters, and even from her folicitude to write them in a fair hand, that she valued herfelf on those accomplishments, and was desirous of being esteemed an elegant writer. But when she wrote at any time in a hurry, then many marks of inaccuracy appear. A remarkable instance of this may be found in a paper published, Good. ii. 301. Mary's letters to Bothwell were written in the utmost hurry; and yet under all the disadvantages of a translation, they are not destitute either of spirit or of energy. The manner in which the expresses her love to Bothwell has been pronounced indecent and even shocking. But Mary's temper led her to warm expressions of her regard; those refinements of delicacy, which now appear in all the commerce between the fexes, were, in that age, but little known, even among perfons of the highest rank. Among the Earl of Hardwicke's papers there is a series of letters, from Mary to the Duke of Norfolk, copied from the Harleian Library, P. 37. B. o. Fol. 88. in which Mary declares her love to that nobleman in language which would now be reckoned extremely indelicate; Hardw. State-Papers, i. 189, &c.

Some of Mary's letters to Bothwell were writ ten before the murder of her husband; some of them after that event, and before her marriage to Bothwell. Those which are prior to the death of her husband abound with the sondest expreshad too em fch bar pal bot me eve vife mai tak

fio

thi

meri agai impe

done

God

fuld

of hi is the excurters evide Mary was her a

Bothwe

the 15 ion

oli-

aed

ous

fhe

of

his 01.

ut-

of

irit

ffes

ent

ents

rce

ttle

nk.

s a lor-

37.

ove

OW.

ate-

writ

of age

ath

ref-

fions of her love to Bothwell, and excite fomething more than a suspicion that their familiarity had been extremely criminal. We find in them, too, some dark expressions, which her enemies employed to prove that she was no stranger to the schemes which were forming against her hus-Of this kind are the following band's life. passages, "Alace! I nevir dissavit ony body; bot I remit me altogidder to zour will. Send me advertisement quhat I fall do, and quhatsaever thing come therof, I fall obey zow. Advise to with zourself, gif ze can find out ony mair fecret inventioun by medicine, for he fuld tak medicine and the bath at Craigmillar." Good. ii. 22. "See not hir quhais fenzeit teiris fuld not be fa meikle praisit and estemit, as the trew and faithfull travellis quhilk I fustene for to merit hir place. For obtaining of the quhilk, agains my natural, I betrayis thame that may impesche me. God forgive me," &c. Ibid. 27. "I have walkit later thairup, than I wald have done, gif it had not been to draw fomething out of him, quhilk this berer will schaw zow, quhilk is the fairest commodity that can be offerit to excuse zour affairis." Ibid. 32. From the letters posterior to the death of her husband, it is evident that the scheme of Bothwell's seizing Mary by force, and carrying her along with him, was contrived in concert with herself, and with her approbation '.

That letters of fo much importance as those of Mary to Bothwell should have been entirely lost, appears to many alto-

WITH respect to the Sonnets, Sir David Dalrymple has proved clearly, that they must gether unaccountable. After being produced in England before Elizabeth's commissioners, they were delivered back by them to the Earl of Murray. Good. ii. 235. He seems to have kept them in his possession during life. After his death, they sell into the hands of Lenox his successor, who restored them to the Earl of Morton. Good. ii. 91. Though it be not necessarily connected with any of the questions which gave occasion to this Dissertation, it may perhaps satisfy the curiosity of some of my readers to inform them, that, after a very diligent search, which has lately been made, no copy of Mary's letters to Both well can be found in any of the public libraries in Great Britain. The only certain intelligence concerning them, since the time of their being delivered to Morton, was communicated by the accurate Dr. Birch.

Extract of the letters of Robert Bowes, Efq; ambassador from Queen Elizabeth to the King of Scotland, written to Sir Francis Walsingham, secretary of state, from the original register book of Mr. Bowes's letters, from 15th of August 1582, to 28th September 1583, in the possession of Christopher Hunter, M. D. of Durham.

1582, 8th November, from Edinburgh.

Albeit I have been borne in hand, That the coffer where in were the originals of letters between the Scottish Queen and the Earl of Bothwell, had been delivered to fundry hands, and thereby was at present wanting, and unknown where it rested, yet I have learned certainly by the Prior of Pluscardyne's means, that both the coffer and also the writings are come, and now remain with the Earl of Gowrie, who, I perceive, will be hardly intreated to make delivery to her Majesty's desire.

This time past I have expended in fearthing where the coffer and writings were, wherein without the help of the Prior! King

fhoul and

Be menti of the vail to and p that n estay fhould good them tody . ready that h thereb and gr inoved jesty f ed to as mig the pu in his ly info din; v enquir or no. thereu Prior is to be

letters

have been written after the murder of the King, and prior to Mary's marriage with Both-

vid

nust

fore

hem kept

fell m to

effa-

fion

ome

rch,

oth-

Bri-

ince

uni-

ador

to

inal

gust

oher

rgh.

ere-

ids.

e it car-

are per-

Ma-

cof-

ior l

fhould have found great difficulty; now I will effay Gowrie, and of my success you shall be shortly advertised.

12th of November 1582, from Edinburgh.

Because I had both learned, that the casket and letters mentioned in my last, before these were come to the possession of the Earl of Gowrie, and also found that no mean might prevail to win the fame out of his hands without his own confent and privity; in which behalf I had employed fit instruments, that nevertheless profited nothing; therefore, I attempted to essay himself, letting him know that the said casket and letters should have been brought to her Majesty by the offer and good means of good friends, promising to have delivered them to her Majesty before they came into his hands and custody, and knowing that he did bear the like affection, and was ready to pleafure her Majesty in all things, and chiefly in this that had been thus far tendered to her Majesty, and which thereby should be well accepted, and with princely thanks and gratuity be requited to his comfort and contentment; I moved him that they might be a present to be sent to her Majefty from him, and that I might cause the same to be conveyed to her Majesty, adding hereunto such words and arguments as might both stir up a hope of liberality, and also best effect the purpose. At the first he was loth to agree that they were in his possession; but I let him plainly know that I was certainly informed that they were delivered to him by Sanders Jardin; whereupon he pressed to know who did so inform me, enquiring whether the fons of the earl of Morton had done it or no. I did not otherwise in plain terms deny or answer thereunto, but that he might think that he had told me, as the Prior is ready to avouch, and well pleased that I shall give him to be the author thereof; after he had faid (though) all these letters were in his keeping (which he would neither grant nor well. But as hardly any part of my narrative is founded upon what is contained in the

deny) yet he might not deliver them to any person without the consents and privities, as well of the King, that had interest therein, as also of the rest of the noblemen enterprisers of the action against the King's mother, and that would have them kept as an evidence to warrant and make good that ac. tion. And albeit I replied, that their action in that part touch. ing the affignation of the crown to the King by his mother, had received fuch establishment, confirmation, and strength, by acts of parliament and other public authority and instruments, as neither should that case be suffered to come in debate or question. nor fuch fcrolls and papers ought to be shewed for the strength. ening thereof, fo as these might well be left and be rendered to the hands of her Majesty, to whom they were destined before they fell in his keeping; yet he would not be removed or fatisfied; concluding, after much reasonings, that the Earl of Morton, nor any other that had the charge and keeping thereof, durst at any time make delivery; and because it was the first time that I had moved him therein, and that he would gladly both answer her Majesty's good expectation in him, and also perform his duty due to his sovereign and associates in the action aforesaid; therefore he would seek out the faid casket and letters, at his return to his house, which he thought should be within short time; and upon finding of the same, and better advice and consideration had of the cause, he would give further answer. This resolution I have received as to the thing; and for the present I could not better, leaving him to give her Majesty such testimony of his good will towards her, by his frank dealing herein, as she may have cause to confirm her Highnesses good opinion conceived already of him, and be thereby drawn to greater goodness towards him. I shall still labour him both by myself and also by all other means; but I greatly distrust the defired fuccess herein.

So

han

botl

and face fhall fafe hath have the open have and may of hall

them

be la

not :

this s

readi. their

perfo

benef

wards cepta

fcrup

culto

Solve

Sonnets, and as in this Differtation I have been constrained to dwell longer upon minute and ver-

ft

of

ve

C-

hıd

ts

as

n,

ed

e-

d

ne

p-

it

ne

in

Ò.

ne

ne

of

ne

sv

t-

118

ne

nd-

nd

ed

24th of November 1582, from Edinburgh.

For the recovery of the letters in the coffer, come to the hands of the Earl of Gowrie, I have lately moved him earnestly therein, letting him know the purpose of the Scottish Queen, both giving out that the letters are counterfeited by her rebels. and also seeking thereon to have them delivered to her or defaced, and that the means which she will make in this behalf shall be so great and effectual, as these writings cannot be fafely kept in that realm without dangerous offence of him that hath the custody thereof, neither shall he that is once known to have them be fuffered to hold them in his hands. Herewith I have at large opened the perils likely to fall to that action, and the parties therein, and particularly to himself that is now openly known to have the possession of these writings, and I have lettin him fee what furety it shall bring to the faid cause and all the parties therein, and to himself, that these writings may be with fecrecy and good order committed to the keeping of her Majesty, that will have them ready whensoever any use shall be for them, and by her Highnesses countenance defend them and the parties from such wrongful objections as shall be laid against them, offering at length to him, that if he be not fully fatisfied herein, or doubt that the rest of the associates shall not like of the delivery of them to her Majesty in this good manner, and for the interest rehearsed, that I shall readily, upon meeting and conference with them, procure their affent in this part (a matter more easy to offer than to perform); and laftly, moving him that (for the fecrecy and benefit of the cause, and that her Majesty's good opinion towards himself may be firmly settled and confirmed by his acceptable forwardness herein) he would, without needless scruple, frankly commit these writings to her Majesty's good cultody for the good uses received. After long debate he resolved, and said, that he would unfeignedly shew and do to bal criticisms, than may be interesting or agreeable to many of my readers, I shall rest satisfied her Majesty all the pleasure that he might without offence to the King his Sovereign, and prejudice to the affociates in the action, and therefore he would first make search and view the faid letters, and herein take advice what he might do, and how far he might fatisfy and content her Majesty; promising thereon to give more resolute answer; and he concluded flatly, that after he had found and feen the writings, that he might not make delivery of them without the privity of the King. Albeit I flood long with him against his resolution in this point, to acquaint the King with this matter before the letters were in the hands of her Majesty, letting him see that his doings there should admit great danger to the cause; yet I could not remove him from it. It may be that he meaneth to put over the matter from himself to the King, upon fight whereof I shall travel effectually to obtain the King's confent, that the letters may be committed to her Majesty's keeping, thinking it more easy to prevail herein with the King, in the present love and affection that he beareth to her Highness; than to win any thing at the hands of the affociates in the action, whereof fome principal of them now come and remain at the devotion of the King's mother; in this I shall still call on Gowrie, to fearch out the coffer, according to his promife; and as I shall find him minded to do therein, so shall I do my best and whole endeavour to effect the success to her Majesty's best contentment.

2d December 1582, from Edinburgh.

Because I saw good opportunity offered to renew the matter to the Earl of Gowrie for recovery of the letters in the coffer in his hands, therefore I put him in mind thereof; whereupon he told me, that the Duke of Lenox had fought earneftly to have had those letters, and that the King did know where they were, fo as they could not be delivered to her with parti the F

HA

havir fylter it ma fenter clusio have

On

or lo fion t ment conce perpet teltify vering accuse

Majesty tended fo far a the affor this to 1 do my When

A. D. 1 mother's tremely known a observed it is imp with referring, for information concerning every particular relative to the Sonnets, to Remarks on the History of Scotland, Chap. XI.

HAVING thus stated the proof on both sides; having examined at so great a length the different systems with regard to the facts in controversy; it may be expected that I should now pronounce sentence. In my opinion, there are only two conclusions, which can be drawn from the facts which have been enumerated.

ce

in

be

ng

ht

g.

118

TS

is I

th

ht

ıt,

ne s;

in all

e;

13

7'8

h.

it-

of-

e-

11-

W

One, that Bothwell, prompted by his ambition or love, encouraged by the Queen's known aver-fion to her husband, and presuming on her attachment to himself, struck the blow without having concerted with her the manner or circumstances of perpetrating that crime. That Mary, instead of testifying much indignation at the deed, or discovering any resentment against Bothwell, who was accused of having committed it, continued to load

Majesty without the King's privity and consent, and he pretended to be still willing to pleasure her Majesty in the same, so far as he may with his duty to the King and to the rest of the associates in that action; but I greatly distrust to effect this to her Majesty's pleasure, wherein, nevertheless, I shall do my uttermost endeavours.

Whether James VI. who put the Earl of Gowrie to death, A.D. 1584, and feized all his effects, took care to destroy his mother's letters, for whose honour he was at that time extremely zealous; whether they have perished by some unknown accident; or whether they may not still remain unobserved among the archives of some of our great families, it is impossible to determine.

him with marks of her regard, conducted his trial in such a manner as rendered it impossible to discover his guilt, and soon after, in opposition to all the maxims of decency or of prudence, voluntarily agreed to a marriage with him, which every consideration should have induced her to detest. By this verdict, Mary is not pronounced guilty of having contrived the murder of her husband, or even of having previously given her consent to his death; but she is not acquitted of having discovered her approbation of the deed, by her behaviour towards him who was the author of it.

The other conclusion is that which Murray and his adherents labored to establish, "That James, sometymme Erle of Bothwile, was the chiefe executor of the horribill and unworthy murder, perpetrat in the person of umquhile King Henry of gude memory, sader to our Souveraine Lord, and the Queenis lauchfull husband; sa was she of the foreknowledge, counsall, devise, perswadar and commander of the said murder to be done." Good. ii. 207.

Which of these conclusions is most agreeable to the evidence that has been produced, I leave my readers to determine.

APPENDIX.

A M for the

I M P R felicity perpetua be made but one If the with En Scotland as is pre feeketh

cife, th

a foot-ft

There
of a men of fuch a
of the F betwixt Theref

mandmer 1 5th Au in fecretar

Vo

APPENDIX.

Nº. I. (Vol. I. p. 216.)

A MEMORIAL of certain points meet for restoring the realm of SCOTLAND to the antient weale.

IMPRIMIS, it is to be noted, that the best worldly felicity that Scotland can have, is either to continue in a perpetual peace with the kingdom of England, or to be made one monarchy with England, as they both make but one island, divided from the rest of the world.

If the first is sought, that is, to be in perpetual peace with England, then must it necessarily be provided, that Scotland be not so subject to the appointments of France, as is presently, which, being an antient enemy to England, seeketh always to make Scotland an instrument, to exercise, thereby, their malice upon England, and to make a soot-stool thereof to look over England as they may.

Therefore, when Scotland shall come into the hands of a mere Scottish man in blood, then may there be hope of such accord; but as long as it is at the commandment of the French, there is no hope to have accord long betwint these two realms.

Therefore feeing it is at the French King's commandment by reason of his wife, it is to be considered

Vol. III.

to un-

ery eft.

ent

by

or

ay

hat

the

hy

ile

ur

ull

e,

of 07.

ble

ve

1

^{1 5}th August 1559, Cotton. Lib. Cal., B. 10. fol. 17. From a copy in secretary Cecil's hand.

for the weale of Scotland, that until she have children, and during her absence out of the realm, the next heir to the crown, being the house of the Hamiltons, should have regard hereto, and to see that neither the crown be imposed nor wasted; and, on the other side, the nobility and commonalty ought to force that the laws and the old customs of the realm be not altered, neither that the country be not impoverished by taxes, empress, or new imposts, after the manner of France; for provision wherein, both by the law of God and man, the French king and his wife may be moved to reform their misgovernance of the land.

And for this purpose, it were good that the nobility and commons joined with the next heir of the crown, to seek due reformation of such great abuses as tend to the ruin of their country, which must be done before the French grow too strong and insolent.

First. That it may be provided, by consent of the three estates of the land, that the land may be free from all idolatry like as England is; for justification whereof, if any free general council may be had where the Pope of Rome have not the seat of judgment, they may offer to show their cause to be most agreeable to Christ's religion.

Next, to provide that Scotland might be governed, in all rules and officers, by the antient blood of the realm, without either captains, lieutenants, or foldiers, as all other Princes govern their countries, and especially that the forts might be in the hands of mere Scottish men.

Thirdly, that they might never be occasioned to enter into wars against England, except England should give the first cause to Scotland.

Fourthly, that no nobleman of Scotland should receive pension of France, except it were whilst he did serve in France, for otherwise thereby the French would should corrupt many to betray their own country.

Fifthly, that no office, abbey, living, or commodity, be given to any but mere Scottish men, by the assenta the three estates of the realm.

in the in the Sev how the how me govern

Six

appoin

In the que provision estates
the sais same b commit

crown,

Final
is likely affection is please for the circums
French.
And

goodness to come the hear Sixth, that there be a council in Scotland appointed in the queen's absence, to govern the whole realm, and in those cases not to be directed by the French.

Seventhly, that it be by the said three estates appointed how the queen's revenue of the realm shall be expended, how much the queen shall have for her portion and estate during her absence, how much shall be limited to the governance and defence of the realm, how much yearly appointed to be kept in treasure.

In these, and such like points, if the French king and the queen be found unwilling, and will withstand these provisions for the weale of the land, then hath the three estates of the realm authority, forthwith, to intimate to the said king and queen their humble requests; and if the same be not effectually granted, then humbly they may commit the governance thereof to the next heir of the crown, binding the same also to observe the laws and antient rights of the realm.

Finally, If the queen shall be unwilling to this, as it is likely she will, in respect of the greedy and tyrannous affection of France, then it is apparent that Almighty God is pleased to transfer from her the rule of the kingdom for the weale of it, and this time must be used with great circumspection, to avoid the deceipts and tromperies of the French.

ldren,

heirs

Should

Crown

, the

vs and

er that ft, or

ovision

French

milgo.

obility

crown,

end to before

of the

from

ereof,

Pope

y offer

ligion.

ed, in

realm,

as all

y that

en. o enter

d give

receive d ferve

nodity,

And then may the realm of Scotland confider, being once made free, what means may be devised by God's goodness, to accord the two realms, to endure for time to come at the pleasure of Almighty God, in whose hands the hearts of all princes be.

N°. II. (Vol. I. p. 226.)

A letter of Maitland of Lethington's, thus directed:

To my loving friend James. Be this delivered at London.

the

arm of c

conj ftren

land well

that enen by t

off F at ha

upon

tyme

of in prent

how of a f

Th At qu

off the redout

jugem best.

fyde,

than a

brack

partly

now h

to the

zour pl

to have

espy ho

tymes,

us in n

of the

UNDERSTAND by the last letter I received from yow, that discoursing with zour countrymen upon the matter of Scotland, and commoditeys may enfew to that realm hereafter, giff ze presently assist ws with zour forces, ze find a nombre of the contrary advise, doubting that we fall not at length be found trufty friends, nor mean to contynew in constant ametye, albeit we promise, but only for avoyding the prefent danger make zow to ferve our turne, and after being delivered, becum enemies as of before. For profe quhareof, they alledge things that have past betwixt ws heretofore, and a few presumptiones tending to the fam end, all grounded upon mistruft; quhilks, at the first sicht, have some shewe of apparance, gif men wey not the circumstances of the matter; but gif they will confer the tyme past with the present, consider the nature of this caus, and effate of our contrye, I doubt not but jugement fal be able to banish mistrust. And first, I wad wish ze should examine the causes of the old inmine betwixt the realms of England and Scotland, and quhat moved our ancestors to enter into lique with the Frenche; quhilks by our storeys and registres off antiquiteys appear to be The princes of England, some tyme, alledging a certain kynde of foveraintye over this realm; some tyme upon hye courage, or incited by incursions off our bordourares, and femblable occasions, mony tymes enterprised

^{2 20}th January 1559-60. Cott. Lib. Cal. B. ix. From the original in his own hand.

di-

ered

from mat-

that ces,

t we

n te

only

our

s of

have ding

, at

men

they

the

oubt

firft,

nitye

uhat

che;

tobe

ng a

tyme

bor-

rifed

nal in the conquest of ws, and sa far furth preist it by force off armes, that we' wer dryven to great extramiteys, by loss of our princes, our noblemen, and a good part of our contrey, fa that experience taught ws that our owne frength was scarse sufficient to withstand the force of England. The Frenche zour auncient enemies, confidering well how nature had fa placed ws in a island with zow, that na nation was able fa to annoye England as we being enemyes, foucht to joine ws to theym in ligue, tending by that meane to detourne zour armyes from the invasion off France, and occupy zow in the defence of zour country at hame, offering for that effect to bestowe some charges upon ws, and for compassing off theyr purpos, choysed a tyme to propone the matter, quhen the fresche memory of injuris lately receaved at zour hands, was fa depely prented on our hartes, that all our myndes were occupied how to be revenged, and arme ourfelfes with the powar of a forayne prince against zour enterprises thereafter.

This wes the beginning off our confederacy with France. At quhilk tyme, our cronicles maks mention, that some of the wyfest forefaw the perril, and small frute should redound to us thereof at lenth: zit had affection sa blinded jugement, that the advise of the maist part overcame the The maist part of all querells betwixt ws fince that tyme, at least quhen the provocation came on our lyde, hes ever fallen out by theyr procurement rather than any one caus off our felves: and quhenfaever we brack the peace, it come partly by theyr intysements, partly to eschew the conquest intended by that realm. But now hes God's providence altered the case, zea changed it to the plat contrary, that now hes the Frensche taken zour place, and we, off very jugement, becum desyrous to have zow in thyr rowme. Our eyes are opened, we elpy how uncareful they have been of our weile at all tymes, how they made ws ever to ferve theyr turne, drew us in maift dangerous weys for theyre commodite, and nevertheless wad not styck, oft tymes, against the natour of the ligue, to contrak peace, leaving ws in weyr. We fae that their support, off late zeres, wes not grantit for any affection they bare to ws, for pytie they had off our estate, for recompense of the lyke friendship schawin to theym in tyme off theyr afflictiones, but for ambition, and infaciable cupiditie to reygne, and to mak Scotland ane accessary to the crown of France. This was na friendly office, but mercenary, craving hyre farre exceeding the proportion of theyr deferving; a hale realm for the defence of a part, We see theym manifestly attempt the thing we suspected off zow; we feared ze ment the conquest off Scotland, and they are planely fallen to that work; we hated zow for doubt we had ze ment evill towards ws, and fall we love theym, quhilks bearing the name off frends, go about to bring ws in maift vile fervitude? Gif by zour frendly support at this tyme, ze fall declare that not only feek ze not the ruyne of our country, but will preserve the libertie thereof from conquest by strangeares, fall not the occasion off all inimite with zow, and ligue with theym, be taken away? The causes being removed, how fall the effectes remane? The fear of conquest made us to hate zow and love theym, the cais changed, quhen we fee theym planely attempt conquest, and zow schaw ws friendship, fall we not hate theym, and favour zow? Gif we have schawne sa great constance, continuing sa mony zeares in amity with theym, off quhome we had fa small commodite, quhat fall move us to breake with zow, that off all nations may do ws greatest plesour?

But ze will fay, this matter may be reconcyled, and then frends as off before. I think weill peace is the end of all weyr, but off this ze may be affured, we will never fa far trust that reconciliation, that we will be content to forgo the ametye of England, nor do any thing may bring ws in suspicion with zow. Giff we wold, at any tyme to please theym, break with zow, should we not, befydes the loss off estimation and discrediting off ourselses, perpetually expone our common weill to a maist manifest danger, and becum a prey to theyr tyranny? Quhais aid could we implore, being destitute of zour friendship, gif might ' to tak hes tal impyri any th fed th tempte not el forefee fludy our fa friend days o the VI off am differe braced theyr But no off the any n trine, take to it may tyme, cumsta by ne comme

comm

But in insepar

violati

man,

fufficie

countr

they o

it for ff our

vin to

, and

d ane

iendly

g the fence

g we

ft off

; we

WS,

e off

? Gif

e that

t will

eares,

ligue

oved.

made

guhen

W WS

? Gif

mony

fmall

that

and

e end

never nt to bring

tyme

fydes

perdan-

they off new wald attempt theyr formar enterprise? Quhat nation myght help ws giff they wald, or wald giff they might? and it is lyke eneuch, thay will not flick hereafter to tak theyr tyme off ws, quhen displesour and grudge hes taken depe rute on baith fydes, seeing ambition has sa impyrit ower theyr reason, that before we had ever done any thing myght offend theym, but by the contrary pleafed them by right and wrang, they did not stick to attempte the subversion of our hale state. I wald ze should not esteeme ws sa barayne of jugement, that we cannot foresee our awne perril; or sa foolische, that we will not fudy by all gode means to entertayne that thing may be our fafetye; quhilk confiftes in all the relaying of zour friendships. I pray zow consider in like case, when, in the days of zour princes off maift noble memory king Henry the VIII. and king Edward the VI. meanes were opened off amytye betwixt baith realms; was not at all tymes the difference of religion the onlyy stay they were not embraced? Did not the craft of our clergy and power of they adherents subvert the devices of the better fort? But now has God off his mercy removed that block furth off the way; now is not theyr practice lyke to tak place any mare, when we ar comme to a conformity off doctine, and profes the same religion with zow, quhilk I take to be the ftraytest knot of amitye can be devised. Giff it may be alledged, that some of our countrymen, at ony tyme, violated theyr promis? giff ze liff to way the circumstances, ze fall find the promis is rather brought on by necessite, after a great overthraw off our men, then comme of fre will, and tending ever to our great incommodite and decay off our haill state, at leist sa taken. But in this case, sall the preservation of our libertie be inleparably joined with the keping off promesse, and the violation of our fayth cast ws in maist miserable servitude. So that giff neyther the fear off God, reverence of man, religion, othe, promise, nor warldly honestye wes fufficient to bynd, us, yet fall the zeale of our native countrey, the maintenance off our own estate, the safety of our wyffes and childrene from flavery, compell ws to kepe promisse. I am assured, it is trewly and sincerely ment on our part to continew in perpetual ametye with zow; it sall be uttered by our proceedings. Giff ze be as desyrous of it as we ar, assurances may be devysed, quharby all partyes will be out of doubte. There be gode meanes to do it, sit instruments for the purpos, tyme serves weill, the inhabitants of baith realms wish it. God hes wrought in the people's hartes on bayth parties a certaine still agreement upon it, never did, at any tyme, so mony things concurre at ones to knyt it up, the disposition of a few, quhais harts are in Godis hands, may mak up the hale. I hope he quha hes begun his work, and mainteyned it quhile now, by the expectation of man, fall perfyte it.

I pray zow, let not zour men dryve tyme in confulta. tion, quhether ze fall support ws or no. Seyng the mater speaketh for itself, that ze mon take upon zow the de. fence off our caus, giff ze have any respect for zour awne Their preparatives in France, and levying of men in Germany, (quheyroff I am lately advertised) ar not altogydder ordeyned for us, ze ar the mark they state at; they feke our realme, but for ane entrey to zours. Giff they should directly schaw hostilite to zow, they knaw zo wald mak redy for theyme, therefor they do, by indirect meanes, to blind zow, the thing, they dare not as zit planely attempte. They seme to invade us to th' end that having affembled theyr havle forces fa nere zour bordours, they may unlok it to attack zow: It is ane of theyr ald fetches, making a schew to one place, to lyght on ane other. Remember how covertly zour places about Boulougne were affaizeit, and carryed away, ze being in peace as now. How the enterprise of Calais was fynely dissembled, I think ze have not sa sone forgotten. Beware of the third, prevent theyr policy by prudence. Giff ze se not the lyke disposition presently in theym, ze fe nathing. It is a groffe ignorance to misknaw, what all nations planely fpeks of. Tak hede ze zay not hereafter, was men fulpe lange now provide with they

66 F

wyfe

quki

look get offere oppor fleapin great after felt, and tr occasio Quhill quha fall no luft to fortune gode I brayne think y that he then b

It if Frensch at ham theyr g ws to cerely

with ze be ysed.

re be tyme

God

a cer-

e, fo

ifpofi-

mak

and

man,

fulta-

mater

de-

awne men

r not e at; Giff

knaw

y in-ot as zour ne of

lyght

about ng in

ynely

Be-

ence.

, ze

t all

fter,

"Had I wist;" ane uncomely sentence to procede off a wyse man's mouth. That is onwares chanced on to zow, gukilk zow commonly wissed, that this countrey myght be divorfed from the Frensche, and is sa comme to pass as was maift expedient for zow. For giff by your intyfement we had taken the mater in hand, ze myght have suspected we would have been untrusty frends, and na langer continued stedfaste, then perril had appeared. now, quhat off our felf, we have conceyved the hatered, provoked by private injuries, and that theyr evil dealing with ws hes deferved our inimitye, let no man dobte but they fall fynde ws ennemyes in ernest, that fa ungently hes demeyned our countrey, and at quhais hands we can look for nathing but all extremitye, giff ever they may get the upper hand. Let not this occasion, sa happely offered, escape zow : giff ze do, neglecting the present opportunitie, and hoping to have ever gode luk comme fleaping upon zow, it is to be feared zour enemye waxe fo great, and fa strang, that afterwards quhen ze wald, ze fall not be able to put him down; and then, to zour fmart, after the time, ze will acknowledge zour error. Ze have felt, by experience, quhat harme cometh of overfight, and trusting to zour enemyes promesse. We offer zow the occasion, quheyrby zour former losses may be repayred. Quhilk gif ze let over flyde, fuffering ws to be overrun, quha then, I pray zow, fall flay the Frensche, that they fall not invade zow in zour own boundes, fick it is their lust to reygne, that they can neither be content with theyr fortune present, nor rest and be satisfied when they have gode luck, but will still follow on, having in theyr awne brayne conceaved the image of fa great a conquest, quhat think ye sal be the end? Is ther any of sa small jugement, that he doth not foresee already, that theyr hail force sall then be bent against zow?

It fall not be amis, to confider in quhat case the Frensche be presently. Theyr estate is not always sa calme at hame as every man thinketh. And trewly it wes not theyr great redines for weyr made theym to tak this mater on hand, at this tyme, but rather a vayne trust in their awne policy, thinking to have found na resistance, their opinion hes deceaved theym, and that makes them now amased. The estates off the empire (as I heare) has suted restitution off the Imperial towns Metz, Toull, and Verdun. quhilk may grow to some befynes; and all thing is not a calme within theyr awne countrey, the lefs fit they be presently for weyr, the mare opportune esteme ye the time Giff the lyke occasion were offered to the Frenche against zow, wey, how gladly would they embrace it. Are ze not eschamed of zour fleuth, to spare theym that hes already compassed zour destruction, giff theym wer able? Consider with zour self quhilks is to be choysed? To weye against them out with zour realme or within? Giff quhill ze sleape, we fal be overthrowne, then fall they not fayle to fute zow in zour awne countrey, and use ws as a fote stole to overloke zow. But some will say, perhaps, they meane it not. It is foly to think they wald not giff they wer able, quhen before hand they stick not to giff zour armes, and usurpe the style of zour crown. Then quhat difference there is to camp within zowr awne bounds or without, it is manifest. Giff twa armyes should camp with in zowr country, but a moneth; albeit ye receaved na other harme, zit should zowr losse be greatar, nor all the charge ze will nede to bestow on our support will draw to, befydes the dishonour

Let not men, that eyther lack gode advise, or ar not for particular respects weill affected to the caus, move zow to subtract zour helping hand, by alleging things not apparent, for that they be possible. It is not, I grant, unpossible that we may receave conditiones of peace; but I see little likelyhode that our ennemyes will offer we sik as will remove all mistrust, and giff we wald have accepted other, the mater had bene lang or now compounded. Let zow not be moved for that they terme we rebelles, and distances our just querell with the name of conspiracy against our soverayne. It is hir hyenes right we manetayne. It is the liberty off hir realm we study to pre-imposed the lawf plan real real our be to our

Quha

not

ferv

knav

niste the our peop falou our s

that

rewli

fam; with I of Sc It fal the a ze fall the confider of more

fowm being the co their

their

now

futed dun,

lot a

y be

time

nsche Are

t hes

weyr

uhill

fayle

fote

they

they

Zour

quhat

ds or

with

d na

or all draw

r not

e zow

t ap-

, un-

but 1

fik as

epted

nded.

elles,

piracy

mane-

pre-

ferve, with the hazard of our lyves. We are not (God knaweth) comme to this poynt for wantones, as men impatient of rewll, or willing to schake of the zoke of government, but ar drawne to it by necessite, to avoyde the tyranny of strangeares, seaking to defraude ws of lawful government. Giff we should suffer trangeares to plant themselffes peaceably in all the strenthes of our realme, fortify the seyportes, and maist important places, as ane entre to a plain conquest, now in the minoritie of our foverane, beyng furth of the realme, should we not be thought oncareful off the common weill, betrayares of our native countrey, and evill subjects to hir majeste? Quhat other opinion could sche have off ws? Might she not justly hereafter call ws to accompt, as negligent ministeres? Giff strangeares should be thus suffered to broke the chefe offices, beare the hail rewll, alter and pervert our lawes and liberty at theyr plefour; myght not the people esteem our noblemen unworthy the place of counfalours? We mean na wyse to subtrak our obedience from our soverane, to defraud hir hyenes off her dew reverence, rents and revenues off hir crown. We feke nathing but that Scotland may remane, as of before, a fre realme, rewlit by hir hyenes and hir ministeres borne men of the fam; and that the fuccession of the crown may remane with the lawful blode.

I wald not ze fould not fa lyttil esteme the friendship of Scotland, that ze juged it not worthy to be embraced. It sall be na small commodite for zow to be delivered off the anoyance of so neir a nyghtbour, quhais inimitye may more trouble zow, then off any other nation albeit twyss as puissant, not lyeng dry marche with zow. Besides that ze sall not nede to seare the invasion off any prince lackying the commodite to invade zow by land, on our land. Consider quhat superstuous charge ze bestowe on the fortification and keping of Barwick; quhilk ze may reduce to a mean sowme, having we to frendes. The realme of Ireland being of natour a gode and fertill countrey, by reason off the continewall unquietnes and lak of policey, ze knaw to

to ji

will

defei

perfi

to jo

to th

with

adjoi

fhall

a bo

there

Rand

SIN

your

At thi

receiv cufeth for th

the pa

The f

Thursdoor the then to who in the oth

For Fi

have c

XXIV.

4 An (

be rather a burthen unto zow then great advantage; and giff it were peaceable may be very commodious. For pacification quhayroff, it is not onknowne to zow quhat fervice we ar abill to do. Refuse not theyr commoditeys, besides mony ma quhen they ar offred. Quhilks albeit I study not to amplify and dilate, yet is na other countrey able to offer yow the lyke, and are the rather to be embraced, for that zour auncestors, by all meanes, maist ernestly suted our amity, and yet it was not theyr hap to come by it. The mater hes almaist carryed me beyond the boundes of a lattre, quharfor I will leave to trouble zow after I have geven you this note. I wald wifs that ze, and they that ar learned, fould rede the twa former orations of Demosthenes, called Olynthiacæ, and considere quhat counfall that wyfe oratour gave to the Athenians, his countrymen, in a lyke case; quhilk hes so great affinite with this cause of ours, that every word therof myght be applyed to our purpos There may ze learne of him quhat advise is to be followed, when zour nyghtbours hous is on fyre: Thus I bid zow heartily fareweill. From Sant Andrews, the 20th of January, 1559.

N°. III. (Vol. I. p. 234.)

Part of a letter from Tho. Randolph to Sir William Cecil, from the camp before Leith, 29th of April 1560.

WILL only, for this time, discharge myself of my promise to the earl of Huntly, who so desyreth to be recommended to you, as one, who with all his heart favoureth this cause, to the uttermost of his power. Half the words that come out of his mouth were able to perfuade an unexperienced man to speak farther in his behalf, than I dare be bold to write. I leave it to your honour

³ An Original in the Paper Office.

and

For

uhat

teys,

eit I

ntrey

o be maist

ap to yond

zow and tions

quhat his finite

ht be guhat ous is

Sant

liam

n of f my

to be

heart

Half

per-

ehalf,

onour

to judge of him, as of a man not unknown to you, and will myself always measure my thoughts, as he shall deserve to be spoken of. With much difficulty, and great persuasion, he hath subscribed with the rest of the lords to join with them in this action; whatsomever he can invent to the surtherance of this cause, he hath promised to do with solemn protestation, and many words; he trusted to adjoin many to this cause; and saith surely that no man shall lie were he taketh part. He hath this day subscribed a bond between England and this nation; he saith, that there was never thing that liked him better.

N°. IV. (Vol. I. p. 248.)

Randolph to Cecil, 10th August 1560. From Edinburgh.

JINCE the 29th of July, at what time I wrote last to your honour, I have heard of nothing worth the reporting. At this present it may please you to know, that the most part of the nobles are here arrived, as your honour shall receive their names in writing. The earl of Huntly exculeth himself by an infirmity in his leg. His lieutenant for this time is the lord of Lidington, chosen speaker of the parliament, or harangue-maker as these men term it. The first day of their sitting in parliament will be on Thursday next. Hitherto as many as have been present of the lords have communed and devised of certain heads then to be propounded, as, who shall be fent into France, who into England. It is much easier to find them than the other. It feemeth almost to be resolved upon that for England the Master of Maxwell, and laird of Lidington. for France, Pitarrow and the Justice Clerk. Also they have consulted whom they think meetest to name for the XXIV. of the which the XII. counsellors must be chosen.

An Original in the Paper Office.

They intend very shortly to fend away Dingwall the herald into France, with the names of those they shall chuse; and also to require the king and queen's confent unto this parliament. They have devised how to have the contract with England confirmed by authority of parliament; how also to have the articles of the agreement between them and their king and queen ratified. These things yet have only been had in communication. For the confirmation of the contract with England I have no doubt; for that I hear many men very much like the same, as the Earl of Athol, the Earl of Sutherland, the L. Glamis, who dined yesterday with L. James. The Lord James requested me this present day to bring the contract unto him. I intend also, this day, to speak unto the L. Gray, in our L. Gray's name. for that he promised in my hearing to subscribe and then presently would have done it, if the contract could have been had. For the more affurance against all inconvenients, I would besides that, that I trust it shall be ratified in parliament, that every nobleman in Scotland had put his hand and fet his feal, which may always remain as a notable monument, tho' the act of parliament be hereafter difannulled. If it might, therefore, stand with your advice, that the lords might be written unto, now that they are here present to that effect, or that I might receive from your Honr. some earnest charge to travel herein, I doubt not but it would serve to good purpose. If it might be also known with what substantial and effectious words or charge you defire to have it confirmed, I think no great difficulty would be made. The Earl Marshal has oft been moved to fubscribe, he used mo delays then men judged he would. His fon told me yesterday, that he would speak with me at leifure, fo did also Drumlanrick; I know not to what purpose: I have caused L. James to be the earnester with the L. Marshal, for his authority's sake, when of late it was in consultation by what means it might be wrought, that the amity between these two realms might be perpetual; and among diverse men's opinion, one said that he knew of no other, but by making them both one, and that in hope of that mo things were done, had craft H. This please who yeste in verequivoice the less foon taken article. Here of D

than

of A

fee wyour ithemfe whence in dig as you the ma

I und

made a men what rethe tin heartily

being

away to lay bac was atte apart, of God

erald use;

this

tract

them

have n of hear

thol,

erday

efent

this

ame,

then

been

ts, I

par-

hand

table

difan-

vice,

here

your

t not e also

harge

iculty

ed to vould.

h me

what

r with

f late

ught,

t be e faid both

done,

than would otherwise have ever been granted; the earl of Argyll advised him earnestly to stick unto that, that he had promised, that it should pass his power and all the crafty knaves of his counsel (I am bold to use unto your H. his own words), to break fo godly a purpose. This talk liked well the affisters, howsomever it pleased him to whom it was spoken unto. The barons, who in time past have been of the parliament, had vefterday a convention among themselves in the church, in very honest and quiet fort; they thought it good to require to be restored unto their ancient liberty, to have They presented that day a bill unto voice in parliament. the lords to that effect, a copy whereof shall be fent as foon as it can be had. It was answered unto gently and taken in good part. It was referred unto the lords of the articles, when they are chosen to resolve thereupon. Here follows a long paragraph concerning the fortifications of Dunbar, &c. - This present morning, viz. the 9th. I understood, that the lords intended to be at the parliament, which caused me somewhat to stay my letter, to fee what I could hear or learn worth the reporting unto The lords, at ten of the clock, affembled your Honour. themselves at the palace, where the duke lieth; from whence they departed towards the Tolbooth, as they were in dignity. Each one being fet in his feat, in fuch order as your H. shall receive them in this scroll. The crown, the mace, the fword, were laid in the queen's feat. Silence being commanded, the L. of Lidington began his oration. He excused his insufficiency to occupy that place. He made a brief discourse of things past, and of what necessity men were forced unto for the defence of their country, what remedy and support it pleased God to send them in the time of their necessity, how much he were bound heartily to acknowledge it, and to requite it. He took away the persuasion that was in many men's mind that lay back, that misdeemed other things to be meant than was attempted. He advised all estates to lay all particulars apart, and to bend themselves wholly to the true service of God and of their country. He willed them to remember in what state it had been of long time for lack of government, and exercise of justice. In the end he exhorted them to mutual amity and hearty friendship, and to live with one another as members all of one body. -He prayed God long to maintain this peace and amity with all princes, especially betwixt the realms of England and Scotland, in the fear of God, and so he ended. The clerk of the register immediately stood up, and asked them to what matter they would proceed: it was thought neces. fary, that the articles of the peace should be confirmed with the common consent, for that it was thought necesfary to fend them away with speed into France, and to receive the ratification of them as foon as might be. The articles being read, were immediately agreed unto: A day was appointed to have certain of the nobles subscribe unto them, and to put their feals, to be fent away by a herald, who shall also bring the ratification again with him. The barons, of whom I have above written, required an answer to their request, somewhat was said unto the contrary. The barons alledged for them custom and authority. It was in the end refolved, that there should be chosen fix to join with the lords of the articles, and that if they, after good advisement, should find it right and necessary for the commonwealth, it should be ratified at this parliament for a perpetual law. The lords proceeded immediately hereupon, to the chusing of the lords of the articles. The order is, that the lords spiritual chuse the temporal, and the temporal the spiritual, and the burgesses their own There were chosen as in this other paper I have written. This being done, the lords departed and accompanied the duke, all as far as the Bow (which is the gate going out of the high street), and many down into the palace where The town all in armour, the trumpets founding, and other music such as they have. Thus much I report unto your honour of that I did both hear and fee. Other folemnities have not been used faving in times long past the lords have had parliament-robes, which are now with them wholly out of use.

The

tem

E

Arrai

Argy.

Achol

Craw

Caffil

Marff

Morto

Suther

Cathno Rother

Monte

Spiritua

Athens.

Lord Ja

Arbroach Newborn

Lindoris.

Cowpar.

Kinrofs.

Kilwinnin

So that is 36.

Voi

Ifles.

The names of as many earls and lords spiritual and temporal as are assembled at this parliament.

The duke of Chatelherault.

Lords. Earls. Lords Spiritual. Erskine. St. Andrews. Arran. Ruthven. Dunkell. Argyle: Achole. Lindsay. Athens. Somervill. Crawford. The bishop of the Isles. Caffils. Cathcart. Abbots and Priors I know Marshall. Hume. not how many. Morton. Livingston. Glencairn. Innermeth. Sutherland. Boyd. Cathness. Ogilvy. Rothes. Fleming. Monteith. Glamis. Gray. Ochiltree. Gordon.

ck of

xhortnd to

ly. — amity

gland

The

them

neces-

firmed

necef-

ind to

The

A day

unto by a

with

quired

to the

nority.

chosen they,

parliamedirticles. iporal, ritten.

ed the

ng out

where

nding,

report

Other

ig past

with

The

The lords of the Articles.

Spiritual.	Temporal.	Barons elected to	be	of the Articles.
Athens.	The Duke	Maywell

Mes. Argyll. Tillibardine. Lord James. Marshall. Cunninghamhead. Arbroath. Athole. Lochenvar. Newbottle. Morton. Pittarow. Lindoris. Glencairn. Lundy. Cowpar. Ruthven. Ten Provosts of the chief Kinrofs. Erskine. towns, which also are Kilwinning. Boyd. of the Articles.

Lindfay.

So that with the Subprior of St. Andrews, the whole is 36.

VOL. III.

by a

wher

and I

well

whatf

us an

reason

not o

charge to ferv

eftare ,

counfe. treated

withou

be pass

and the

at this and act

is given

matters

day laft,

bled, ar

old act o the year

this act

It were too long for me to rehearfe particularly the disposition, and chiefly the affections of these men, that are at this time chosen lords of the articles. May it fatisfy your Honour for this time to know that, by the common opinion of men, there was not a substantialler or more sufficient number of all fores of men chosen in Scotland these many years, nor of whom men had greater hope of good to ensue. This present morning, viz. the 10th, the L. of Lidington made me privy unto your letter; he intendeth, as much as may be, to follow your advice. Some hard points there are. He himself is determined not to go into He allegeth many reasons, but speaketh least of that, that moveth him most, which is the example of the last, that went on a more grateful message than he shall carry, and stood on other terms with their prince than he doth, and yet your honour knoweth what the whole world judgeth.

Petition of the Lesser Barons to the Parliament, held Aug. 1560.

My lords, unto your lordships, humbly means and shows, we the barons and freeholders of this realm, your brethren in Christ, That whereas the causes of true religion, and common well of this realm, are, in this present parliament, to be treated, ordered, and established, to the glory of God, and maintenance of the commonwealth; and we being the greatest number in proportion, where the said causes concern, and has been, and yet are ready to bear the greatest part of the charges thereuntil, as well in peace as in war, both with our bodies and with our goods; and seeing there is no place where we may do better service now than in general councils and parliaments, in giving our best advice and reason, vote and council for the furtherance thereof, for the maintenance of virtue, and punishment of vice, as use and custom had been of old

Inclosed in Randolph's letter to Cecil, 15th Aug. 1560,

the

that

tisfy

mon

fuffi-

hefe

good

. of

leth,

hard

into

least le of

Shall

an he

world

nent,

s and

, your

eligion,

nt par-

to the

h; and

re the

eady to well in goods; better ents, in incil for ue, and of old by ancient acts of parliament observed in this realm; and whereby we understand that we ought to be heard to reason and vote in all causes concerning the commonwealth, as well in councils as in parliaments; otherwise we think that whatsomever ordinances and statutes be made concerning us and our estate, we not being required and suffered to reason and vote at the making thereof, that the same should not oblige us to stand thereto. Therefore it will please your lordships to take consideration thereof, and of the charge born, and to be born by us, fince we are willing to serve truly to the common well of this realm, after our estare, that ye will, in this present parliament, and all counsells, where the common well of the realm is to be treated, take our advice, counfell and vote, fo that, without the same, your lordships would suffer nothing to he passed and concluded in parliament or councils aforesaid; and that all acts of parliament made, in times past, concerning us for our place and estate, and in our favor, be at this present parliament confirmed, approved and ratified, and act of parliament made thereupon. And your lordships answer humbly beseeches.

Of the success of this Petition, the following account is given by Randolph; Lett to Cecil, 19 Aug. 1560. The matters concluded and past by common consent on Saturday last, in such solemn fort as the first day that they assembled, are these. First, that the barons according to an old act of parliament, made in the time of James I. in the year of God 1427, shall have free voice in parliament, his act passed without any contradiction.

N°. V. (Vol. I. p. 259.)

the

the thin

ven

to befo

fem

grie

their

upor

thru

but kind

the

vice

the |

they

I fh

resoli

is ea

ever

unto

myfel

in as

of th

her n

quire in this trouble

of me either

cient

for at

my co that co fland y

A letter of Thomas Randolph, the English resident, to the right worshipful Sir William Cecil, knt. principal secretary to the queen's majesty.

HAVE received your honour's letters of the first of this month, written at Ofyes in Esfex; and also a letter unto the lord James, from his kinfman St. Come out of France, in this they agree both that the queen of Scotland is nothing changed of her purpose in home coming. I affure your honour that will be a ftout adventure for a fick crased woman, that may be doubted as well what may happen unto her upon the feas, as also how heartily she may be received when she cometh to land of a great number, who are utterly persuaded that she intendeth their utter ruin, come when she will; the preparance is very fmall whenfoever that she arrive, scarcely any man can be perfuaded that she hath any such thought in her head. I have shown your honour's letters unto the lord James, lord Morton, lord Lidington; they wish, as your honour doth, that she might be stayed yet for a space, and if it were not for their obedience fake, some of them care not tho they never faw her face. They travel what they can to prevent the wicked devices of these mischievous purpoles of her ministers, but I fear that that will always be found that filij hujus feculi, they do what they can to stand with the religion, and to maintain amity with their neighbours they have also need to look unto themselves, for their ha zard is great, and that they see there is no remedy not safety for themselves, but to repose themselves upon the queen's majesty, our sovereign's favours and support Friends abroad they have none, nor many in whom the may trust at home. There are in mind shortly to try wha

^{6 9} Aug. 1561. Cott. Lib. B. 10. fo. 32.

refi-Cecil, fty . irst of letter out of otland ng. I for a at may ily she t numh their is very can be ead. I s, lord doth . it were not tho can to urpoles e found nd with hbours heir ha edy not pon the

fupport

om they try wha

they may be affured at of the queen's majefty, and what they may affuredly perform of that they intend to offer for their parties. This the queen of Scotland above all other things doubteth; this she seeketh by all means to prevent; and hath caused St. Come, in her name, earnestly to write to charge him that no fuch things be attempted before her coming home; for that it is faid that they too already arrived here out of England for the purpose, what femblant somever the noblemen do make, that they are grieved with their queen's refusal, that cometh far from their hearts. They intend to expostulate with me hereupon. I have my answer ready enough for them. If she thrust all Englishmen out of this country, I doubt not but there will be some of her own that will bear us some kindress. Of me she shall be quit, so soon as it pleaseth the queen's majesty my mistress no longer to use my fervice in this place. By fuch talk, as I have of late had with the lord James and lord of Lidington, I perceive that they are of mind that immediately of the next convention, I shall repair towards you with their determinations, and telolutions, in all purposes, wherein your honour's advice is earneftly required, and shortly looked for. Whatsomever I desire myself, I know my will ought to be subject unto the queen my fovereign's pleasure, but to content myfelf, would God I were fo happy as to ferve her majefty in as mean a state as ever poor gentleman did, to be quit of this place; not that I do in my heart wax weary of her majesty's fervice, but because my time and years require some place of more repose and quietness than I find in this country. I doubt also my insufficience when other troubles in this country arise, or ought shall be required of me to the advancement of her majesty's service, that either my will is not able to compass, or my credit sufficient to work to that effect, as perchance shall be looked for at my hands. As your honour hath been a means of my continuance in this room, fo I trust that I shall find that continual favour at your hands, that fo foon as it shall fland with the queen's majesty's pleasure, I may give this place unto some far worthier than I am myself, and in the mean season, have my course directed by your good advice how I may by my contrivance do some such service, as may be agreeable to her majesty's will and pleasure.

These few words, I am bold to write unto your honour of myself. For the rest, where that is wished that the lords will stoutly continue yet for one month, I affure your honour that there is yet nothing omitted of their old and accustomed manner of doing, and seeing that they have brought that unto this point, and should now prevail, they were unworthy of their lives.

I find not that they are purposed so to leave the mat. I doubt more her money than I do her fair words; yet can I not conceive what great things can be wrought with forty thousand crowns, and treasure of her own here I know there is no fure or ready means to get The lord of Lidington leaveth nothing at this time unwritten, that he thinketh may be able to fatisfy your desire, in knowledge of the present state of things here. Whatsomever cometh of that, he findeth it ever best, that The come not; but if she do come, to let her know, at the first, what she shall find, which is due obedience, and willing service, if she embrace Christ, and desire to live in peace with her neighbours. By fuch letters as you have last received, your honour somewhat understandeth of Mr. Knox himself, and also of others, what is determined, he himself to abide the uttermost, and other never to leave him until God have taken his life, and thus together with what comfort somever it will please you to give him by your letters, that the queen's majesty doth not utterly condemn him, or at the least in that point, that he is fo fore charged with by his own queen, that her majety will not allow her doing. I doubt not but it will be a great comfort unto him, and will content many others; his daily prayer is for the maintenance of unity with England, and that God will never fuffer men to be fo ungrate, as by any persuasion to run headlong unto the destruction of them, that have faved their lives, and restored their

you thei wor

cou

To ou

A

our r greet your where to you to ha certair you w us in to giv unto t St. Co for yo made t every shall no induced

7 16th plete pap Keith, h MS. 145, ally we

the

ad-

ce,

ho-

Ture old they

pre-

mat-

rds;

her

get

your

here.

, that

, at

ence,

re to

s you

ndeth

deter-

never

us to-

ou to

th not that he

najesty

be a

thers;

h Eng-

ngrate,

ruction

d their country to liberty. I leave farther, at this time, to trouble your honour, desiring God to send such an amity between these two realms that God may be glorified to them of this world.—At Edenburgh the 9th of August 1561.

Nº. VI. (Vol. I. p. 269.)

A letter of Queen Elizabeth to Queen Mary '.

To the right excellent, right high and mighty princesse, our right dear and well-beloved sister and cousin the queen of Scotland.

KIGHT excellent, right high, and mighty princeffe, our right dear and right well-beloved fifter and coufin, we greet you well. The Lord of St. Cosme brought to us your letters, dated the 8th of this present at Abbevile, whereby ye fignify, that although by the answer brought to you by Monsieur Doyzell, ye might have had occasion to have entered into some doubt of our amity, yet after certain purposes passed betwixt you and our ambassador, you would affure us of your good meaning to live with us in amity, and for your purpose therein ye require us to give credit to the faid St. Cofme. We have thereunto thought good to answer as followeth. The fame St. Cosme hath made like declaration unto us on your part, for your excuse in not ratifying the treaty, as yourself made to our ambassador, and we have briefly answered to every the same points, as he can show you: and if he shall not so do, yet least in the mean season you might be induced to think that your reasons has satisfied us somerally we affure you, that to our requests your answer cannot be reputed for a satisfaction. For we require no benefit of you, but that you will perform your promise whereunto you are bound by your feal and your hand, for the refusal whereof we see no reason alledged can serve. Neither covet we any thing, but that which is in your own power as queen of Scotland, that which yourfelf in words and speech doth confess, that which your late husband's our good brother's ambaffadors and you concluded, that which your own nobility and people were made privy unto, that which indeed made peace and quietness betwixt us, yea that without which no perfect amity can continue betwixt us, as if it be indifferently weighed, we doubt not but ye will perceive, allow and accomplish. Nevertheless, perceiving by the report of the bringer, that you mean furthwith upon your coming home, to follow herein the advice of your council in Scotland, we are content to fuspend our conceipt of all unkindness, and do assure you that we be fully refolved, upon this being performed, to unite a fure band of amity, and to live in neighbourhood with you as quietly, friendly, yea as assuredly in the knot of friendship, as we be in the knot of nature and blood. And herein we be so earnestly determined, that the world should see if the contrary should follow (which God forbid), the very occasion to be in you and not in us; as the story witnesseth the like of the king your father, our uncle, with whom our father fought to have knit a perpetual bond by inviting to come in this realm to York, of which matter we know there remain with us, and we think with you, fundry witnesses of our father's earnest good meaning, and of the error whereunto divers evil councillors induced your father; or finally where it feemeth that report had been made unto you, that we had fent our admiral to the seas with our navy to impeche your pasfage, both your servants do well understand how false that is; knowing for a truth that we have not any more than two or three small barks upon the seas, to apprehend certain pirates, being thereto entreated, and almost compelled, by the earnest complaint of the ambassador of

^{7 16}th of Aug. 1561. Paper-Office, from a Copy. This is the complete paper of which that industrious and impartial collector, Bishop Reith, has published a fragment, from what he calls his shattered MS.145, note (a) 181.

tish letter you con bety of S exce

us t

our

God our year

O H nothing coming but par

A le

W

nothing many i to any Among Your h him fu

cardina a marri

15th

enefit

eunto

efufal

either

own

vords

and's

that

un-

twixt

tinue

evert you erein

ent to e you l, to hood

knot lood.

world for-

s the

ncle,

etual

hich

hink

good

ncil-

that

out

paf-

falle

more

hend

com-

our good brother the king of Spain, made of certain Scottihmen haunting our feas as pirates, under pretence of letters of marque, of which matter also we earnestly require you, at your coming to your realme, to have some good consideration, and the rather for respect that ought to be betwixt your realme and the countries of us, of France, of Spain, and of the house of Burgundy. And so, right excellent, right high and mighty princess, we recommend us to you with most earnest request, not to neglect these our friendly and sisterly offers of friendship, which, before God, we mean and intend to accomplish. Given under our signet at Heyningham the 16th of August, in the third year of our reign.

N°. VII. (Vol. I. p. 304.)

A letter of Randolph to the right honorable Sir William Cecil, knight, principal fecretary to the queen's majesty.

OF late, until the arrival of monsieur Le Croc, I had nothing worth the writing unto your honour. — Before his coming we had so little to think upon, that we did nothing but pass our time in feasts, banquetting, masking, and running at the ring, and such like. He brought with him such a number of letters, and such abundance of news, that, for the space of three days, we gave ourselves to nothing else but to reading of writings, and hearing of tales, many so truly reported, that they might be compared to any that ever Luciane did write de veris narrationibus. Among all his tidings, for the most assured, I send this unto your honour as an undoubted truth, which is, that the cardinal of Lorraine, at his being with the emperor, moved a marriage between his youngest son, the duke of Astruche, ¹⁵th of May, 1563. Paper-Office, from the Original.

and this queen; wherein he hath so far travelled, that it hath already come unto this point, that if she find it good, the faid duke will out of hand send hither his embassador, and farther pro. ceed to the confummation hereof, with as convenient speed as may be; and to the intent her mind may be the better known. Le Croc is sent unto her with this message from the cardinal, who hath promised unto the emperor, to have word again before the end of May; and for this cause Le Croc is ready for his departure, and his letters writing both day and night. This queen being before advertized of his towardness, by many means hath fought far off, to know my lord of Murray's mind herein, but would never fo plainly deal with him. that he could learn what her meaning is, or how fhe is bent, She useth no man's council, but only this man's that last arrived, and affuredly until the L. of Lidington's return, The will do what she can to keep that secret; and because resolution in his absence cannot be taken, she will, for this time, return Le Croc with request, to have longer time to devize; and after, with the most speed she can, The fully proposeth to advertize him, I mean, her uncle the cardinal, of her mind. Of this matter the L of Lidington is made privy. I know not whether by some intelligence that he had before his departure, or fince his arrival in France, divers letters have passed between her grace and him, whereof as much as it imported not greatly the knowledge of, was communicated to some, as much as was written in Sypher, is kept unto themselves. Whether also the L. of Lidington hath had conference with the Spanish ambassador in England of this matter, or any like, I leave it unto your honour's good means, to get true knowledge thereof. Guesses or surmizes in fo grave matters, I would be loath to write for verities. This also your honour may take for truth, that the emperor hath offered with his fon, for this queen's dower, the county of Tyroll, which is faid to be worth 30,000 franks by year. Of this matter also the rhingrave wrote a letter unto this queen, out of France not long fince, This is all that presently I can write unto your honour here shall I man lette date I pe but I they the henc or h

ceive

daily

cept

yet w

void
To
of thi you fi
St. Ar
and fi most 1
May,

Letter Wi

Rowlet very he

foth

nath

faid

pro-

d as

own,

nal,

be-

y for

This

nany

ray's

im,

ent.

laft urn,

for

nger

can,

ıncle

of some

e his

her

not me,

lves.

tter-

eans, es in rities.

em-

,000

wrote fince.

nour

hereof; as I can come by farther knowledge, your honour shall be informed.

I have received your honour's writings by the Scottish man that last came into these parts; he brought also letters unto this queen from the L. of Lidington; their date was old, and contained only the news of France. I perceive divers ways, that Newhaven is sorre closed, but I am not so ignorant of their nature, but that I know they will say as much as they dare to, I will not say as the proverb doth, 'canis timidus fortius latrat.' From hence I do assure them, what means somever they make, or how pitiful somever their mone be, they are like to receive but small comfort for all their long allie. We stand daily in doubt what friendship we shall need ourself, except we put better order unto our misruled papists, than yet we do, or know how to bring to pass that we may be void of their comber.

To morrow, the 15th of this instant, the queen departeth of this town, towards Edenburgh. If my hap be good, you shall thoroughly hear some merry tidings of the Bp. of St. Andrews; upon Wednesday next he shall be arraigned, and five other priests, for their massing at Easter last. Thus most humbly I take my leave; at St. Andrews the 15th of May, 1563.

N°. VIII. (Vol. I. p. 313.)

Letter of Randolph to the right honourable Sir William Cecil, knight, principal fecretary to the queen's majesty.

May it please your honour, the 7th of this instant, Rowlet, this queen's secretary, arrived here; he reporteth very honestly of his good usage, he brought with him loth of April 1563. Paper-Office, from the Original in his own many letters unto the queen that came out of France, full of lamentation and forrow. She received from the queen mother two letters, the one contained only the rehearfal of her griefs, the other fignify the state of France as then it was, as in what fort things were accorded, and what farther was intended for the appeasing of the discords there, not mistrusting but that if reason could not be had at the queen of England's hands, but that the realm of France should find her ready and willing to support and defend the right thereof, as by friendship and old alliance between the two realms she is bound.

How well these words do agree with her doings, your honour can well consider, and by her writings in this sort unto this queen, (which I assure your honour is true) you may assuredly know, that nothing shall be left undone of her part, that may move debate or controverse between this queen and our fovereign.

It was much mused at by the queen herself, how this new kindness came about, that at this time she received two long letters written all with her own hand, faying, all the time fince her return she never received half so many lines, as were in one of the letters, which I can myfelf testify by the queen's own faying, and other good affurance, where hitherto I have not been deceived. I can also farther assure your honour, that this queen hath sayed that she knoweth now, that the friendship of the queen's majesty my sovereign may stand her more in stead, than that of her good mother in France, and as she is desirous of them both, fo will she not lose the one for the other. I may also farther assure your honour, that what fomever the occasion is, this queen hath somewhat in her heart that will burst out in time, which will manifest that fome unkindness hath passed between them, that will not be easy forgotten. In talk sometimes with myself, she saith that the queen mother might have used the matter otherwife than she hath done, and doth much doubt what shall be the fuccess of her great desire to govern alone, in all things to have her will. Seeing then that presently they stand i to con to fpea ter of as frier queen , queen dingtor of, I I nour c chance ten on will gi queen's that th fed a g that I troverf there. into Sc here , the Lor nour h friends

a vultu

credit.

11

'n

of

it

15 ot

n

d

nt

10 rt

u

le

n

is

d

I

ıy

lf

11-

an

ed

S

he ater at ot the all all fland in fuch terms one with the other, I tho't it better to confirm her in that mind (this queen I mean), than to speak any word that might cause her to conceive better of the other. And yet I am affured she shall receive as friendly letters, and as many good words from this queen, as the other did write unto her. Whether the queen mother will speak any thing unto the L. of Lidington of that purpose she did write unto this queen of, I know not; but if she do, I think it hard if your honour can get no favour thereof, at his return, or I perchance by some means here. It may, perchance, be written only by that queen, to try what answer this queen will give, or understand what mind she beareth unto the queen's majesty our fovereign. The queen knoweth now that the earl Bothwell is fent for to London. She caufed a gentleman of hers to enquire the cause; I answered that I knew none other, but that his takers were in controverfy who took him, and that it should be judged there. I know that she thinketh much that he is not sent into Scotland. It is yet greatly doubted that if he were here, he would be referved for an evil instrument. If the Lord of Lidington have not been plain with your honour herein, he is in the wrong to those who are his friends here, but most of all to himself. There comes a vulture in this realm, if ever that man come again into credit.

N°. IX. (Vol. I. p. 322.)

The oration made by William Maitland of Lethington, younger secretary for the time, in the parliament holden by our sovereign the king's mother, queen of this realm for the time, the time of the restitution of Umquile Matthew Earl of Lenox.

My Lords, and others here convened. Albeit, be that it has pleased her Majesty most graciously to utter unto you, by her own mouth, ye may have sufficiently conceived the cause of this your present assembly; yet having her majesty's commandment to supply my Lord Chancellor's place, being presently as ye see deceased, I am willed to express the same somewhat more at large.

Notour it is, how in her highness's minority, a procels of forfaultour was decreed against my Lord of Lenox, for certain offences alledged committed by him, specified in the dome and censement of Parliament given thereupon; by reason whereof he has this long time been exiled, and absent forth of his native country; how grievous the same has been unto him, it has well appeared by divers his fuites, fundry ways brought unto her Majesty's knowledge, not only containing most humble and due submission, but always bearing witness of his good devotion to her Majesty, his natural princess, and earnest affection he had to her Highness most humble service, if it should please her Majesty of her clemency to make him able to enjoy the benefit of a subject; many respects might have moved her Highness favourably to incline to his request, as the anciency of his house, and the firname he bears, the honour he has to appertain to her Majesty by affinity, by reason of my lady Margaret her Highness's aunt, and divers other his good confiderations, as also the effectuous requell of her earnest that of nation t by her the inft ment of of the c occasion request. letter, deration letter of him to 1 by the judgmen for exan to affem whofe an mind, merits o ferved i proceedi as it we we have words, l would feared no nature a pel me t good and me, as in remer the like

behaviou

for a goo

her happ

grant her

C

S

le

W

be er

ly.

et

rd

I

10-

X,

ed

n;

nd

me

his

ge,

but

fty,

het

her

the

ved

the

the

by

rers

uelt

of her good fifter the Queen's Majesty of England, whose earnest commendation was not of least moment, besides that of her own natural, her Majesty has a certain inclinanation to pity the decay of noble houses, and as we heard, by her own report, has a great deal more pleasure to be the instrument of the uphold, maintenance, and advancement of the ancient blood, than to have matter ministred of the decay or overthrow of any good race. Upon this occasion, her Majesty the more tenderly looked upon his request, and her good fifter the Queen of England's favourable letter, written for recommendation of his cause, in consideration whereof not only has the granted unto him her letter of restitution, by way of grace, but also licensed him to purfue, by way of reduction, the remedies provided by the law for fuch as think themselves grieved by any judgment, unorderly led, and to have the process reversed; for examination whereof, it has pleased her Majesty presently to affemble you the three estates of this her realme, by whose advice, deliberation, and decision at her Majesty's mind, to proceed forward upon his complaints, as the merits of the cause, laws of the realme, and practice obferved in such cases, will bear out. The sum of all your proceedings at this time, being by that we have heard, thus as it were pointed out, I might here end, if the matter we have in hand gave me not occasion to fay a few more words, not far different from the same subject, wherein I would extend the circumstances more largely. feared not to offend her highness, whose presence and modest nature abhors long speaking and adulation, and so will compel me to speak such things, as may seem to tend to any good and perfect point, and left it should be compted to me, as that I were oblivious, if I should omit to put you in remembrance, in what part we may accept this, and the like demonstrations of her gentill nature; whose gracious behaviour towards all her subjects, in general, may serve for a good proof of that felicity, we may look for under her happy government, so long as it shall please God to grant her unto us; for a good harmony to be had in the common weill, the offices between the prince and the fubjects must be reciproque; as by her Majesty's prudence we enjoy this present peace with all foreign nations, and quietness among yourselves, in such fort, that I think juffly it may be affirmed Scotland, in no man's age, that prefently lives, was in greater tranquillity; fo is it the duty of all us her loving fubjects to acknowledge the same as a most high benefit, proceeding from the good government of her Majesty, declaring ourselves thankful for the same, and rendering to her Majesty such due obedience, as a just prince may look for at the hands of faithful and obedient subjects. I mean no forced nor unwilling obedience, which I know her nature does detest, but such as proceeds from the contemplation of her modest kind of regiment, will for love and duty fake produce the fruits thereof. A good proof have we all in general had of her Majesty's benignity these three years, that she has lived in the government over you, and many of you have largely tafted of her large liberality and frank dealing; on the other part her highness has had large appearance of your dutiful obedience, fo it becomes you to continue, as we have begun, in confideration of the many notable examples of her clemency above others her good qualities, and to abhor and detell all false bruites and rumours, which are the most pestilent evils that can be in any common weill, and the fowers and inventors thereof. Then may we be well affured to have of her an most gracious princesse, and she most faithful and loving subjects; and so both the head and the members, being encouraged to maintain the harmony and accord of the politic bodies, whereof I made mention before, " the glory thereof shall partly appertain to her Majesty. fo shall no small praise and unspeakable commodity redound therethrough to you all universally her subjects.

The pand jesty on Lore of Scots pretence

of the tentation
ceffion Queen
comforte their de perfons may be either w

of Scotts alliance;
part, an Scotland fores by The feco
and othe Rome, a thefe two that shall Next t

The f

these kind First,

Vol

Nº. X. (Vol. I. p. 333.)

nd

tly

all

floi

ner

nd ice cts.

OW

011-

ove

oof

nity

ent

rge

gh-

ce,

011-

ncy

teft

lent

and

ave

and

of as

fty,

und

The perils and troubles that may presently ensue, and in time to come follow, to the Queen's majesty of England, and state of this realm, upon the marriage of the Queen of Scots to the Lord Darnley.

FIRST, the minds of fuch as be affected to the Queen of Scots, either for herself or for the opinion of her pretence to this crown, or for the desire to have change of the forme of religion in this realm, or for the discontentation they have of the Queen's majesty, or her succession, or of the succession of any other beside the Queen of Scotts, shall be, by this marriage, erected, comforted, and induced to devise and labour how to bring their desires to pass; and to make some estimate what persons those are, to the intent the quantity of the danger may be weighed; the same may be compassed in those sorts either within the realm or without.

The first are such as are specially devoted to the Queen of Scotts, or to the Lord Darnley, by bond of blood and alliance; as first, all the house of Lorrain and Guise for her part, and the Earl of Lenox and his wife, all such in Scotland as be of their blood, and have received displeasures by the Duke of Chatelherault and the Hamiltons. The second are all manner of persons, both in this realme and other countries, that are devoted to the authority of Rome, and missike of the religion now received; and in these two sorts are the substance of them comprehended, that shall take comfort in this marriage.

Next therefore to be confidered what perils and troubles these kind of men shall intend to this realm.

First, the general scope and mark of all their desires is, and always shall be, to bring the Queen of Scotts to have the royal crown of this realm; and therefore, though the devifers may vary amongst themselves for the compassing bereof, according to the accidents of the times, and according to the impediments which they shall find by means of the Queen's majesty's actions and governments, yet all their purposes, drifts, devises, and practices, shall wholly and only tend to make the Queen of Scotts Queen of this realm, and to deprive our fovereign lady thereof; and in their proceedings, there are two manners to be consider. ed, whereof the one is far worse than the other; the one is intended by them, that either from malicious blindness in religion, or for natural affection to the Queen of Scotts, or the Lord Darnley, do persuade themselves that the faid Queen of Scotts hath presently more right to the crown than our fovereign lady the Queen, of which fort be all their kindred on both fides, and all fuch as are devoted to popery, either in England, Scotland, Ireland, or elsewhere: the other is meant by them, which, with less malice are perfuaded that the Queen of Scotts hath only right to be the next heir to succeed the Queen's majesty and her iffue, of which fort few are without the realm, but here within, and yet of them, not fo many as are of the contrary, and from these two forts shall the peril, de vises and practices proceed. From the first, which imagine the Queen of Scotts to have perpetually right are to be looked for these perils. First, is it to be doubted the devil will infect some of them to imagine the hurt of the life of our dear sovereign lady, by such means as the devil shall suggest to them, although it is to be assuredly hoped, that Almighty God will, as he hath hitherto, graciously protect and preserve her from such dangers? Secondly, there will be attempted, by persuasions, by bruits, by rumours, and fuch like, to alienate the minds of good subjects from the Queen's majesty, and to conciliate them to the Queen of Scotts, and on this behalf the frontiers and the north will be much folicited and laboured. Thirdly, there will be attempted causes of some tumults and rebellions, especially in the north towards Scotland, so as thereup lence.

cil and that Tha to their fet a fo frontiers to increasion being all these to time, From the Queen they will majesty r that the think to l crowns of and there persuasion incline the The re to the Q

thereupon may follow fome open enterprise set by violence. Fourthly, there will be, by the said Queen's council and friends, a new league made with France, or Spain, that shall be offensive to this realm, and a furtherance to their title. And as it is also very likely, that they will set a foot as many practices as they can, both upon the frontiers and in Ireland, to occasion the Queen's majesty to increase and continue her charge thereby, to retain her from being mighty or potent, and for the attempting of all these things, many devises will be imagined, from time to time, and no negligence will therein appear.

From the second fort, which mean no other favour to the Queen of Scotts, but that she should succeed in title to the Queen's majesty, is not much to be feared, but that they will content themselves to see not only the Queen's majesty not to marry, and so to impeach it, but to hope, that the Queen of Scotts shall have iffue, which they will think to be more pleasable to all men, because thereby the cowns of England and Scotland shall be united in one, and thereby the occasion of war shall cease; with which persuasion many people may be seduced, and abused to incline themselves to the part of the Queen of Scotts.

Link shoft

the bailt foliof that y and very

r. First, that by this marriage, the O.

Chring not entried? a great number in a , t e word (ubjecta mig a de alterared in et...) De wal dedes to hel marelly, to depend one the enionese of Scotland, as a mean up on a or of opin the crowns in the iffue of the

... swiften bus divid la mover of boa als minelands and a chemical in to or H 140 del 1100 car to to the suvancement of the Orien of Scotti.

io ogaficam bils, Lorentzal boldw , seedi by Louis cour Choic into any one

The remedies against these perils.

ıg

C-

ns

i

ly

118

nd

er-

ne

d-

of

he

n

all

ta

fees

ily

fty

n,

of

dea

na-

to

the

de-

dly

ra-

its,

pod

em

ers

rd.

and

as

A Duplicat.

A furmary of the consultation and advice given by the lords and others of the privy council, Collected out of the sundry and several speeches of the said counsellors.

Lord Keeper,
Lord Treasurer,

Bedford,
Leicester,
Lord Admiral,
Lord Chamberlain,

Mr. Comptroller,
Mr. Vice-Chamberlain,
Mr. Secretary,
Cave,
Peter,
Mason.

Questions propounded were these two.

TIRST, what perils might ensue to the Queen's majesty, or this realm, of the marriage betwixt the Queen of Scotts, and the Lord Darnley.

2. What were meet to be done, to avoid or remedy the fame.

To the First. .

THE perils being fundry, and very many, were reduced by some counsellors into only one.

the worst subjects might be alienated in their minds from their natural duties to her majesty, to depend upon the success of this marriage of Scotland, as a mean to establish the succession of both the crowns in the issue of the same marriage, and so savour all devises and practices, that should tend to the advancement of the Queen of Scotts.

2. Secondly, that confidering the chief foundation of them, which furthered the marriage of the Lord Darnley, eas la only m plainly the par marriag of factio could b Oueen's quently By fome were rec and the fevered together The firff with the the pret fucceed professed

> The fi be erected were thut of the tit this realr religion in foundation

> > Proofs

was in p advance enfue, we any perfo

and cont
will of eve
the Quee
with the co
manifeftly
were, uf deviced to ^{10 4}th of June 1565. Cott. Lib. Cal. B. 10. fol. 290.

C3

cen

edy

ced

tts, t-of

heir

s of

cef-

ige,

dw

of fo

ley,

ess laid upon the truft of fuch as were papifts, as the only means left to restore the religion of Rome, it was plainly to be feen, that both in this realm and Scotland. the papifts would most favour, maintain, and fortify this marriage of the Lord Darnley, and would, for furtherance of faction in religion, device all means and practices that could be within this realm, to difturb the estate of the Oueen's majesty, and the peace of the realm, and consequently to atchieve their purposes by force, rather than fail. By some other, these perils having indeed many branches. were reduced, though somewhat otherwise, into two forts, and these were in nature such as they could not be easily severed the one from the other, but were knit and lincked together, naturally for maintaining the one with the other. The first of these fort of perils was that, by this marriage with the Lord Darnley, there was a plain intention to further the pretended title of the Queen of Scotts, not only to succeed the Queen's majesty, as in her best amity she had professed, but that to occupy the Queen's estate, as when she was in power, she did manifestly declare.

The second was, that hereby the Romish religion should be erected, and increased daily in this realm, and these two were thus knit together, that the furtherance and maintenance of the title staid, in surthering of the religion of Rome within this realm; and in like manner the surtherance of the same religion stood by the title, for otherwise the title had no foundation.

Proofs of the first.) And to prove that the intention to advance the title to disturb the Queen's majesty, must needs ensue, was considered that always the intention and will of any person is most manifest, when their power is greatest, and contrary when power is small, then the intention and will of every person is covered and less seen. So as when the Queen of Scotts power was greatest, by her marriage with the dauphin of France, being afterwards French king, it manifestly appeared of what mind she, and all her friends were, using then manifestly all the means that could be devised to impeach and disposses the Queen's majesty, first by writing and publishing herself in all countries Queen of England; by granting charters, patents, and commissions. with that style, and with the arms of England, both the French and Scotts, which charters remain still undefaced: and to profecute it with effect, it is known what preparations of war were made, and fent into Scotland; and what other forces were affembled in foreign countries; yea, in what manner a fhameful peace was made by the French with king Philip to employ all the forces of France to pursue all the matters by force which by God's providence, and the Queen's majesty contrary power, were repelled; and afterwards, by her husband's death, her fortune and power being changed, the intention began to hide itself, and although by the Scottish Queen's commissaries an accord was made at Edenborough, to reform all those titles, and claims, and pretences, yet to this day, by delays and cavillations, the ratification of that treaty hath been deferred. And fo now, as foon as fhe shall feel her power, the will fet the fame again abroad, and by confidering of fuch errors as were committed in the first, her friends and allies will amend the fame, and proceed substantially to her purpose. By some it was thought plainly, that the peril was greater of this marriage with the lord Darnley, being a subject of this realm, than with the mightiest prince abroad; for by this, he being of this realm, and having for the cause of religion, and other respects, made a party here, should increase by force with diminution of the power of the realm; in that whatfoever power he could make by the faction of the papift, and other discontented persons here, should be as it were deducted out of the power of this realm; and by the marriage of a stranger, she could not be affured of any part here; so as by this marriage she should have a portion of her own power to serve her turn, and a fmall portion of adversaries at home in our own bowels, always feem more dangerous than treble the like abroad; whereof the examples are in our own stories many, that foreign powers never prevailed in this realm, but with the help of some at home. It was also remembered is fou realm is gro both good and b would as the this p of the countr affured only ft doubt and his thereby great in contrar the per plainly ments ,

THE to be of force the a great the month heads.

but mai

only this all these no other to obtain therein

of

ns,

the

ed;

ons

her

hat

with

rfue

and

and

wer

and cord

and

and

de-

ver,

g of

ends

ially

that aley,

ince

ower

y the

nere,

this

not

fhe

urn,

own

like

ories

alm,

nem,

hered, that feeing now before this attempt of marriage, it is found, and manifeltly feen, that in every corner of the sealm, the faction that most favoureth the Scottish title, is grown flout and bold, yea feen manifestly in this court, both in hall and chamber, it could not be but (except good heed were speedily given to it) by this marriage. and by the practice of the fautors thereof, the same faction would shortly encrease, and grow so great and dangerous, as the redrefs thereof would be almost desperate. And to this purpole it was remembered, how of late in perufing of the substance of the justices of the peace, in all the countries of the realm, scantily a third was found fully affired to be trusted in the matter of religion, upon which only string the Queen of Scotts title doth hang, and some doubt might be, that the friends of the Earl of Lenox, and his had more knowledge hereof than was thought, and thereby made avant now in Scotland, and their party was fo great in England as the Queen's majesty durst not attempt to contrary his marriage. And in this fort, was the fum of the perils declared, being notwithstanding more largely and plainly fet out, and made so apparent by many fure arguments, as no one of the council could deny them to be but many, and very dangerous.

Second Question.

THE question of this consultation was, what were meet to be done to avoid these perils, or else to divert the force thereof from hurting the realm; wherein there were a great number of particular devises propounded, and yet the more part of them was reduced by some into three heads,

1. The first thought necessary by all persons, as the only thing of the most moment and efficacy, to remedy all these perils, and many others, and such as without it, no other remedy could be found sufficient, and that was to obtain that the Queen's majesty would marry, and make therein no long delay.

2. The fecond was to advance, establish, and fortify indeed the profession of religion, both in Scotland and in England, and to diminish, weaken, and feeble the contrary.

3. The third was, to proceed on fundry things, either to disappoint and break this intended marriage, or, at the least, thereby to procure the same not to be so hurtful to this realm, as otherwise it will be.

The first of these three hath no particular rights in it, but an earnest and unseigned desire and suite, with all humbleness, by prayer to Almighty God, and advice and council to the Queen's majesty, that she would defer no more time from marriage, whereby the good subjects of the realm might stay their hearts, to depend upon her majesty, and the issue of her body, without which no surery can be devised to ascertain any person of continuance of their families or posterities, to enjoy that which otherwise should come to them.

Second, concerning the matters of religion, wherein both truth and policy were joined together, had these particulars.

First, whereas of late the adversaries of religion, in the realm, have taken occasion to comfort and increase their faction, both in England, Scotland, and abroad, with a rumour and expectation that religion shall be shortly changed in this realm, by means that the bishops, by the Queen's majesty commandment, have of late dealt streightly with some persons of good religion, because they had forborn, to wear certain apparel, and such like things; being more of form and accidents, than of any substance, for that it is well known that her majesty had no meaning to comfort the adversaries, but only to maintain an uniformity as well in things external, as in the substance, nor yet hath any intention to make any change of the re-Jigion, as it is established by laws. It was thought by all men very necessary, for the suppressing of the pride and arrogancy of the adverfaries, indirectly hereby to notify, by her special letters to the two archbishops, that her formand r

her n
she c gion, therei
wishe should fion t
use a which
be de both the cl

The and or majeft; were of abroad faction prison, and inv

The plain the fun wherew best aff cases le cases of them, pleasure and unl and are the Nor the like princess'

The !

rtify

d in

con-

ther

the

l to

it.

all

and

no

s of her

e of

rwife

erein

thele

, in

rease

ortly

, by

dealt

they

ings;

nce,

aning

uni-

nce,

e re-

it by

and tify,

her

former commandment was only to retain an uniformity, and not to give any occasion to any person to misjudge of her majesty, in the change of any part of religion, but that she did determine firmly to maintain the form of her religion, as it was established, and to punish such as did therein violate her laws. And in these points, some also wished that it might please her archbishops, that if they should see that the adversaries continued in taking occasion to fortify their faction, that in that case they should use a moderation therein, until the next parliament, at which time, some good, uniform and decent order might be devised, and established, for such ceremonies, so as both uniformity and gravity might be retained amongst the clergy.

The second means was, that the quondam bishops, and others, which had refused to acknowledge the Queen's majesty's power over them, according to the law, and were of late dispersed in the plague time to sundry places abroad, where it is known they cease not to advance their faction, might be returned to the tower, or some other prison, where they might not have such liberty to seduce and inveigle the Queen's majesty's subjects, as they daily

The third means was, that where the bishops do complain that they dare not execute the ecclesiastical laws, to the furtherance of religion, for fear of the premunire wherewith the judges and lawyers of the realm, being not best affected in religion, do threaten them, and in many cases lett not to pinch and deface them, that upon such cases opened, some convenient authority might be given them, from the Queen's majesty, to continue during her pleasure.

The fourth was, that there were daily lewd, injudicious and unlawful books in English brought from beyond seas, and are boldly received, read, and kept, and especially in the North, seducing of great numbers of good subjects, the like boldness whereof was never suffered in any other princess's time, that some streight order might be given to avoid the same, and that it might be considered by the judges, what manner of crime the same is, to maintain such books, made directly against her majesty's authority, and maintaining a foreign power, contrary to the laws of the realm.

The fifth was, that where a great number of monks, fryars, and such lewd persons are fled out of Scotland, and do serve in England, especially in the North, as curates of churches, and all such of them as are not found honest and conformable, may be banished out of the realm, for that it appeareth they do sow sedition in the realm, in many places, and now will increase their doings.

The fixth, where fundry having ecclefiaftical livings, are on the other fide the fea, and from thence maintain fedition in the realm; that livings may be better beflowed, to the commodity of the realm, upon good fubjects.

The feventh is, that the judges of the realm, having no small authority in this realm in governance of all property of the realm, might be sworn to the Queen's majesty, according to the laws of the realm, and so thereby they should for conscience sake maintain the Queen's majesty's authority.

The particulars of the third intention, to break and avoid this marriage, or to divert the perils.

First to break this marriage, considering nothing can likely do it, but force, or fear of force, it is thought by some that these means following might occasion the breach of the marriage.

1. That the earl of Bedford repair to his charge.

2. That the works at Berwick be more advanced.

3. That the garrison be there increased.

4. That all the wardens put their frontiers in order with speed, to be ready at an hour's warning.

5. That some noble person, as the duke of Norfolk, or the earl of Salop, or such other, be sent into Yorkshire, to be lieutenant-general in the North.

6. That preparations be made of a power, to be in readiness to serve, either at Berwick, or to invade Scotland.

place intelling.

ing to to the upon is cor shews that it is to be fhe had and be France Som of proc

10. refusing

or elfew means,

flewards no person ance or but only rule of

from Sc fuch as from Mr land, as time to

15. I

he

in

of

ks,

ind

tes

ieft

for

in

are

edi-

to ring

pro-

fty,

hey

fty's

and

kely

ome

the

rdet

hire,

e in land.

That presently lady Lenox be committed to some place, where she may be kept from giving or receiving of intelligence.

9. That the earl of Lenox and his son may be sent for, and required to be sent home by the Queen of Scotts, according to the treaty; and if they shall not come, then to denounce to the Queen of Scotts the breach of the treaty, and thereupon to enter with hostility; by which proceeding, hope is conceived (so the same be done in deeds and not in shews) that the marriage will be avoided, or at the least that it may be qualified from many perils; and whatsoever is to be done herein, is to be executed with speed, whilst she has a party in Scotland that savoureth not the marriage, and before any league made by the Queen of Scotts with France or Spain.

Some other allows well of all these proceedings, saving of proceeding to hostility, but all do agree in the rest, and also to these particularities following.

10. That the earl's lands upon his refusal, or his son's refusing, should be seized, and bestowed in gift or custody, as shall please her majesty, upon good subjects.

11. That all manifest favourers of the earl, in the North, or elsewhere, be inquired for, and that they be, by sundry means, well looked to.

12. That inquiry be made in the North, who have the flewardship of the Queen's majesty's lands there, and that no person, deserving mistrust, be suffered to have governance or rule of any of her subjects or lands in the North, but only to retain their fees, and more trusty persons have rule of the same people's lands.

13. That all frequent passages into this realm, to and from Scotland, be restrained to all Scottish men, saving such as have safe-conduct, or be especially recommended from Mr. Randolph as savourers of the realm.

14. That fome intelligence be used with such in Scotland, as favour not the marriage, and they comforted from time to time

15. That the Queen's majesty's houshold, chamber, and pensioners, be better seen unto, to avoid broad and uncomely speech used by fundry against the state of the realm.

16. That the younger fon of the earl of Lenox, Mr. Charles, be remembered to some place where he may be forth coming.

- 17. That considering the faction and title of the Queen of Scotts, hath now of long time received great favour, and continued, by the Queen's majesty's favour herein to the Queen of Scotts and her ministers, and the lady Catharine, whom the said Queen of Scotts accompted as a competor unto her in pretence of title, it may please the Queen's majesty, by some exterior act, to shew some remission of her displeasure to the lady and to the earl of Hartford, that the Queen of Scotts thereby may find some change, and her friends put in doubt of surther proceeding therein.
- 18. That whofoever shall be lieutenant in the North, Sir Ralph Sadler may accompany him.

19. That with speed the realm of Ireland may be committed to a new governor.

20. Finally, that these advises being considered by her majesty, it may please to choose which of them she liketh, and to put them in execution in deeds, and not to past them over in consultations and speeches.

For it is to be affured, that her adversaries will use all means to put their intention in execution. Some by practice, some by force, when time shall serve, and no time can serve so well the Queen's majesty to interrupt the perils, as now at the first, before the Queen of Scotts purposes be fully settled.

Nº. XI. (Vol. J. p. 349.)

Randolph to the earl of Leicester, from Edinburgh the 31st of July 1565".

MAY it please your lordship, I have received your lordship's letter by my servant, sufficient testimony of your at Cot. like Cal. B. 9. fol, 216. An Original.

ierdih fo affu enough time I the ne rather lordshi hope th your lo from h Queen felf-fam hitherto if the re themsel shall be of the this fo marriage was nev shewed own ho pertaine the ove Queen's bility as a quarre ing, th with the be able all the f what is your lor will be d your inte

fear you

when cou

execution

alm.

Mr.

be

geen

our,

n to

Ca-

28 1

the

re-

1 of

ome

ding

rth,

com-

her

seth,

pals

e all

lice,

can s, as s be ugh

your

your

lerdship's favour towards me, whereof I think my felf always to affured, that what other mishap soever befal me, I have mough to comfort myself with; though I have not at this time received neither according to the need I fland, nor the necessity of the service that I am employed in, I will nther pass it, as I may with patience, than trouble your lordship to be further futer for me, when there is so little hope that any good will be done for me. I doubt not but your lordship hath heard by such information as I have given from hence, what the present state of this country is, how this Oneen is now become a married wife, and her husband, the felf-same day of his marriage, made a king. In their desires, hitherto, they have found so much to their contentment, that if the rest succeed and prosper accordingly, they may think themselves much happier, than there is appearance that they shall be; so many discontented minds, so much misliking of the subjects to have these matters thus ordered, and in this fort to be brought to pass I never heard of any marriage; so little hope, so little comfort as men do talk, was never feen, at any time, when men should most have hewed themselves to rejoice, if that consideration of her own honour and well of her country had been had as appertained in so weighty a case. This is now their fear, the overthrow of religion, the breach of amitie with the Queen's majesty, and the destruction of as many of the nobility as she hath misliking of, or that he liketh to pitch a quarrel unto. To fee all these inconveniencys approaching, there are a good number that may fooner lament with themselves, and complain to their neighbours, than be able to find remedie to help them, some attempt with all the force they have, but are too weak to do any good, what is required otherways, or what means there is made Jour lordship knoweth; what will be answered, or what will be done, therein we are in great doubt, and though your intent be never fo good unto us, yet do we fo much fear your delay, that our ruin shall prevent your support when council is once taken. Nothing so needful, as speedy accution. Upon the Queen's majesty, we wholly depend, in her majesty's hands it standeth to save our lives. or to suffer us to perish; greater honour her majesty cannot have, than in that which lyeth in her majesty's power. to do for us; the fums are not great, the numbers of men are not many that we defire; many will dayley be found tho' this will be fome charge; men grow dayley, though, at this time, I think her majesty shall loose but few; her friends here being once taken away, where will her may jesty find the like; I speak least of that which I think is most earnestly intended by this Queen, and her husband, when by him it was lately faid, that he cared more for the papifts in England, than he did for the protestants in Scotland; if therefore, his hopes be so great in the papilts of England what may your lordship believe that he thinketh of the protestants there; for his birth, for his nurritour, for the honour he hath to be of kine to the Queen my mistress, if in preferring those that are the Queen's majesty's worst subjects to those that are her best, he declareth what mind he beareth to the Queen's majesty's self, any man may say it is slenderly rewarded, and his duty evil forgotten; he would now feem to be indifferent to both the religions, she to use her mass, and he to come fometimes to the preaching; they were married with all the folemnities of the populh time, faving that he heard not the mass; his speech and talk argueth his mind, and yet would he fain feem to the world that he were of fome religion; his words to all men, against whom he conceived any displeasure how unjust soever it be, so proud and spitfull, that rather he seemeth a monarch of the world, than he that, not long fince, we have feen and known the lord Darnley; he looketh now for reverence of many that have little will to give it him; and some there are that do give it, that think him little worth of it. All honour that may be attributed unto any man by a wife, he hath it wholly and fully; all praises that may be spoken of him, he lacketh not from herself; all dignities that she can indue him with, which are already given and granted; no man pleaseth her that contenteth not him; and what may I say more, she hath given over to him her whole will, to be ruled prevail your lo myfelf king, i parliam things (would, then or men of her hus ment ca Saturda And het by three Monday the tour where n that crie the mar between nobles t mournin hood, n day of t chapell, the left the fame them, th taken by any caus were fpo diamond and man and he t

her char

being re

res,

an-wer.

nen

ho'

at.

her

ma*

13

nd ,

the

nd;

and

pro-

lour

pre-

s to

reth

erly

eem.

als,

vere

ving

his

he

nont

fo

the

and

of

are.

nour

th it

im,

due

man

fay

be:

aled and guided as himfelf best liketh; . The can as much nevail with him, in any thing that is against his will, as your lordship may with me to perfuade that I should hang myfelf; this last dignity out of hand to have been proclaimed king, she would have it deferred untill it were agreed by parliament, or he had been himself 21 years of age, that things done in his name might have the better authority. He would, in no case, have it deferred one day, and either then or never; whereupon this doubt is rifen amongst our men of law whether she being clad with a husband, and her husband not twenty-one years, any thing without parliament can be of strength, that is done between them; upon Saturday at afternoon, these matters were long in debating. and before they were well refolved upon, at nine hours at night, by three heralds, at found of the trumpet he was proclaimed king. This was the night before the marriage; this day, Monday at twelve of the clock, the lords, all that were in the toun, were present at the proclaiming of him again, where no man faid fo much as Amen, faving his father, that cried out aloud God fave his Queen. The manner of the marriage was in this fort, upon Sunday in the morning between five and fix, she was conveyed by divers of her nobles to the chapell; she had upon her back the great mourning gown of black, with the great wide mourning hood, not unlike unto that, which she wore the doulfull day of the burial of her husband: she was led into the chapell, by the earls of Lenox and Athol, and there was the left untill her husband came, who also was conveyed by the fame lords, the minister priests, two, do there receive them, the bands are asked the third time, and an instrument taken by a Notour that no man faid against them, or alledged any cause why the marriage might not proceed. The words were spoken, the rings which were three, the middle a rich damond, were put upon her finger; they kneel together, and many prayers said over them, she tarrieth out the mass, and he taketh a kiss, and leaveth her there, and went to her chamber, whither within a space she followeth; and being required, according to the folemnity, to cast off her cares and leave aside those forrowful garments, and give herself to a more pleasant life, after some pretty re fufall, more I believe for manner fake than grief of heart The fuffered them that flood by, every man that could ap proach, to take out a pin, and so being committed to he ladies, changed her garments, but went not to bed, to fignifie to the world, that it was not lust that moved then to marry, but only the necessity of her country, not, God will, long to leave it destitute of an heir. Suspicion men, or fuch as are given of all things to make the world would that it should be believed, that they knew each other before that they came there; I would not your lordship should so believe it, the likelihoods are so great to the con trary, that if it were possible to see such an act done, would not believe it. After the marriage followeth commonly great cheer and dancing: to their dinner they were conveyed by the whole nobility; the trumpets found; a largess cried mony thrown about the house in great abundance, to fuch as were happy to get any part; they dine both at on table, she upon the upper hand, there serve her these early Athole Sewer, Morton Catver, Craufoord Cup-bearer; thest ferve him in like offices, earls Eglington, Cassels, and Glen cairn; after dinner they danced a while, and then retired themselves till the hour of supper; and as they dined so do they fup, fome dancing there was, and fo they go to bed; of all this I have written to your lordship I am no Oculatus testis, to this, but of the verity your lordship shall not need to doubt, howfoever I came by it; I was fen for to have been at the supper, but like a currish or un courtly carle I refused to be there; and yet that which you lordship may think might move me much, to have had the fight of my mistress, of whom these eighteen days by ju account I got not a fight, I am my lord taken by all the fort as a very evil person, which in my heart I do we allow, and like of myfelf the better, for yet can I no find either honest or good that liketh their doings. I leave at this time further to trouble your lordship, craving pardo for my long filence, I have more ado than I am able to discharge, and the disconceive, am sure, cretary, so me of a lit I take my Letter of Sir Wi fecretar council

AFTER captain Bri Queen's m and pleafur mation of, congregation expressed in I, this mo earl of Mu holpen with their better goodness of fovereign's also underst holpen, fo decided, ar and undoin sooo, and Queen hath yet want 1 12 2d of Se VOL.

discharge,

discharge, I walk now more abroad by night than by day, and the day too little to discharge myself of that which I conceive, or receive in the night. As your lordship, I am fure, is partaker of fuch letters as I write to Mr. Secretary, fo that I trust that he shall be to this, to save me of a little labour, to write the same again, most humbly I take my leave at Edinburgh, the last day of July 1565.

N°. XII. (Vol. I. p. 349.)

Letter of the earl of Bedford to the honourable Sir William Cecil knt. her Majesty's principal fecretary, and one of her highness's privy council.

AFTER my hearty commendations, this day at noon captain Brickwell came hither, who brought with him the Queen's majesty's letters containing her full resolution, and pleasure for all things he had in charge to give information of, faving that for the aid of the lords of the congregation there is nothing determined, or at the least expressed in the same letters, and for that purpose received I, this morning, a letter subscribed by the duke, the earl of Murray, Glencarne, and others, craving to be holpen with 300 harquebulyers out of this garrison, for their better defence. And albeit, I know right well the goodness of their cause, and the Queen's majesty our fovereign's good will, and care towards them; and do also understand that it were very requisite to have them holpen, for that now their cause is to be in this manner decided, and that it now standeth upon their utter overthrow and undoing, fince the Queen's party is at the least 1000, and they not much above 1000; besides, that the Queen hath harquebusyers, and they have none, and do jet want the power that the earl of Arguyle should bring to them, who is not yet joined with theirs; I have thereupon thought good to pray you to be a means to learn her majesty's pleasure in this behalf, what, and how, I shall answer them, or otherwise deal in this matter, now at this their extreme necessity. For, on the one fide, lyeth thereupon their utter ruin and overthrow, and the miserable subversion of religion there; and, on the other fide, to adventure fo great and weighty a matter as this is, (albeit it be but of a few foldiers, for a small time) withour good warraunte, and thereby to bring, peradventure, upon our heads some wilful warrs, and in the mean time to leave the place unfurnished, (having in the whole but 800) without any grant of new fupply for the fame; and by that means also, to leave the marches here the more subject to invasion, while in the mean season new helps are preparing; to this know not I what to fav or how to do. And fo much more I marvel thereof, as that having fo many times written touching this matter no resolute determination cometh. And so between the writing, and looking for answer, the occasion cannot pass, but must needs proceed and have success. God turn it to his glory; but furely all men's reason hath great cause to fear it. Such a push it is now come unto, as this little fupply would do much good to advance God's honour, to continue her majesty's great and careful memory of them, and to preferve a great many noblemen and gentlemen. If it be not now helpen, it is gone for ever. Your good will and affection that way I do nothing mistrust, and herein shall take such good advice as by any means I can. I received from these lords two papers inclosed, the effect whereof shall appear unto you. For those matters that captain Brickwell brought, I shall answer you by my next, and herewith fend you two letters from Mr. Randolph, both received this day. By him you shall hear that the protestants are retired from Edenborough, fur-So I hope your resolution for their aid shall come in time, if it come with speed, for that they will not now so presently need them; and so with my hearty thanks co

^{2 2}d of Sept. 1565. Paper-Office, from the Original.

Th

UPON

with fuch and Thom confidered the speed used. If Murray h him of rodefend him destand, much, and secret fort you, or is some part of the other than the othe imprest for 600 footmes

wages of ought to your fundry Murray and least, 300
write, that aid, yet if feem to ble with the I not but the

a truth, th

manks commit you to God. From Berwick, this 2d of Sept. 1565.

N°. XIII. (Vol. I. p. 345.)

to nd at-

me w,

on atall

er-

he

he

he

re

on

ay

as

er

he

ſs,

to

to

le

to

d

ıd

n.

ct

at

y

1-ar

1-

y

The Queen to the earl of Bedford ".

With fuch other things as came also from the lord Scrope and Thomas Randolph, and upon the whole matter well considered, we have thus determined. We will, with all the speed that we can, send to you 3000l to be thus used. If you shall certainly understand that the earl of Murray hath such want of money as the impressing to him of 1000l, might stand him in stead for the help to defend himself, you shall presently let him secretly understand, that you will, as of yourself, let him have so much, and so we will that you let him have, in the most secret sort that you can, when the said sum shall come to you, or if you can, by any good means, advance him some part there beforehand.

The other 2000l. you shall cause to be kept whole, unspent, if it be not that you shall see necessary cause to imprest some part thereof to the now numbers of the 600 sootmen and 100 horsemen; or to the casting out of wages of such workmen, as by sickness, or otherwise, ought to be discharged. And where we perceive, by your sundry letters, the earnest request of the said earl of shurray and his associates, that they might have, at the least, 300 of our foldiers, to aid them. And that you also write, that the we would not command you to give them aid, yet if we would but wink at your doing herein, and seem to blame you for attempting such things, as you with the help of others should bring about, you doubt not but things would do well; you shall understand for a truth, that we have no intention, for many respects, to maintain any other prince's subjects, to take arms against their fovereign, neither would we willingly do any thing to give occasion to make wars betwixt us and that prince, which has caused us to forbear, hitherto, to give you any power to let them be aided with any men. But now, confidering we take it, that they are purfued, notwithstanding their humble submission, and offer to be ordered and tried by law and justice, which being refused to them, they are retired to Domfrese, a place near our west marches, as it feemeth there to defend themselves, and adding thereunto the good intention that presently the French king pretendeth, by fending one of his to join with fome one of ours, and jointly to treat with that Queen, and to induce her to forbear this manner of violent and rigorous proceeding against her subjects, for which purpose the French ambassador here with us has lately written to that Queen, whereof answer is daily looked for; to the intent in the mean time the faid lords Thould not be oppressed and ruined, for lack of some help to defend them, we are content and do authorize, if you shall see it necessary for their defence, to let them (as of your own adventure, and without notifying that you have any direction therein from us) to have the number of 300 foldiers, to be taken either in whole bands, or to be drawn out of all your bands, as you shall see cause. And to cover the matter the better, you shall send these numbers to Carlisle, as to be laid there in garrison, to defend that march, now in this time that such powers are on the other part drawing to those frontiers, and so from thence as you shall see cause to direct of, the same numbers of any of them, may most covertly repair to the faid lords, when you shall expressly advertize, that you fend them that aid only for their defence, and not therewith to make wat against the Queen, or to do any thing that may offend het person, wherein you shall so precisely deal with them, that they may perceive your care to be such as if it should otherwise appear, your danger should be so great, as all the friends you have could not be able to fave you towards charge you to prefer aid of m of thefe with your ainf hing

^{13 12} Sept. 1565. Paper . Office.

ince,

any

now,

withlered hem, West and the join that viofor has aily rds elp ou of ve

d e

1

charge you, fo to proceed with them; for otherwise than to preserve them from ruin, we do not yield to give them aid of money or men: And yet we would not that either of these were known to be our act, but rather to be covered with your own desire and attempt.

APPENDIX

TO THE

SECOND VOLUME.

N°. I. (Vol. II. p. 6.)

Randolph to Cecil, from Edinburgh, 7th Feb. 1565-6.

My humble duty considered; what to write of the present state of the country I am so uncertain, by reason of the daily alterations of men's minds, that it maketh me much slower than otherwise I would. Within these sew days, there was some good hope, that this Queen would have shewed some favour towards the lords, and that Robert Melvin should have returned unto them with comfort, upon some conditions. Since that time, there are come out of France Clernau by land, and Thorneton by sea; the one from the cardinal, the other from the bishop of Glasgow. Since whose arrival neither can there be good word gotten, nor appearance of any good intended them, except that they be able to perswade the Queen's majesty our sovereign to make her heir apparent to the croun of England. I write

* An Original.

of this And by bring it the late of Savoy fulpecte through by Thor thereof turned fit minif may be Monfieu fpoke th long; th both, b they int hope tha him, tho to the u court, a the order prefent t carried t earl of been call day, fom Cathness. Lindsay, floutest, mass shou was rathe She was

negotiate

majesty's that the I

her majes for the w

of this nothing less than I know, that she hath spoken. And by all means that she thinketh the best doth travaile to bring it to pass. There is a band lately devised, in which the late pope, the emperor, the king of Spain, the duke of Savoy, with divers princes of Italy, and the Queen mother suspected to be of the same consederacy to maintain papistry throughout Christiandom; this band was sent out of France by Thorneton, and is subscribed by this Queen, the copy thereof remaining with her, and the principal to be returned very shortlie as I hear by Mr. Stephen Willson, a fit minister for such a devilish devile; if the copy hereof may be gotten, that shall be fent as I conveniently may. Monsieur Rambollet came to this toun upon Monday, he hoke that night to the Queen and her husband, but not long; the next day he held long conferences with them both, but nothing came to the knowledge of any whereof they intreated. I cannot speak with any that hath any hope that there will be any good done for the lords by him, though it is faid that he hath very good will to do fo to the uttermost of his power. He is lodged near to the court, and liveth upon the Queen's charges. Upon Sunday the order is given, whereat means made to many to be present that day at the mass. Upon Candlemas day there carried their candles, with the Queen, her husband, the earl of Lenox, and earl Athol; divers other Lords have been called together and required to be at the mass that day, some have promised, as Cassels, Mongomerie, Seton, Cathness. Others have refused, as Fleming, Levingston, Lindsay, Huntly and Bothel; and of them all Bother is the floutest, but worst thought of; it was moved in council that mass should have been in St. Giles church, which I believe was rather to tempt men's minds, than intended indeed: She was of late minded again to fend Robert Melvin to negotiate with such as she trusteth in amongst the Queen's majesty's subjects, of whose good willis this way I trust that the bruit is greater than the truth, but in these matters, her majesty is too wise not in time to be ware, and provide for the worst; some in that country are thought to be privie

b.

he

on

me

ew

ld

ert

on

of

ne

W.

n,

hat

to

ite

unto the bands and confederacie of which I have written, where of I am fure there is some things tho' perchance of all I have not heard the truth; in this court divers quarles, contentions, and debates; nothing so much sought as to maintain mischief and disorder. David yet retaineth still his place, not without heart grief to many, that see their sovereign guided chiefly by such a fellow; the Queen hath utterly resused to do any good to my lord of Argyll, and it is said that shall be the first voyage that she will make after she is delivered of being with child; the bruit is common that she is, but hardly believed of many, and of this, I can assure you, that there have of late appeared some to-kens to the contrary.

Nº. II. (Vol. II.) p. 15.

Part of a letter from the earl of Bedford and Mr.
Tho. Randolph to the lords of the council of England from Berwick, 27th of March 1566.
An Original in the Cotton Library, Caligula B.
10. fol. 372.

May it please your Honours,

HEARING of so maynie matters as we do, and fyndinge such varietie in the reports, we have myche ado to decerne the veritie: which maketh us the slower and loother to put any thing in wryting, to the entente we wold not that your honours, and by you the Queen's majestie, our sovereigne, should not be advertised but of the verie trothe as we can possible. To this end we thought good to send up captain Carewe, who was in Edinbourge at the tyme of the last attemptate, who spoke there with diverse, and after that with the Queen's self and her husband conforme to that, which we have learned by others, and know the parti these that

This being en hym fon the Quee commun his forro fome ren unto my wave col of the w the fame execution lord Line might ha caused th ficient ag should be ixth of t begyne, the erles sholde ha fuaded t the defy one waye t'other, confents was fo im brought Ruthen, intent tha the acte king con and two coup to the ^{2 27}th March, 1566,

n,

of

es,

to

Aill

eir

ath

tis

ter

ion

, I

to-

Tr.

of 66.

B.

nd

he

he

he

ed

we

n-

re

er

18,

and know by this reporte, we fend the same, confirmed by the parties self, that were there present and assysters unto these that were executors of the acte.

This we fynde for certain, that the Queen's husband being entered into a vehement suspicion of David, that by hym fome thynge was committed, which was most agaynste the Queen's honour, and not to be borne of his perce, fyrste communicated his mynde to George Duglas, who fynding his forrows fo great fought all the means he coulde to put fome remedie to his grieff; and communicating the fame unto my lord Ruthen by the king's commandment, no other wave coulde be found then that David should be taken out of the waye. Wherein he was so earnest and daylye pressed the fame, that no reste could be had untyll it was put in execution. To this that was found good, that the lord Morton, and lord Lindsaye should be made privie to th' intente that theie might have their friends at hande, yf neade required; which caused them to assemble so mayny, as their thought sufficient against the tyme, that this determination of theirs should be put in executione; which was determined the ixth of this instante, 3 daies afore the parliament should begyne, at which time the fayde lords were affured that the erles Argyle, Morraye, Rothes and their complyces sholde have been forfeited, yf the king could not be perfuaded through this means to be their friend; who for the desyre he had that this intent should take effect th' one waye, was content to yielde, without all difficultie to tother, with this condition, that their should give their consents, that he might have the crowne matrimonial. He was fo impatient to fee these things he saw, and were daylye brought to his eares, that he dayly pressed the said lord Ruthen, that there might be no longer delay; and to the intent that myght manifeste unto the world, that he approved the acte, was content to be at the doing of that himself.

Upon Saturdaye at night neire unto VIII of the clock the king conveyeth himself, the lord Ruthen, George Duglass, and two others, throwe his own chamber by the privy stayers up to the Queen's chamber going to which there is a cabinet, about XII foot square; in the same a little low reposing bed and a table, at the which they were fitting at supper the Queene, the lady Argile, and David with his capp upon his head. Into the cabinet there cometh in the king and lord Ruthen, who willed David to come forth, faying, that was no place for him. The Queen faid, that it was her will. Her howsband answerede, that yt was against her honour. The lord Ruthen faid, that he should lerne better his deutie. and offering to have taken him by the arm, David took the Queen by the blychtes of her gown and put himself behind the Queen who wolde gladlee have faved him: But the king having loofed his hand, and holding her in his arms, David was thrust out of the cabinet throw the bed chamber of presens, whar were the lord Morton, lord Lindsey, who intending that night to have referved hym, and the next day to hang him, fo mane being about him, that bore him evil will, one thrust him into the boddie with a dagger, and after hym a great many others, fo that he had in his bodie above wonds. It is told for certayne, that the king's own dagger was left sticking in him. Wheather he fluck him or not we cannot be here certayn. He was not flayne in the Queen's presens, as was said, but going down the stayres out of the chamber of presens.

There remayned a long tyme with the Queen her howfband and the lord Ruthen. She made, as we here, great intercession, that he shold have no harm. She blamed greatlee her howsband that was the actor of so soul a deed. It is said, that he did answer, that David had more companie of her boddie than he for the space of two months; and therefore for her honour and his own contentment he gave his consent that he should be taken away. "It is not," (faythe she) "the woman's part to seek the huse band," and therefore in that the fault was his own. He said that when he came, she either wold not or made herself, sick. "Well," saythe she, "you have taken your last of "me and your farewel." Then were pity, sayd the Lord Ruthen, he is your majesty's husband and must yield dutie to each other. "Why may I not," saythe she, "leave done the divorced king four baffe, e to herfel be de forbid, showe you her h weepeth.

calleth f
"your r
fort he c could be In the
to pacify

went strathem, a intend a when the next day get out of the king Deysley the bring control of the wethemselve

Before
of the lo her that came not he was fo
There

king; the Queen far one Patrice also her

"him as well as your wife did her husband?" Other have done the like. The lord Ruthen faid that she was lawfully divorced from her husband, and for no such cause as the king found himself greve. Befydes this man was mean, baste, enemie to the nobility, shame to her, and destruction to herself and country. "Well," faith she, "that shall be dear blude to some of you, yf his be spylt." God sorbid, sayth the lord Ruthen; for the more your grace showe yourself offended the world will judge the worse.

Her husband this tyme speaketh litle, herself continually weepeth. The lord Ruthen being ill at ease and weak calleth for a drink, and faythe, "This I must do with "your majesties pardon," and persuadeth her in the best for he could, that she would pacify herself. Nothing that could be faid, could please her.

ng

the

his

ord

vas

ill.

ur.

ie,

he

ind

he

ıs,

ner

ho

txe

im

1,

his

he

he

ot

wn

vf-

eat

ed

ed. m-

s;

he is uf-

He

lf,

of

rd

tie

ve

In this mean time there rose a nombre in the court; to pacify which there went down the lord Ruthen, who went strayt to the erles Huntly, Bothwell and Atholl to quiet them, and to assure them from the king that nothing was intend against them. These notwithstanding taking fear, when their heard that my lord Murray wold be there the next day, and Argile meet them, Huntly and Bothwell both get out of a window and so depart. Atholl had leave of the king with Flysh and Glandores (who was lately called Deysley the person of Owne) to go where they wold, and bring concorde out of the court by the lord of Lidington. These went that night to such places, where they thought themselves in most faustie.

Before the king leaft talk with the Queen, in the hering of the lord Ruthen she was content that he should lie with her that night. We know not how he  himself, but came not at her, and excused hymself to his friends, that he was so sleepie, that he could not wake in due season.

There were in this companie two that came in with the king; the one Andrewe Car of Fawdenside, whom the Queen sayth would have stroken her with a dagger, and one Patrick Balentine, brother to the justice clerk, who also her grace sayth, offered a dag against her belly with the cock down. We have been earnestly in hand with the lord Ruthen to know the varitie; but he assourch us of the contrarie. There were in the Queen's chamber the lord Robert, Arthur Arskin, one or two others. They at the first offering to make a defence, the lord Ruthven drawd his dagger, and 4 mo weapons then, that were not drawn nor seen in her presens, as we are by this lord assured.

The letter afterwards gives an account of the flight to Dunbar Castle, whither resorted the lords Huntley and Bothwell: That the earl of Morton and lord Ruthven find themselves left by the king for all his fair promises, bonds, and fubscriptions. That he had protested before the council, that he was never confenting to the death of David, and that it is fore against his will: " That of the great substance "David had there is much spoken, some say in gold to the value of 11mL. His apparel was very good, as it is faid, 28 pair of velvet hose. His chamber well furnished, armour, dagger, pystoletts, harquebuses, 22 swords, " Of all this nothing spoyld or lacked faving 2 or 3 daggers. "He had the custody of all the Queen's letters, which all were delivered unlooked upon. We hear of a juil, that " he had hanging about his neck of some price, that can-" not be heard of. He had upon his back, when he was " flayn, a night gown of damask furred, with a satten doublet, a hose of russet velvet. "]

N°. III. (Vol. II. p. 25.)

Part of a Letter from Randolph to Cecil, Jan 16. 1565-6.

T CANNOT tell what misliking of late there hath been between her grace and her husband, he presset earnestly for the matrimonial crown, which she is loth hastily to grant; but willing to keep somewhat in store, until she know how well he is worth to enjoy such a sovereignty:

and the

From

 $T_{\mathtt{H}^{1}}$ brother's the king good op against manifest mandme fuer of was exe were bo tain, b Queen, shall be continue abby , with the hath no between declarati the dea that, b

Part of crown m

discord that is

3 4 Apr

vith

the at

awd awn

t to

and

find

ids,

icil,

and

to

t is

rds.

ers.

all

that

an-

was

ten

16.

ath

ftly

to

fhe ty: and therefore it is thought that the parliament for a time shall be deferred, but hereof I can write no certainty.

From Mr. Randolph's letter to fecretary Cecil .

HE justice - clerk in hard terms, more for his brother's cause than any desert, and as far as I can hear the king of all other in worst, for neither hath the Queen good opinion of him for attempting of any thing that was against her will, nor the people that he hath denied so manifest a matter, being proved to be done by his commandment, and now himself to be the accuser and purfuer of them that did as he willed them. This Scott, that was executed, and Murray that was yesterday arraigned, were both accused by him. It is written to me, for certain, by one, that upon Monday last spoke with the Queen, that she is determined that the house of Lenox shall be as poor in Scotland as ever it was. The earl continueth fick, fore troubled in mind; he staith in the abby, his fon hath been once with him, and he once with the Queen, fince she came to the castle. The Queen hath now feen all the covenants and bands that paffed between the king and the lords, and now findeth that his declaration, before her and council, of his innocency of the death of David was falle; and grievously offended that, by their means, he should seek to come to the crown matrimonial.

Part of a letter from Randolph to Cecil from Berwick, 25 April 1566.

-THERE is continually very much speech of the discord between the Queen and her husband, so far that, that is commonly said and believed of himself, that Mr.

¹⁴ April, 1565. Paper-Office, from the Original.

James Thornton is gone to Rome to sue for a divorce between them. It is very certain that Malevasier had not spoken with him within these three days. He is neither accompanied nor looked upon of any nobleman: attended upon by certain of his own servants, and six or seven of the guard; at liberty to do, and go where and what he will, they have no hope yet among themselves of quietness.

—— David's brother named Joseph, who came this way with Malevasier, unknown to any man here, is become fecretary in his brother's place.

N°. IV. (Vol. II. p. 30.)

The earl of Bedford to Cecil, 3d August 1566.

The Queen and her husband agree after the old manner, or rather worse. She eateth but very seldom with him, lieth not, nor keepeth company with him, nor loveth any such as love him. He is so far out of her books, as at her going out of the Castle of Edinburgh, to remove abroad, he knew nothing thereof. It cannot for modesty, nor with the honour of a Queen, be reported what she said of him. One Hickman, an English merchant there, having a water spaniel which was very good, gave him to Mr. James Melvill, who afterwards, for the pleasure, which he saw the king have in such kind of dogs, gave him to the king. The Queen thereupon sell marvellously out with Melvill, and casted him dissembler and flatterer, and said she could not trust one, who would give any thing to such one as she loved not.

The earl of Bedford to Cecil, Aug. 8.

THE disagreement between the Queen and her husband continueth, or rather increaseth. Robert Melvill drawing homewards, within twelve miles of Edinburgh, could not tell where to find the Queen; fith which time she is come to Edinb There we baron, co husband well as last as would

Sir Joh

THE the earl death of

S

THE fadors, as appointment nobility, Craigmilla the while

Adverti

HA two days, Murray's pened. the king be determine fo much of Murray

4 August

in the Que

rce

not

her

led

of

he efs.

way me

56.

er, eth

out

ew |

in,

ds,

of elller

ld

nd

ne

to Edinburgh, and had not twelve horses attending on her. There was not then, nor that I can hear since, any lord baron, or other nobleman in her company. The king her husband is gone to Dumfermling, and passeth his time as well as he may; having at his farewell, such countenance as would make a husband heavy at the heart.

Sir John Foster to Cecil, 8 Sept. from Berwick.

THE Queen hath her husband in small estimation, and the earl of Lenox came not in the Queen's fight since the death of Davy.

Sir John Foster to Cecil, 11th Dec.

THE earl of Bothwell is appointed to receive the ambalfadors, and all things for the christening are at his lordship's appointment, and the same is scarcely well liked of the mobility, as is said. The king and Queen is presently at Craigmillar, but in little greater familiarity than he was all the while past.

Advertisements out of Scotland from the earl of Bedford .

THAT the king and the Queen agreed well together two days, after her coming from ——, and after my lord of Murray's coming to Edinburgh, some new discord has happened. The Queen hath declared to my lord of Murray that the king bears him evil will, and has said to her, that he is determined to kill him, finding fault that she doth bear him so much company: and in like manner hath willed my lord of Murray to spiere the king, which he did a few nights since in the Queen's presence, and in the hearing of divers. The king confessed, that reports were made to him, that my lord of Murray was not his friend, which made him fpeak that thing he repented; and the Queen affirmed, that the king had spoken such words unto her, and confessed before the whole house, that she could not be content that either he or any other should be unfriend to my lord of Murray. My lord of Murray enquired the fame floutly, and used his speech very modestly, in the mean time the king departed very grieved; he cannot bear that the Queen should use familiarity either with man or woman, and especially the ladies of Arguile, Murray, and Marre, who keep most company with her. My lord of Murray and Bothwell have been at evil words for the L. of Ledington, before the Queen, for he and Sir James Bal. foure had now come from Ledington, with his answer upon fuch heads or articles as Bothwell and he should agree upon, which being reported to the faid earl in the Queen's presence, made answer, that ere he parted with such land as was defired, he should part with his life. My lord of Murray faid stoutly to him, that twenty as honest men as he should lose their lives ere he reafte Ledington. The Queen spake nothing, but heard both; in these terms they parted, and fince, that I hear of, have not met. The Queen after her hunting came to Edinburgh, and carryeth the prince thence to Stirling with her. This last Saturday was executed a servant of the lord Ruthven's, who confessed that he was in the cabinet, but not of council of the fact. The Queen hath also opened to my lord of Murray, that money was fent from the pope, how much it was, and by whom, and for what purpole it was brought.

August 1566, Paper- Office, from the original.

Part of 1569 an a upon how par ratifying whereby manifold trust to dealing the lord come in with him without accompan were bas them to like, I cannot b it were fi of love know, ch had befor and in oth friendly a husband, who as i being evi respect of your hard council.

a prisone

VOL

Nº. V.

N. V. (Vol. II. p. 46.)

hat

him ed.

on-

my

ame

ean that

WO-

and of

L. Bal-

wer

gree en's

fuch

My

nest ton.

rms

met.

and

This

n's,

t of

my

ope,

pole

Part of a letter from Elizabeth to Mary, Feb. 20, 1569. A copy interlined by Cecil. It contains an answer to a complaining letter of Mary's upon the imprisoning of the Bishop of Ross.

FTER this [i. e. Mary's landing in Scotland] how patiently did I bear with many vain delays in not mifying the treaty accorded by your own commissioners, whereby I received no small unkindness, besides the manifold causes of suspicion that I might not hereafter trust to any writings. Then followed a hard manner of dealing with me, to entice my subject and near kinsman, the lord Darnly, under colour of private fuits for land, to ome into the realm, to proceed in treaty of marriage with him without my knowledge, yea to conclude the fame without my affent or liking. And how many unkind parts accompanied that fact, by receiving of my subjects that were base runnegates and offenders at home, and enhancing them to places of credit against my will with many such lke, I will leave for that the remembrance of the same cannot but be noyfome to you. And yet all these did I as it were suppress and overcome with my natural inclination of love towards you; and did afterwards gladly, as you know, christen your son, the child of my said kinsman, that had before so unloyally offended me, both in marriage of you, and in other undutiful usages towards me his sovereign. How friendly also dealt I by messages to reconcile him, being your husband, to you, when others nourished discord betwixt you, who as it seemed had more power to work their purpoles, being evil to you both, than I had to do you good, in respect of the evil I had received. Well I will overpass your hard accidents that followed for lack of following my council. And then in your most extremity, when you was a prisoner indeed, and in danger of your life from your VOL. III.

notorious evil willers, how far from my mind was the remembrance of any former unkindness you had shewed me. Nay how void was I of respect to the designs which the world had seen attempted by you to my crown, and the security that might have ensued to my state by your death, when I finding your calamity to be great, that you were at the pit's brink to have miserably lost your life, did not only intreat for your life, but so threatened some as were irritated against you, that I only may say it, even I was the principal cause to save your life.

N°. VI. (Vol. II. p. 65.)

Letter of Q. Elizabeth to Q. of Scotts. Thus marked on the back with Cecil's hand. — Copia Literarum Regia Majestatis ad Reginam Scotorum. VIII°. Aprilis 5.

MADAME, vous ayant trop molesté par M. de Crocq, je n'eusse eu si peu de consideration de vous fascher de cette lettre, si les liens de charité vers les ruinez, & les prieres des miserables ne m'y contraignassent. Je en tens que un edit a été divulgué de par vous, madame, que ung chascun, que veult justifier que ons esté les meurtriers de votre feu mari, & mon feu cousin, viennent a le faire le XIIme de ce mois. Laquelle chose, comme c'est plus honorable & necessaire, qui en tel cas se pourra faire, ne y estant caché quelque mistere ou finesse, ainsi le pere & amis du mort gentelhomme m'ont humblement requis, que je vous priasse de prolonguer le jour, pource qu'ilz cognoissent que les iniques se sont combinés par force de faire ce que par droict ils ne pourront pas faire; partant je ne puis mais sinon pour l'amour de vous meme, a qui i touche le plus, & pour la consolation des innocens, de vous exhorter de leur conceder cette requeste, laquelle, la elle les de plus tiers ou fincerité que tout nocente dignemer cause fai avienne, qu'une vi comme n fouhaitera Dieu me yous infp a vos am recommer de bien,

> Account earl of From Falcon ce 8 jour

POUN
Mr. Kober Henryfon of college of j Syme advoor
Henry Kinr
Bothwell,
divorcemen
bushand fo

⁵ Paper . Office.

^{&#}x27;A mistake

the

ved

ich ind

our

hat

our

ned

it,

hus

opia

um.

de vous nez,

en-

que

riers

faire plus

, ne uis .

u'ilz

e de ant .

qui il

, de

le, f

elle les seroit nie, vous tourneroit grandement en soupçon, de plus que j'espere ne pensez, & que ne voudriez volonners ouyr. Pour l'amour de Dieu, madame, usez de telle fincerité & prudence en ce cas qui vous touche de si pres, que tout le monde aye raison, de vous livrer comme innocente d'ung crime si enorme, chose que si ne fistes seriez dignement esbloyë hors de rancz de princesses, & non sans cause faite opprobre de vulgaire, & plutot que cela vous wienne, je vous souhaiterois une sepulture honorable, qu'une vie maculée; vous voiez, madame, que je vous traite comme ma fille, & vous promets, que si j'on eusse, ne luy souhaiterais mieulx, que je vous desire, comme le Seigneur Dieu me porte tesmoignage, a qui je prie de bon cœur de yous inspirer a faire ce qui vous sera plus a honneur, & a vos amis plus de consolation, avec mes tres cordialles recommendations comme a icelle a qui je souhaite le plus de bien, qui vous pourra en ce monde avenir. De West. œ 8 jour de Janvier en hafte.

N°. VII. (Vol. II. p. 80.)

Account of the fentence of divorce between the earl of Bothwell and lady Jean Gordon his wife. From a manufcript belonging to Mr. David Falconer, advocate. Fol. 455.

POUN the 29 of Apryle 1567, before the richt hon.

Mr. Robert Maitland, dean of Aberdene, Mr. Edward Henryson doctor in the laws, two of the senators of the college of justice, Mr. Clement Little, and Mr. Alexander Syme advocattis, commissers of Edendurgh; compered Mr.
Henry Kinrosse, procurator for Jean Gourdoune, countes of Bothwell, constitute be her for pursewing of ane process of divorcement intendit by her contra James erle Bothwel her hisband for adultry, committed be him with Bessie Craw-

A mistake in the date corrected with Cecil's hand VIII. Aprilis.

furde the pursuers servant for the time; and sicklyke, for the said erle, compeared Mr. Edmond Hay, who ester he had pursued and craved the pursuer's procurator's oath de calumnia, if he had just caus to pursew the said action, and obtained it, denyed the libell, and the said Mr. Harrie took the morne, the last day of Apryle, to prove the same pro prima. The quhilk day, having produced some wirnes fes, he took the next day, being the I of May, to do farther diligence. Upon the quhilk I of May, he produced some moe witnesses, and renounced farther probatioune. After quhilk, he desired a term to be assigned to pronounce sentence. To whom the said commissars assigned Satterday next, the 3 of May, to pronounce sentence, therein, secundum allegata et probata, quilk accordingly was given that day in savour of the pursewar.

At the same time there was another proces intendit be the erl of Bothwell contra his lady, for to have their marriage declared nul, as being contracted against the canons without a dispensation, and he and his lady being within degrees defendand, viz ferdis a kin, and that wyle for expeding of this proces, there was a commissionne grantit to the archbishop of St. Androis to cognosce and determine it, and Rot. bishop of Dunkeld, William bishop of Dunblane, Mr. Andro Craufurd chanon in Glafgow, and parson of Egelshame, Mr. Alexander Creichtoun, and Mr. George Cooke chancellor of Dunkeld, and to Mr. Johns Manderstoune chanon in Dunbar and prebendar of Beltoune, or any ane of them. This commissione is dati 27 Aprile 1567, was presented to two of the saids commissioners, viz. Mr And Crawfurd and Mr. John Manderstoune on Satterday 3 May, by Mr. Thomas Hepburn parson of Auldhamstocks, procurator for the erle of Both well, who accepted the delegationne, and gave out their citation by precept, directed, Decano Christianitatis de Hadingtone, nec non vicario seu curato eccle. parochia de Creichtoune, seu cuicung; alteri cappellano debite requisi tis, fer summoning at the said erles instance, both of the lady personally if she could be had, or otherways at the parofch dwelling peremp And lil bishop lady, ir natyne toun of provoft abbot of or any the s of the faid delegat tors for Mr. Edr some of for provi farder pro 6th of tiones ipt depolition the lady contra pr proinde caufa, ju ad pronu ductis con form here judge gave ing the m beginning , hindered t

7 Two

tained of I

for

r he

1 de

ion.

arrie

fame

tnefo do

uced

une.

unce

rday

fe-

iven

t be

mar-

ons .

ithin

r exrantit

mine Dun-

and

Mr

ohne

Bel

dati

com-

Man

burne

Both. thei

is de iæ de quisiof the the parosche kerk of Creichtoune the time of service, or at her duelling place before witnesses, primo, fecundo, tertio et perempiorie, unico tamen contextu pro duplice edicto. And likeways to be witnesses in the said matter, Alex. bishop of Galloway, who did marry the said erle and his lady, in Halerud house kirk, in Feb. 1565, fir John Bannatyne of Auchnoule justice clerk, Mr. Robert Creichtoun of Elliok the Queen's advocate, Mr. David Chalmers provoft of Creichtoun and chancellor of Ross, Michael abbot of Melross, and to compear before the said judges or any one of them in St. Geils kirk in Edr on Monday the s of May, be thamselves, or their procurators. Upon the faid 5 day, Mr John Manderstoun, one of the judges delegat only being present, compeared the same procurators for both the parties that were in the former proces, articulatlie Mr. Edmund Hay some of the witnesses summoned produced, and received for proving of the same. The said procurator renounced arder probatioune, and the judge affigned the morne, the 6th of May, ad publicandum producta, nempe depositiones ipforum testium. The quhilk day, post publicatas depositiones prædictas, Mr. Hen. Kinrosse, procurator for the lady instanter object objectiones juris generaliter, contra producta, insuper renunciavit ulteriori defensioni; proinde conclusa de consensu procuratorum hinc indequia, judex prædictus statuit crastinum diem pro termino, ad pronunciandam suam sententiam definitivam, ex deductis coram eo, in præsenti causa et processu. form hereunto, on Wednesday the 7th of May, the said judge gave out his sentence in favour of the erle, declarmg the marriage to be, and to have been null from the beginning, in respect of their contingence in blood, which hindered their lawful marriage without a dispensation obmined of befoir.

⁷ Two words in the parenthefis illegible.

N°. VIII. (Vol. II. p. 84.)

A letter from England concerning the murder of king Henry Darnley.

AVING the commodity of this bearer Mr. Clark I tho't good to write a few words unto you. I have received some writs from you; and some I have seen lately fent to others from you, as namely to the earl of Bedford of the 16th of May. I have participat the contents thereof to fuch as I thought meet, this mekle I can affure you; the intelligence given hither by the French was untrue, for there was not one papift nor protestant which did not confent that justice should be done, be the Queen my sove reign's aid and support, against such as had committed that abominable ill murder in your country; but to fay truth, the lack and coldness did not rise from such as were called to council, but from fuch as should give life and execution thereunto. And further, I affure you, I never knew no matter of estate proponed which had so many favourers of all forts of nations as this had: yea, I can fay unto you no man promoted the matter with greater affection, than the Spanish ambassador. And sure I am that no man dar openly be of any other mind, but to affirm that who loeved is guilty of this murder handfasted with advoutre, is unwork thy to live. I shall not need to tell you, which be out letts, and stayes from all good things here. acquainted with them as well as I. Needs I must confess that howfoever we omit occasions of benefit, honour, and furety; it behoveth your whole nobility, and namely such as before and after the murder were deemed to allow of Bodwell, to profecute with fword and justice the punishment of those abominable acts, though we lend you but a cold aid, and albeit you, and divers others, both honourable and honest, be well known to me, and fundry others here not the infamit What was affured I think and fat you me of Fran unadvil estate i fovereigns the

Part o

fay by

toth at jefty's dall is do than the to work her real good far

A lette

SIR.
July,

^{*} E. of Morton's Archieves. Bundle B. No. 25.

¹ Pa

to be justifiable in all their actions and doings; yet think not the contrary but your whole nation is blemished and infamit by these doings which lately passed among you. What we shall do I know not, neither do I write unto you assuredly, for we be subject unto many mutations, and yet Ithink we shall either aid you, or continue in the desence and safeguard of your prince, so as it appear to us that you mean his safeguard indeed, and not to run the fortune of france, which will be your own destruction, if you be unadvised. I know not one, no not one of any quality or estate in this country, which does allow of the Queen your sovereign, but would gladly the world were rid of her, so as the same were done without farther slander, that is to say by ordinary justice. This I send the 23d of May.

N°. IX. (Vol. II. p. 94)

Part of a letter from Sir Nicolas Throkmorton to Cecil, 11th of July 1567, from Berwick.

—SIR, your letter of the 6th of July. I received the toth at Berwick. I am forry to fee that the Queen's majety's disposition altereth not towards the lords, for when all is done, it is they which must stand her more in stead, than the Queen her cousin, and will be better instruments to work some benefite and quietness to her majesty and her realm, than the Queen of Scotland which is void of good same.

A letter from Sir Nicholas Throkmorton to Cecil, from Fastcastle, 12th of July 1567 ...

SIR, as you might perceive by my letter of the 11th July, I lodged at Fastcastle that night, accompanyed

1. Paper - Office.

er of

lark. e re-

lately

ord of eof to

; the

, for

cond that called w no

you.

than dare

oever

nwor

out

are

and fuch

w o

ment

rable

here.

An Original. Paper - Office.

with the lord Hume, the lord of Ledington, and James Melvin, where I was intreated very well, according to the state of that place, which is fitter to lodge prisoners than folks at liberty, as it is very little, fo it is very ftrong. By the conference I have had with the lord of Ledington, I find the lords his affociates and he hath left nothing un. thought of, which may be either to their danger, or work them furety, wherein they do not forget what good and harme France may do them, and likewise they consider the same of England; but as farr as I can perceive, to be plain with yow, they find more perril to grow unto them through the Queens majestys dealing than either they do by the French, or by any contrary faction amongest themselves, for they assured themselves the Queen will leave them in the bryers if they run her fortoun, and though they do acknowledge great benefit as well to them, as to the realm of England by her majesty's doings at Leith, whereof they fay mutually her majesty and both the realms have received great fruit: yet upon other accidents which have chanced fince, they have observed such things in her majesty's doings, as have ended to the danger of such as the hath dealt withal, to the overthrow of your own delignments, and little to the furety of any party: and upon these confiderations and discourses at length, methinketh I find a disposition in them, that either they mind to make their bargain with France, or else to deal neither with France nor yow, but to do what they shall think meet for their state and surety, and to use their remedy as occasions shall move them; meaning neither to irritate France nor England, untill fuch time as they have made their bargain alfuredly with one of yow; for they think it convenient to proceed with yow both for a while pari passu, for that was my lord of Ledington's terms. I do perceave they take the matter very unkindly, that no better answer is made to the letter, which the lords did fend to her majesty, and likewise that they hear nothing from yow to their fatisfaction, I have answered as well as I can, and have alledged their own proceedings so obscurely with the Queen, and th pened . I may upon 1 purpofe half un fwered. fhook let us a I fear truth i his con them o France. votion, of the of fuch no grea it is ob unless t friend; have of your pr liberty, that the undoing to talk you will vide for our owr which I next I Argyll, judice o

France ;

on horfe

my leav

mes

the

than ong.

on,

unvork

and

ider

to

hey

gest

ugh

s to

ith,

lms

nich

her

as

ign-

nese

find

heir

nce

heir

hall

ng-

al-

to:

hat

hey

ade

ty,

fa-

al-

en,

and their uncertainty hath occasioned this that is yet happened, and therefore her Majesty hath sent me to the end I may inform her throughly of the state of the matters, and upon the declaration of their minds and intents to fuch purpofes as shall be by me proposed on their majesty's behalf unto them, they shall be reasonably and resolutely an-At these things the lord of Ledington smiled and shook his head, and said it were better for us yow would let us alone, than neither to do us nor yourselves good, as I fear me in the end that will prove; Sr if there be any truth in Ledington, le Crocq is gone to procure Ramboilet his coming hither or a man of like quality, and to deliver them of their Queen for ever, who shall lead her life in France, in a abby reclused, the prince at the French devotion, the realm governed by a council of their election of the Scottish nation, the forts committed to the custody of fuch as shall be chosen amongst themselves, as yet I find no great likel hood that I shall have access to the Queen, it is objected they may not fo displease the French king, unless they were fure to find the Queen of England a good friend; and when they once by my access to the Queen have offended the French, then they fay yow will make your profit thereof to their undoing; and as to the Queen's liberty, which was the first head that I proposed, they said that thereby they did perceive that the Queen wants their undoing, for as for the rest of the matters it was but folly to talk of them, the liberty going before; but said they, if you will do us no good, do us no harm, and we will provide for our felves. In the end they faid, we should refuse our own commodity, before they concluded with any other, which I should hear of at my coming to Edin'; by my next I hope to fend you the band concluded by Hamiltons, Argyll, Huntly, and that faction, not so much to the prejudice of the lords of Edin', as that which was fent into france; thus having no more leasure but compelled to leap on horseback with the lords to go to Edin', I humbly take my leave of from Fastcastle the 12th of July 1567.

To Sir Nicolas Throkmorton being in Scotland, By the Queen, the 14th July 1567.

RUSTY and well beloved we greet you well, though we think that the causes will often change upon variety of accidents, yet we think for fundry respects, not amis, that as yow shall deal with the lords having charge of the young prince for the committing of him into our realm, fo shall yow also do well, in treaty with the Queen, to offer her that where her realm appeareth to be subject to fundry troubles from time to time, and thereby (as it is manifest) her son cannot be free, if she shall be contented that her fon may enjoy fuerty and quietness, within this our realm, being so near as she knows it is; we shall not fail to yield her as good suerty therein for her child, as can be devised for any that might be our child born of our own body, and shall be glad to shew to her therein the trew effect of nature; and herein she may be by yow remembered how much good may enfue to her fon to be nourished and acquainted with our country; and therefore all things considered, this occasion for her child, were rather to be fought by her and the friends of him, than offered by us; and to this end, we mean that yow shall so deal with her, both to ftay her indeed from inclining to the French practice, which is to us notorious, to convey her and the prince into France, and also to avoid any just offence, that she might hereafter conceive, if she should hear that we should deal with the lords for the prince.

Sir Nicolas Throkmorton to Queen Elizabeth, 14th July 1567, from Edinburgh. ".

IT may please your majesty to be advertised, I did signisse unto Mr. Secretary by my letters of the 11th and 12th of

July ,
my fit
where and v
at the
the lo
for m prefen
comm
publif
he aff
the ea

Liding M'Gil Ne that th fo did chance were o counci unto t that in should noon, my lo lords a though was gr Mar an of the which were (conven the adv of Lidi by his wards, Queen

An Original. Paper - Office.

nd.

ugh of

the

m,

to t to

it is

nted

this

not

as

n of

rein

yow

be fore

ther

ered

deal

the

her

just

ould

th,

mifie

n of

July, the day of mine entry into Scotland, the causes of my stay, my lodging at Fastcastle, a place of the lord Hume's, where I was met by the said lord and by the lord Lidington, and what had passed in conference betwixt us, whilest I was at the said Fastcastle. Since which time, accompanyed with the lords aforesaid, and with 400 horses by their appointment for my better conduct, I came to Edin' the 12th of this present. The 13th being Sunday appointed for a solemne communion in this town, and also a solemne fast being published, I could not have conference with the lords which he assembled within this town as I desired, that is to say the earls of Athole, and Morton, the lord Hume, the lord Lidington, Sir James Balfour captain of the castle, Mr. James M'sill, and the president of the session.

Nevertheless I made means by the lord of Lidington that they would use no protracte of time in mine audience, so did I likewise to the earle of Morton, whom I met by chance; I was answered by them both, that albeit the day were destined to facred exercises, such as were there of the council would confult upon any moyen touching my access unto them and my conference with them, and faid also, that in the afternoon either they would come to me, or I should hear from them. About 4 of the clock in the afternoon, the said 13th day, the lord of Lidington came to my lodgings, and declared unto me on the behalf of the lords and others, that they required me to have patience, though they had deferred my conference with them, which was grounded principally upon the absence of the earles of Mar and Glencairn, the lords Semple, Crighton, and others of the council, faying also that they did consider the matters which I was on your behalf to treate with them of, were of great importance, as they could not fatisfy nor conveniently treate with me, nor give me answer without the advice of the lords, and others their affociates; the lord of Lidington also said unto me, that where he perceived, by his private conference with me in my journey hitherwards, that I pressed greatly to have speedy access to the Queen their sovereign, he perceived, by the lords and others which were here, that in that matter there was great difficulty for many respects, but specially because they had refused to the French ambassador the like access, which being granted unto me, might greatly offend the French, a matter which they defired and intended to eschew; for they did not find by your majesty's dealings with them hitherto, that it behaved them to irritate the French king, and to lose his favour and good intelligence with him: I answered, that as to their refusal made unto the French ambassador, mon. fieur de Ville Roye was dispatched forth of France before these accidents here happened, and his special errand was to impeach the Queen's marriage with the earle of Bothel (for so indeed since my coming hither I learned his commission tended to that end, and to make offer to the Queen of another marriage), and as to monsieur de Crocq, he could have no order forth of France concerning these matters, fince they happened; and therefore they might very well hold them suspected to have conference with the Queen, least they might treate of matters in this time without instructions, and so rather do harm then good; but your majesty being advertized of all things which had chanced, had fent me hither to treat with them, for the well of the realm, for the conservation of their honours and credit, and for their furety; and I might boldly fay unto him, that your majesty had better deserved than the French had. He said, for his own part, he was much bound unto your majefty, and had always found great favour and courtefy in England, but to be plain with you, Sir, fayed he, there is not many of this affembly that have found fo great obligation at the Queen your fovereigns hands, as at the French kings, for the earles of Morton and Glencairn be the only persons which took benefit by the Queen's majesty's aid at Leith, the rest of the noblemen were not in the action; and we think, faid he, the Queens majesty your sovereign, by the opinion of her own council, and all the world, took as great benefit by that charge as the realm of Scotland, or any particular person; and not to talk with yow as an ambassador, but with Sir Nicolas Throkmorton, my lord Morton, and fuch as were in pain for the death of Davie, found but cold is banish whole your part, they the mate to emp Queen own p with n take the come, majesty ceeded

And things, please The castle c leven t ployed great f She is and 2 earle o liberty which as far a order f any me the mu abandor constant that if and kin kingdon him, a

worfe o

great

had which ch, a

they

, that

lose

that

mon-

efore

was

othel

com-

, he

tters,

well

een,

t in-

ma-

had

alm,

for

your

faid,

fty,

and,

any

the

for fons

th,

we

reat

par-

or,

and

but

cold favour of the Queens majestys hands, when they were banished forth of their own country; but I would all our whole company were as well willing to accomplish the Queen your sovereign intents and desires as I am; for mine own part, I am but one, and that of the meanest fort, and they be many noblemen and such as have great interest in the matter, mary yow shall be assured I will employ myself to employ my credit, and all that I may do, to satisfie the Queen your mistress, as much as lyeth in me, and for your own part you have a great many friends in this assembly, with many other good words. But for conclusion I must take this for an answer to stay untill the other lords were come, and thereupon I thought meet to advertize your majesty what hath passed, and how far forth I have proceeded; your expectation being great to hear from hence.

And now to advertize your majesty of the state of all things, as I have learned since my coming hither, it may please your majesty to understand as followeth.

The Queen of Scotland remaineth in good health in the castle of Lochleven, guarded by the lord Lindsay and Lochleven the owner of the house, for the Jord Ruthven is imployed in another commission, because he began to show great favour to the Queen, and to give her intelligence. She is waited on with 5 or 6 ladys, 4 or 5 gentlewomen, and 2 chamberers, whereof one is a French woman. The earle of Buchan, the earl of Murray's brother, hath alfoliberty to come to her at his pleasure; the lords aforesaid, which have her in guard, doe keep her very straitly, and as far as I can perceive, their rigour proceedeth by their order from these men, because that the Queen will not by any means be induced to lend her authority to profecute the murder, nor will not confent by any perswasion to abandon the lord Bothell for her husband, but avoweth constantly that she will live and die with him; and faith that if it were put to her choice to relinquish her crown and kingdom, or the lord Bothell, she would leave her kingdom and dignity, to go as a fimple damfell with him, and that she will never consent that he shall fare worse or have more harm than herself.

And as far as I can perceive, the principal cause of her detention is, for that these lords do see the Queen being of so fervent affection towards the earle Bothell as she is, and being put at, as they should be compelled to be in continual arms, and to have occasion of many battles, he being with manifest evidence notoriously detected to be the principal murderer, and the lords meaning prosecution of justice against him according to his merits.

The lords mean also a divorce betwixt the Queen and him, as a marriage not to be suffered for many respects, which separation cannot take place if the Queen be at liberty, and have power in her hands.

They do not also forget their own perill, conjoined with the danger of the prince, but as far as I can perceave, they intend not either to touch the Queen in suerty or in honour, for they do speak of her with respect and reverence, and do affirm, as I do learn, that the conditions aforesaid accomplished, they will both put her to liberty, and restore her to her estate.

These lords have for the guard of their town 450 Harquebushers which be in every good order, for the entertainment of which companys, until all matters be compounded, they did sue unto your majesty, to aid them with such sum of money as hath been mentioned to Mr. Secretary by the lord of Lidington's writing, amounting as I perceive to ten or twelve thousand crowns of the

They were lately advertized that the French King doth mind to fend hither monsieur de la Chapell des Ursine, a knight of the French order, and always well affectionate to the house of Guyse, and howsoever la Forest, Villaroy, and de Crocq have used language in the Queens favour and to these lords disadvantage there, to your majesty; de Crocq doth carry with him such matter as shall be little to the Queen's advantage; so as it is thought the French king, upon his coming to his presence, will rather satisfie the lords, than pleasure the Queen; for they have their party so well made, as the French will rather make their profit by them, than any other way.

and fu new iltons named St. An I fend to the by hin

Her

The unto n did the majesty but no Again affemble of this thefe 1

state of

to the

Lidingto do pro ber, an which the Qu her deft the furi that ap fpeak of I should The chi dare not could be The we Queen, over but There being

is,

e in

, he

be be secu.

and

ects,

t li-

ined

per-

erty

d re-

ondi-

r to

Har-

nter-

com.

hem

Se-

g as doth

e, a

e to

and

d to

rocq

the

ing,

the

arty

rofit

Herewith I fend your majefty the last bond agreed on, and signed by the Hamiltons, the earl of Argyll, Huntly, and sundry others at Dumbarton.

Nevertheless, since my coming to this town, the Hamiltons have sent unto me a gentleman of their sur-name, named Robert Hamilton, with a letter from the bishop of St. Andrews and the abbot of Arbroth, the copy whareof I send your majesty and mine answer unto them, referring to the bearer the declaration of some things, as these did by him unto me.

The earle of Argyll hath, in like manner, sent another unto me with a letter and credit, I have used him as I did the others, the copy of both which letters I fend your majesty also. The lord Harrys hath also sent unto me but not written, and I have returned unto him in like fort.

Against the 20th day of this month there is a generall affembly of all the churches, thires, and boroughs - towns of this realm, namely of fuch as be contented to repair to these lords to this town, where it is thought the whole flate of this matter will be handeled, and I fear me much to the Queen's disadvantage and danger; unless the lord of Lidington and some others which be best affected unto her do provide some remedy; for I perceave the great number, and in manner all, but chiefly the common people, which have affifted in these doings, do greatly dishonour the Queen, and mind feriously either her deprivation. or her destruction; I used the best means I can (considering the furie of the world here) to prorogue this assembly, for that appeareth to me to be the best remedy: I may not speak of dissolution of it, for that may not be abiden, and I should thereby bring myself into great hatred and peril. The chiefest of the lords which be here present at this time dare not show so much lenity to the Queen as I think they could be contented, for fear of the rage of the people. The women be most furious and impudent against the Queen, and yet the men be mad enough; so as a stranger over busie may soon be made a facrifice amongst them.

There was a great bruit that the Hamiltons with their adherents would put their force into the fields against the 24th of this month, but I do not find that intent so true, as the common bruit goeth.

The earle of Argyll is in the Highlands, where there is trouble among his own countrymen.

The earle of Lenox is by these lords much desired here, and I do believe your majesty may so use him, and direct him, as he shall be able to promote your purpose with these men.

The earle of Argyll, the Hamiltons and he be incompatible. — I do find amongst the Hamiltons, Argyll and the company two strange and fundry humours.

Hamiltons do make show of the liberty of the Queen, and prosecute that with great earnestness, because they would have these lords destroy her, rather than she should be recovered from them by violence; another time they seem to desire her liberty, and Bothwell's destruction, because they would compass a marriage betwixt the Queen and the lord of Arbroth.

The earle of Argyll doth affect her liberty, and Bothwell's destruction, because he would marry the Queen to his brother.

And yet neither of them, notwithstanding their open concurance (as appeareth by their bond), doth discover their minds to each other, nor mind one end; Knox is not here, but in the west parts, he and the rest of the ministers will be here at the great assembly, whos austerity against the Queen I fear as much as any man's.

By fome conference which I had with fome of this councill, me thinketh that they have intelligence that there is a disposition in the Queen of Scotland to leave this realm, and to retire herself into either England or into France.

and to retire herself into either England or into France, but most willingly into England, for such —— and mis likeings as she knoweth hath been, and is meant unto he in France, leaving the regiment either to a number of persons deleagued, and authorized by her, or to some one or more.

And it please your majesty, I think it not amis to put

Englar
fent,
or not go int
an infl
to can band o
new ur
your m

vow it

Ther matter speed, unto m piece of the hat to pass and jur and like least affect to fave health, July 156

Sir Nic

IT may letters of lords, a have fpoor Liding at whose Queen to which (t your in remembrance, that in case the said Queen come into England by your allowance, without the French king's confent, she shall loose her dowery in France, and have little or nothing from hence to entertain her; and in case she do go into France with the king's contentment, she may be an instrument (if she can recover favour, as time will help to cancell her disgrace) either by matching with some husband of good quality, or by some other devise, to work new unquietness to her own contry, and so consequently to your majesty's.

YOL

Therefore it may please your majesty to consider of this matter, and to let me know your pleasure with convenient speed, how I shall answer the same, if it be propounded unto me, either by the Queen, or by the councill, as a piece of the end and composition. For I am sure, of late, she hath seemed very desirous to have the matter brought to pass that she might go into England, retaining her estate and jurisdiction in herself, though she do not exercise it; and likewise I understand that some of this council which be least affected to her safety do think there is no other way to save her. Thus Almighty God preserve your majesty in health, honour, and all felicity; at Edinburgh the 14th July 1567.

Sir Nicholas Trokmorton to Queen Elizabeth, the 18th of July 1567, from Edinburgh 12.

It may please your majesty, yow might perceave by my letters of the 16th, how far I had proceeded with these lords, and what was their answer; since which time I have spoken particularly with the earle Morton, the lord of Lidington, and Sir James Balsour, captain of this castle, at whose hands I cannot perceave that as yet access to the Queen to Lochleven will be granted me, staying themselves have the absence of the lords and others their associates, which (they say) they look for within two days; and for

t the

true,

ere is

here,

direct

with ompa-

nd the

ueen,

would

ald be feem

ecaule

nd the

Both-

en to n con-

their here,

ers will

of this

there

realm,

rance.

d mil

to her

ber o ne one

to put

yow

An Original. Paper - Office.

that I find, by likelihood and apparent prefumptions, that mine access to the Queen will hardly be granted, I have thought good not to defer this dispatch untill I have a resolute answer in that matter.

May it therefore please your majesty, to understand Robert Melvin returned from the Queen in Lochlevin, to this town the 6th of July, and brought a letter from her written of her own hand to these lords, which doth contain a I understand matter as followeth—A request unto them to have consideration of her health, and if they will not put her to liberty, to change the place of restraint to the castle of Stirling, to the end she might have the comfort and company of her son, and if they will not change her from Lochleven, she required to have some other gentlewomen about her, naming none.

To have her Apothecary, to have some modest minister—To have an imbroiderer to draw forth such work a she would be occupied about, and to have a variet of the chamber.—Touching the government of the realm she maketh two offers, which are but generally touched in he letter, the particularitys be not specified, but referred to Robert Melvin's credit, the one is to commit it only an whose names ensue, affished with such others as they shall unto them, that is to say, the duke of Chattelrault the earls of Morton, Murray, Marr, and Glencairn.

She hath written unto them that I might have access unt her.—She requireth further, that if they will not tree her and regard her as their Queen, yet to use her as the king their sovereign's daughter (whom many of them knew and as their prince's mother.—She will by no means yiel to abandon Bothell for her husband, nor relinquish him which matter will do her most harm of all, and hardened these lords to great severity against her.

She yieldeth in words to the profecution of the murder I have the means to let her know that your majesty hat fent me hither for her relief.

I have also persuaded her to conform herself to renound have fo for it; child, Mr. I with wh the other Ihave find th shall do many ar of histori of this r some upo ther co The b ath fent nd fome Stirling, n this f ion in th flaring f

Bothell

divorce

the wil

groundi

weeks g

acknow!

Captain and ferved accompan the great nnecessar

hey can ill the m

tparation tryation

ood orde

pillity.

, tha

I have

e a re

nd Ro

to thi er writ

tain a nem t

ot pu

e caftl

ort and

er from women

ninister

vork a

of th

m fh

in he rred to aly an e lord

y shal

elrault

is unt

t tres

knew knew

n him

rdenet

nurder dy hat

nounc

Bothell for her husband, and to be contented to suffer a divorce to pass betwixt them; she hath sent me word that she will in no ways consent unto that, but rather die; gounding herself upon this reason, taking herself to be seven weeks gone with child; by renouncing Bothell, she should acknowledge herself to be with child of a bastard, and to have forseited her honour, which she will not do to die for it; I have perswaded her to save her own life and her child, to choose the least hard condition.

Mr. Knox arrived here in this town the 6th of this month, with whom I have had conference, and with Mr. Craig also, the other minister of this town.

I have perswaded with them to preach and perswad lenity, I find them both very austere in this conference, what they shall do hereafter I know not, they are furnished with many arguments, some forth of the scripture, some forth of histories, some grounded (as they say) upon the laws of this realm, some upon practices used in this realm, and some upon the conditions and oath made by their prince ther coronation.

The bishop of Galloway, uncle to the earle of Huntley, with sent hither to these lords, that his nephew the earle and some others of that side may, at Linlithgow or at kinding, have some communication with some appointed in this side, assuring them that there is a good disposition in the lords of the other party to concurre with these, sturing further that they will not differ for triffles or innecessary things, and (as I am given to understand) bey can be pleased the Queen's restraint be continued, until the murder be pursued in all persons, whereby the sparation of the Queen and Bothell is implyed, the preservation of the prince, the security for all men, and a wood order taken for the governance of the realm in tranvallity.

Captain Clerk, which hath so long served in Denmark and served at Newhaven, did the 16th of this month accompanyed with one of his soldiers, or rather the soldier the greater same goeth) kill one Wilson a seaman, and fuch a one as had great estimation with these lords both for his skill, his hardyness, honesty, and willingness in this action; whereupon Clerk hath retired himsels; their quarrel was about the ship which took Blacketer, which ship was appointed by these lords to go to the north of Scotland to impeach the passage of the earle Bothell, it case he went either to the isles, or to any other place; by the death of this man this enterprize was dashed.

The bishop of Galloway is come to Linlithgow, and doth defire to speak with the lord of Lidington.

The abbot of Kilwinning hath fent for Sir James Balfour captain of the castle, to have conference with him.

As I wrote unto your majesty in my last, the Hamilton now find no matter to disever these lords and them asunder, but would concur in all things (yea in any extremit against the Queen) so as that they might be affured the prince of Scotland were crouned king, and should diswithout issue, that the earle of Lenox's son living should not inherit the croun of this realm, as next heir to him penew.

And although the lords and councelors speak reverently mildly, and charitably of their Queen, so as I cannot gathe by their speech any intention to cruelty or violence, yet do find by intelligence, that the Queen is in very great peril of her life, by reason that the people assembled a this convention do mind vehemently the destruction of her

It is a public speech amongst all the people, and among all estates (faving of the counsellors) that their Quee bath no more liberty nor priviledge to commit murder of adultery, than any other private person, neither by God

Taws, nor the laws of the realm.

The earl of Bothwell, and all his adherents and affociate be put to the horn by the ordinary justice of this town named the lords of the fession; and commandment give to all shirriffs, and all other officers, to apprehend him and all other his followers and receiptors—The earl of Bothell's porter, and one of his other servitors of his chanber, being apprehended, have confessed such sunday circum one of own p numbe of then dall, a glad th or rece officers remain ming, him, grow d and no fifty has from fu St. John and wel bar is 1 the carri Of la

Thus
fly's knowith lone Edinburg

of the f

by matte

hono der, hono

Letter

Dy my Secretary

s both

less in

thei

which

orth of

Il, it

ce; by

, and

Balfour

milton

n asun

tremit

ed th

uld di

Shoul

to h rently

gathe, yet

y grea

bled i

of her

mong

Quee der no God

ociate

town

nt give earl (

circun

fances, as it appeareth evidently, that he, the faid earl was one of the principal executors of the murder, in his own person accompanyed with fundry others, of which number I cannot yet certainly learn the names but of three of them, that is to fay, two of the Ormistons of Tivotdall, and one Hayborn of Bolton; the lords would be glad that none of the murderers should have any favour or receipt in England, and hereof their defire is, that the officers upon the border may be warned; Bothell doth still remain in the north parts, but the lord Seaton and Fleming, which have been there, have utterly abandoned him, and do repair hitherwards. — The intelligence doth grow daily betwixt these lords, and those which held of; and notwithstanding these lords have sent an hundred and fifty harqubushers to Stirling, to keep the town and passage from furprize; and fo have they done in like manner to & Johnston, which be the two passages from the north, and west to this town, I do understand the captain of Dunhar is much busied in fortifying that place, I do mervile the carriages be not impeached otherwise than they be.

Of late this Queen hath written a letter to the captain of the faid castle, which hath been surprized; and thereby matter is discovered which maketh little to the Queen's advantage.

Thus, having none other matter worthy your majefy's knowledge, I befeech God to prosper your majesty with long life, perfect health, and prosperous selicity. At Idinburgh the 18th of July 1567.

letter of Sir Nicholas Throkmorton to the right honourable the earl of Leicester, knt. of the order, and one of the lords of her majesty's most honourable Privy Council ".

By my former dispatches sent to her majesty, and Mr. Secretary, since the 12th of July, your lordship might have 13 24th of July 1367. Paper-Office, from the Original.

Englar

abling

for fau

things

and h percei

their

for the taking

Englar

be as he fait

Scottif

those so as will b

of him

the C

the no

themse neither

in tim

he) th

advent

a dan

Queen

ceffor her ma

as do

our pr

withou

tho' th

could 1

unto u dispate your 1

majesty

perceived the state of this country, and to what end the matters be like to come: fo as not to trouble your lordfhi with many words; this Queen is like very shortly to be deprive of her royal estate, her son to be crowned king, and sh detained in prison within this realm; and the same to b governed, in the young king's name, by a council, confifting of certain of the nobility, and other wife men of this realm fo as it is easy to be seen that the power and ability to d any thing to the commodity of the Queen's majesty, an the realm of England, will chiefly, and in manner wholh rest in the hands of these lords, and others their affociate affembled at Edinburgh. Now if the Queen's majesty wi still persist in her former opinion towards the Queen Scotland, (unto whom the shall be able to do no good) the I do plainly fee that these lords and all their accomplication will become as good French, as the French king can will to all intents and purposes. And as for the Hamiltons the earls of Arguile, Huntlye, and that faction, they b already fo far inchanted that way, as there needeth litt devise to draw them to the French devotion. Then this is the flate of things fo come to pass of this country, that France has Scotland now as much conjoined unto them to all purposes, as ever it was; and what an infrument the young prince will prove, to unquiet England, I report me to your lordships' wisdom, and therefore considering the weight of the matter, and all the circumstance, trust your lordships will well bethink you in time (for't high time) how to advise her majesty, to leave nothing un done that may bring the prince of Scotland to be in he possession, or, at the least, to be at her devotion, An amongst other things, that I can imagine, for the fire degree nothing is more meet to bring this to effect, that to allure this company here affembled, to bear her majett their favour. Some talk hath passed between the lord of Liddington and me, in certain conferences, about the By him I find, that when her majesty shall have won these men to her devotion, the principal point that will make them conformable to deliver their prince into

nd the

lordshi

deprive

and fh

e to b

onliftin

s realm

ty to d

ity, an wholly

Tociate

esty wi

ueen (

d) the

omplice

an wish

niltons

they b

th litt

nen thi

ry, tha

them

ument I repor

fidering

nce,

for 'ti

ing un

An

he fire

t, that majelt

lord o ut thi

it tha

e into

Ingland, will rest upon the Queen, and the realms enbling him to the succession of the crown of England, for fault of issue of the Queen's majesty's body, some other hings will also be required, as the charge of the faid prince and his train to be at the charge of England. I do well perceive that these men will never be brought to deliver their prince into England, without the former condition, for the succession of England; for (faith Liddington) that taking place, the prince shall be as dear to the people of England as to the people of Scotland; and the one will be as careful of his preservation as the other. Otherwise, he faith, all things confidered, it will be reported that the Scottishmen have put their prince to be kept in safety, as those which commit the sheep to be kept by the wolves. so as for conclusion, your lordships may perceive here will be the scope of this matter. As unto the delivering of him upon hostages, he sayeth, let no man think, that the condition of the succession not being accomplished, the nobility and the gentry will never consent to leave themselves destitute of their fovereign, upon any hostages, neither upon any promises, nor likelihood of good to issue in time to come. It were not good for yourfelves (faith he) that the matter were so handled; for then you should adventure all your goods in one ship, which might have a dangerous effect, confidering the unwillingness of the Queen your fovereign to confent to establishing any succellor to the crown. And then, how unmete were it, that her majesty having in her possession already all such persons as do pretend to it, or be inheritable to the crown, to have our prince also in her custody. For so there might follow, without good capitulations, a strange and dangerous islue, tho' the Queen your mistress do think that fuch imaginations could not proceed but from busy heads, as you have uttered unto us on her behalf. What is come to pals fince my last dispatch, and how far forth things are proceeded, I refer your lordship to be informed by my letters fent unto her majesty, at this time. And so I pray Almighry God, preferve

must

theref

prefer

fo to you r fpeed

Thro

COL

W

of Mu

by my

in the

to thei

take it

whethe prizon.

league

little 1

the ord

yesterd

guess h

they cl

man,

be grat

plainly

earl of

be part bitterly

he, fo

25 12tl

your lordship in much honour and felicity. At Edinburgh this 24th or July 1567.

It may please your good lordship to make my lord Stuard partner of this letter.

The Queen to Sir Nicholas Throkmorton ".

By the Queen.

RUSTY and right well beloved, we greet you well, for as much as we do confider that you have now a long time remained in those parts, without expedition in the charge committed unto you, we think it not meet feeing there hath not followed the good acceptation and fruit of our well meaning towards that state, which good reason would have required, that you should continue there any longer; ou pleasure, therefore, is, that you shall, immediately upon the receipt hereof, fend your servant Middlemore unto the lords and estates of that realm, that are assembled together, willing him to declare unto them, that it cannot but feem very strange unto us, that you having been sent from us, of fuch good intent, to deal with them, in matters tending for much to their own quiet, and to the benefit of the whole estate of their country, they have so far forgotten themselves, and fo flightly regarded us and our good meaning, not only in delaying to hear you, and deferring your access to the Queen their fovereign, but also, which is strangest of all, in not vouchfafing to make any answer unto us. And altho these dealings be such, indeed, as were not to be looked for at their hands, yet do we find their usage and proceeding toward their Soveraign and Queen, to overpass all the rest in so strange a degree, as we for our part, and we suppose the whole world besides, cannot but think them to have therein gone so far beyond the duty of subjects, must needs remain to their perpetual tauche for ever. And therefore ye shall say, that we have tho't good, without consuming any longer time in vain, to revoke you to our presence, requiring them to grant you licence and pasport so to do, which when you shall have obtained, we will that you make your repair hither, unto us, with as convenient speed as you may. Given, &c.

^{14 6}th Aug. 1567.

Indorsed 6th August, 1567.

Throkmorton to the right honourable Sir William Cecil, knight, one of her majesty's privy council and principal fecretary, give these ".

SIR,

inburgh

y lord

n **

well.

ng time

charge re hath ur wel

er; our

y upon

nto the gether,

ut feem

us, o

iding lo

e whole

felves,

only in

to the

all, in d altho looked nd pro-

pass all

and we

them to cts,

WHAT I have learned, fince the arrival of my lord of Murray, and Monf. de Linnerol, you shall understand by my letter to her majesty, at this time. The French do, in their negotiations, as they do in their drink, put water to their wine. As I am able to fee into their doings, they take it not greatly to the heart how the Queen sleep, whether she live or die, whether she be at liberty or in prizon. The mark they shoot at, is, to renew their old league; and can be as well contented to take it of this little king, (howfoever his title be) and the fame by the order of these lords, as otherwise. Lineroll came but yesterday, and methinketh he will not tarry long; you may guess how the French will seek to displease these lords, when they changed the coming of La Chapelle des Oursins for this man, because they doubted that de la Chapelle should not be grateful to them, being a papist. Sir, to speak more plainly to you, than I will do otherwise, me thinketh the earl of Murray will run the course that those men do, and be partaker of their fortune. I hear no man speak more bitterly against the tragedy, and the players therein, than he, so little like he hath to horrible sins. I hear an inkling that Ledington is to go into France, which I do as much mislike, as any thing, for our purpose. I can affure you the whole protestants of France will live and die in these men's quarrels; and, where there is bruit amongst you: that aid should be fent to the adverse party, and that Mar. tigues should come hither with some force; Mons. Baudelot hath affured me of his honour, that instead of Martigues coming against them, he will come with as good a force to fuccour them: and if that be fent under meaner conduct, Robert Stuart shall come with as many to fortify them. But the constable hath affured these lords, that the king meaneth no way to offend them. Sir, I pray you find my revocation convenient, and speed you to further it, for I am here now to no purpose, unless it be to kindle these lords more against us. Thus I do humbly take my leave of you, from Edenburgh the 12th of August, 1567.

^{15 12}th Aug. 1567. Paper-Office, from the Original.

Yours to use and command,

The Queen to Nicholas Throkmorton.

I RUSTY and well-beloved we greet you well. We have, within these two days, received three fundry letters of yours, of the 20th, 22d, and 23d, of this month, having not before those received any seven days before; and do find, by these your letters, that you have very diligently and largely advertised us of all the hasty and peremptory proceedings there; which as we nothing like, fo we trust in time to fee them wax colder, and to receive some reformation. For we cannot perceive, that they with whom you have dealt can answer the doubts moved by the Hamiltons, who howsoever they may be carried for their private respects, yet those things which they move, will be allowed by all reasonable persons. For if they may not, being noblemen of the realm, be suffered to hear the Queen their sovereign declare her mind concerning the reports which are made of her, by fuch as keep her in captivity, how should they believe the reports, or obey them which do report it? and therefore our meani fland, forth : for he able f will b require fhould to us, and w by you able to tend to authori you, t you m thele o have yo tons, o

> Sir Nic St.

In

A FT fhips, to majesty dor to to cate unting the being detrary to of whose

fint to the meaning is, you shall let the Hamiltons plainly underfland, that we do well allow of their proceedings, (as far forth as the fame doth concern the Queen their fovereign for her relief) and in fuch things as shall appear reasonable for us therein to do, for the Queen our fifter, we will be ready to perform the fame. And where it is fo required that upon your coming thence, the lord Scroope should deal with the lord Herris to impart their meanings to us, and ours to them, we are well pleased therewith, and we require you to advertise the lord Scroope hereof by your letters, and to will him to shew himself favourable to them in their actions, that may appear plainly to tend to the relief of the Queen, and maintenance of her authority. And as we willed our fecretary to write unto you, that upon your message done to the earl of Murray, you might return, fo our meaning is you shall. And if these our letters shall meet you on the way, yet we will have you advertise both the lord Scroope, and the Hamiltons, of our meaning.

Indorfed 29 Aug. 1567.

ch

ou

fe

i;

Ot

es

ce

n-

fy

nd

10 e fe

of

of

ly

oft or-

ou

s, ts,

all

of

re

by ונו

N°. X. (Vol. II. p. 100.)

Sir Nicholas Throkmorton to the archbishop of St. Andrew's and the abbot of Arbrothe ...

AFTER my good commendations to your good lordfhips, this shall be to advertize you, that the Queen's majesty my sovereign having sent me hither her ambassador to the Queen her sister your sovereign, to communicate unto her such matter as she thought meet, considering the good amity and intelligence betwixt them, who being detained in captivity (as your lordships know) contrary to the duty of all good subjects, for the enlargement of whose person, and the restitution of her to her dignity, ^{16 13}th Aug. 1567. Paper - Office, from a copy which Sir Nicholas fat to the Queen.

her majesty gave me in charge to treat with these lords affembled at Edenburgh, offering them all reasonable conditions and means as might be, for the fafeguard of the young prince, the punishment of the late horrible murder, the dissolution of the marriage betwixt the Queen and the earl of Bodwell, and laftly for their own fureties. In the negociation of which matters I have (as your lordships well know) spent a long time to no purpose, not being able to prevail in any thing with those lords, to the Oueen my fovereign's satisfaction. Of which strange proceedings towards her majesty, and undutiful behaviour towards their sovereign, I have advertised the Queen's majesty; she (not being minded to bear this indignity) hath given me in charge to declare her further pleasure unto them, in fuch fort as they may well perceive her majesty doth difal. low of their proceedings, and thereupon hath revoked me. And further hath given me in charge to communicate the fame unto your lordships, requiring you to let me know, before my departure hence, (which shall be, God willing, as foon as I have received answer from you) what you and your confederates will affuredly do, to fet the Queen your fovereign at liberty, and to restore her to her former dignity by force or otherwise; seeing these lords have refused all other mediation, to the end the Queen's majesty my fovereign may concur with your lordships in this honourable enterprize.

And in case through the dispersion of your associates, your lordships can neither communicate this matter amongst you, nor receive resolution of them all by that time, it may please you to send me the opinions of so many of you as may confer together, within two or three days, so as I may have your answer here in this town by Monday of Tuesday next at the farthest, being the 19th of this August; for I intend (God willing) to depart towards England, upon Wednesday following. Thus I most humbly take my leave of your lordships at Edenburgh, the 13th of Aug. 1567.

Indorfed the 13th of Aug. 1567.

Sir Ni

have re it may unto y instructo concern concern

To the kinds of bled at behavior in this dry per ty hath them, advised exercise be affur an indigneighbo they have they they have the fuffer of the f

And

17 24 fent to fe rds

onthe

the

the ips

eing

een

ngs

rds

fhe

me

in fal-

me.

W,

ng,

you

en

ner

re-

ho-

es,

igst

it

ou

s I

or

ft;

d,

my 57. Sir Nicholas Throkmorton to the lord Herrys 17.

Your good lordship's letter of the 13th of August I have received the 19th of the same. For answer whereunto it may like your lordship to understand, that I will signify unto you plainly, how far forth I am already thoroughly instructed of the Queen's majesty my sovereign's pleasure concerning the detention of the Queen your sovereign, and concerning her relief.

To the first her majesty hath given in charge, to use all kinds of persuasion in her name, to move these lords assembled at Edenburgh to desist from this violent and undutiful behaviour, which they used towards their sovereign. And in this part, besides the shew of many reasons, and sundry persuasions of amicable treaty with them, her majesty hath willed me to use some plain and severe speech unto them, tending so far forth, as if they would not be better advised, and reform these their outrageous proceedings exercised against their sovereign, that then they might be assured her majesty neither would nor could indure such an indignity to be done to the Queen, her good cousin and neighbour.

And notwithstanding these my proceedings with them, they have made proof to be little moved thereby, for as yet neither will they confent to the enlargement, neither suffer me to speak with her. So as it seemeth to me, it is superfluous to treat any more with them after this manner. Whereupon I have advertised the Queen's majesty my sovereign, expecting daily her majesty's further order; and as I shall be advertised thereof, so will not fail to signify the same to your good lordship; and in the mean time will advertise her majesty also, what your lordship hath written unto me. Thus with my due commendations to your good lordship, I commit the same to almighty God, resting always to do you the pleasure and service that I can lawfully. At Edenburgh.

^{17 24}th Aug. 1567. Paper Office, from a copy which Sir Nicholas fent to fecretary Cecil.

Indorsed 24th of August, 1567.

N°. XI. (Vol. II. p. 111.)

Account of lord Herrys's Behaviour in the Parliament held December 15, 1567 1.

HE lord Herrys made a notable harangue, in the name of the duke and himself their friends and adherents, (the duke himself, the earl of Cassilles, and the abbot of Kilwinning being also present) to persuade the union of the whole realm in one mind. Wherein he did not spare to fet forth solemnly the great praise that part of this nobility did deserve, which in the beginning took meanes for punish. ment of the earl Bothwell, as also seeing the Queen's inor. dinat affection to that wicked man, and that she could not be induced by their persuasion to leave him, that in sequestring her person within Lochlevin, they did the duty of noblemen. That their honourable doings, which had not spared to hazard their lives and lands, to avenge their native country from the flanderous reports that were spoken of it among other nations, had well deferved that all their brethren should join with them in so good a cause. That he and they, in whose names he did speak, would willingly, and without any compulsion, enter themselves in the same yoke, and put their lives and lands in the like hazard, for And if the Queen herself were maintenance of our cause. in Scotland, accompanied with 20,000 men, they will be of the fame mind, and fight in our quarrel. He hoped the remainder noblemen of their party, Huntly, Arguile, and others, which had not as yet acknowledged the king, would come to the same conformity, whereunto he would also earnestly move them. And if they will remain obstinate, and ref and the wife wi and mo could l regent, of the H when h

18 Paper - Office.

M ALtho me to b l am ou nor the I do as fed you, yourfelf no want fwafion a mean tim very evil ther. I you the me. An August, vants. A will you . try, (wi mine; an

rebels, as

and refuse to qualify themselves, then will the duke, he, and their friends, join with us to correct them, that otherwise will not reform themselves. So plausible an oration, and more advantageous for our party, none of ourselves could have made. He did not forget to term my lord regent, by the name of regent, (there was no mention at all of the Earl of Murray) and to call him grace at every word, when his speeches were directed to him, accompanying all his words with low courteses after this manner.

N°, XII. (Vol. II. p. 134.)

Queen Mary to Queen Elizabeth ".

MADAM,

and

ar-

the

ts,

the lity fh-

or-

not

ing

en.

to try

ng

ren

nd

у,

ne

or

re

ed

e,

e,

ALthough the necessity of my cause (which maketh me to be importune to you) do make you to judge that lam out of the way; yet such as have not my passion, nor the respects where you are persuaded, will think that I do as my cause doth require. Madam, I have not accused you, neither in words, nor in thought, to have used yourself evil towards me. And I believe, that you have no want of good understanding, to keep you from perswafion against your natural good inclination. But in the mean time I can't chuse (having my senses) but perceive very evil furtherance in my matters, fince my coming hither. I thought that I had sufficiently discoursed unto you the discommodities, which this delay bringeth unto me. And especially that they think in this next month of august, to hold a parliament against me and all my servants. And in the mean time, I am stayed here, and yet will you, that I should put myself further into your country, (without feeing you) and remove me further from mine; and there do me this dishonour at the request of my ntbels, as to fend commissioners to hear them against me, ¹⁹ Cott. Lib. Cal. t. A Copy, and probably a Translation.

as you would do to a mere subject, and not hear me by mouth. Now, madam, I have promifed you to come to you, and having there made my moan and complaint of these rebels, and they coming thither, not as possessors, but as subjects, to answer. I would have befought you to hear my justification of that which they have falfly set furth against me, and if I could not purge myself thereof, you might then discharge your hands of my causes, and let me go for fuch as I am. But to do as you fay, if I were culpable I would be better advised; but being not so, I can't accept this dishonour at their hands, that being in possession they will come and accuse me before your commissioners, whereof I can't like: And seeing you think it to be against your honour and confignage to do otherwise, I befeech you that you will not be mine enemy, untill you may fee how I can discharge myself every way, and to suffer me go into France, where I have a dowry to maintain me; or at least to go into Scotland, with affurance that if there come any strangers thither, I will bind myself for their return without any prejudice to you, or if it pleis you not to do thus, I protekt that I will not impute it to falshood, if I receive strangers in my country, without making you any other discharge for it. Do with my body as you will, the honour of blame shall be yours. For I had rather die here, and that my faithful fervants may be fuccoured (tho' you would not fo) by strangers, than to fuffer them to be utterly undone, upon hope to receive, in time to come, particular commodity. There be many things to move me to fear that I shall have to do, in this country, with others than with you. But forasmuch as nothing hath followed upon my last moan, I hold my peace, happen what may hap. I have as leef to ande { my fortune, as to feek it, and not find it. Further, it pleased you to give license to my subjects to go and come. This has been refused by my lord Scroop and Mr. Knolls (as they fay) by your commandment, because I would not depart hence to your charge, untill I had answer of this letter, tho' I shewed them that you required my answer, upon the two points, contained in your letter.

The

The

to you t

I would

your aid

and com

quarrel ,

thereunto

of all, v

fore him

which is

come to but will forced.

my Lord

none of 1

you, wit

ever it

deny me

it doth r

wards me

I am con

if God p

bound to blame you

my credit

I warrant

when it f

(to die fo

fwer not .

For they

fuccour,

would cha to have m

to my life

and all f

thought to

Alas! do

20 Perhap

VOL.

The one is to let you briefly understand, I am come to you to make my moan to you, the which being heard, I would declare unto you mine innocency, and then require your aid, and for lack thereof, I can't but make my moan and complaint to God, that I am not heard in my just quarrel, and to appeal to other princes to have respect thereunto, as my case requireth; and to you, madam, first of all, when you shall have examined your conscience before him, and have him for witness --- And the other. which is to come further into your country, and not to come to your presence, I will esteem that as no favour, but will take it for the contrary, obeying it as a thing forced. In mean time, I befeech you, to return to me my Lord Herries, for I can't be without him, having none of my counsal here, and also to suffer me, if it please you, without further delay, to depart hence whitherfoever it be out of this country. I am fure you will not deny me this simple request for your honour's fake, seeing it doth not please you to use your natural goodness towards me otherwise, and seeing that of mine own accord, I am come hither, let me depart again, with yours. And if God permit my causes to succeed well, I shall be bound to you for it; and happening otherwise, yet I can't blame you. As for my Lord Fleeming, feeing that upon my credit you have fuffered him to go home to his house, I warrant you he shall pass no further, but shall return when it shall please you. In that you trust me, I will not (to die for it) deceive you. But from " Dumbarton I anwer not, when my L. Fleeming shall be in the Tower. for they which are within it, will not forbear to receive succour, if I don't affure them of yours; no, tho' you would charge me withal, for I have left them in charge, to have more respect to my servants and to my estate, than to my life. Good fifter, be of another mind, win the heart, and all shall be yours, and at your commandment. thought to fatisfy you wholly, if I might have feen you. Alas! do not as the ferpent, that stoppeth his hearing, ingle Paper Office

by

to

of

s,

to

th

CH

ne

uln't

on

s, nft

I

oto

aft

ny

JUC

eft

ers

or

all

er-

rs,

to

ere

to

or-

to

er,

and

olls

not

this

et,

e

²⁰ Perhaps for.

for I am no enchanter, but your fifter, and natural cousin. If Cæsar had not disdained to hear or read the complaint of an advertiser, he had not so died; why should princes ears be stopped seeing that they are painted so long; Meaning that they should hear all and be well advised, before they answer. I am not of the nature of the basilisk, and less of the chamelion, to turn you to my likeness, and tho' I should be so dangerous and curs'd as men say, you are sufficiently arm'd with constancy and with justice, which I require of God, who give you grace to use it well with long and happy life. From Carlise the 5th of July, 1568.

N. XIII. (Vol. II. p. 135.)

Part of a letter from Sir Francis Knollys to Cecil, 8th Aug. 1468, from Bolton ".

BUT furely this Queen doth feem, outwardly, not only to favour the form, but also the chief article of the religion of the gospel, namely justification by faith only: and she heareth the faults of papistry revealed, by preaching or otherwise, with contented ears, and with gentle and weak replys, and she doth not seem to like the worse of religion throw me.

Part of a letter from fir Francis Knollys to Cecil, 21 Sept. 1568, from Bolton.

Tr came to this Queen's ears of late that she was bruited to be lately turned to the religion of the gospell, to the great disliking of the papists hereabouts, which thing herself confessed unto me, and yesterday, openly in the great chamber, when the assembly was full, and some papists pre-fhe proupon he done a were for her zea fee her faid fhe and all my religifier will honour

fent,

A letter

IVIY
informed Queen's
highnefs, laft cumi dependent counfal to or fpulzie
My lore
fhips is, b Queen's m

your lords your fover as God had knowled do the fub fiege of Le

at An Original. Paper-Office.

ufin.

laint

nces

ean-

fore

and

and

you

ice .

Well

uly,

cil,

not the nly:

hing

veak

gion

cil,

was ell,

hing

reat

pre-

fent, she took occasion to speak of religion, and then openly she professed herself to be of the papist religion, and took upon her to patronize the same more earnestly than she had done a great while afore, altho' her defences and arguments were so weak, that the effect of her speech was only to shew her zeal; and afterwards to me alone, when I missisked to see her become so considently backward in religion. Why, said she, would you have me to lose France and Spain, and all my friends in other places, by seeming to change my religion, and yet I am not affured the Queen my good sister will be my affured friend, to the satisfaction of my honour and expectation.

Nº. XIV. (Vol. II.) p. 136.

A letter from my lord Herries to my lord Scroop and fir F. Knollys, September 3d, 1568 22.

My lords, pleasit your honourable lordships, I am informed by James Borthwick, lately come from the Queen's majesty your soverane, that is schawin to her highness, I should have ridden in Crasurdmure, sen my last cuming into this realm, upon the earl of Murray's dependents. And that I suld have causit, or been of counsal to Scottismen to have ridden in England, to slay or spulzie her majesty's subjects.

My lords, I thought it right needfull because your lordhips is, by your soverane, commanded to attend upon the Queen's majesty my mistress, so having daily access in thir matters, to declare upon the truth; humbly desiring that your lordships will; for God's cause; certificate the Queen your soverane the same.

As God lives, I have neither confented, nor any wife had knowledge of any Scottisman's riding in England, to do the subjects thereof hurt in bodies or goods, sene the stege of Leith; and as I understand it shall be fund true,

²¹ Cott. Lib. Cal. C. An Original in his ewn hand:

that gif ony fic open hurt be done, it is by the Queen my fovereign's disobedients, and that I have not ridden nor hurt no Scottishman, nor commanded no hurt to be done to them, sen my coming from the Queen's majesty of England, it is well kend, for that never ane will complain of me.

I have done more good to Crawfurdmure nor ever the earl of Murray has done, and will be loather to do them any harm than he will. Except the Queen's majefty your fovereign, command fic false reports to be tryit, quhereof this is altogidder an inventit leasing, her grace fall be trublit, and tyne the hearts of true men here, quhom of fic report fall be made, that baieth would serve hir, and may, better than they unworthy liars.

My lords, I understand the Queen's majesty your sovereign is not contented of this bruite, that there should ony Frenchman come in this realm, with the duke of Truth it is, I am no manner of way the Chattelherault. counsall of their cuming, nor has no fic certainty thereof, as I hear by Borthwick's report from the Queen's majesty your fovereign. And gif I might as well fay it, as it is true indeed, her grace's felf is all the wyitt, and the counfall that will never let her take order with my maistress cause. For that our fovereign havand her majesty's promise, be writing, of luff, friendship, and affistance gif need had fo requirit, enterit that realm, upon the 16 day of May, fen that time the Queen's majesty has commanded me diverse times to declare she would accept her cause, and do for her, and to put her in peaceable possession of this realme, and when I required of her majesty, in my mailtress name, that her highness would either do for her, (as her special trust was she would) according to her former promises, or otherwise give her counsal, would not consent, (as I show her grace I fand diverse repugnant) then that fhe would permit her to pass in France, or to some other prince to feek support, or failing hereof, (quhilk was against all reason) that she would permit her to return in her awin countrie, in fic fempil manner as she came out of it, would realm 1 ficklike like pr herself, not cor fo I w able, g it does. of frien in this trary w to stay in the p twenty been di they ma of guid

dient fu
They
taken up hundred fubjects
their fal
The

vishing of fiastical a writings hear of, gile of J realme, betwixt this artice. Thomas now, upon qui as I hav 14

10 le

g.

ne

m

ur

of

be

of

nd

ld

of

ne

ty

13

Il

be

,

ne

be

is

if-

25 et

t,

at

er

28

in

ut

of it, and faid to her majesty ane of thir, for her honour. would not be refusit, seeand that she was comed in her realm upon her writings and promifes of friendship. And sicklike, I said to her highness, gif my maistress had the like promise of her nobility and estates, as she had of herself, I should have reprovit them highly, gif they had not condescendit to one of thir three, and so I say, and fo I write, that in the warld it shall be maist reprehendable, gif this promise taketh not other good effect, nor yet it does. Notwithstanding, I get gud answer of thir promises of friendship made to my sovereign, and to put her grace in this her awin countrie peaceably, we have fund the contrary working by Mr. Middlemore directit from her highness to stay the army that cuift down our houses. And alfua, in the proceeding of this late pretendit parliament, promised twenty days before the time to myself to have caused it And yet contrary to this promise, have been dischargit. they made their pretendit manner of forfaulture of 31 men of guid reputation, bishops, abbottis, and barronis, obedient subjects to our sovereign, only for her cause.

They have also disponit, sen our sovereign's cause was taken upon hand be the Queen's majesty of that realm, an hundred thousand pound Scots worth of her awin true subjects geir, under the color of the law, groundit upon their false, treasonable, stowin, authority.

The murders, the oppressions, the burnings, the ravishing of women, the destruction of policy, both ecclesiastical and temporal, in this mean time, as in my former writings I said it was lamentable to ony christian man to hear of, except God gif grace, the profession of the evangile of Jesus Christ professit be your prince, counsall and realme, be mair myndit, nor the auld inamity that has stand betwirt the realms, many of my countrymen will doubt in this article, and their proceedings puttis my self in Sanct Thomas belief.

Now, my lords, gif the Queen's majesty of that realm, upon quhais promise and honour my maistress came there, as I have said, will leave all the French writings, and

French phrases of writings, quhilks amongis them is over meikle on baith the fides unfit, and plainly, according to the auld true custom of Ingland and Scotland, quherein be a word promist truth was observ'd, promise in the name of the eternal God, and upon the high honour of that nobill and princely blude of the kings of Ingland, quhereof she is descendit, and presently wears the diadem. that she will put my maistress in her awin country, and cause her as Queen thereof in her authority and strength to be obeyit, and to do the same will appoint an certain day within two months at the farthest, as we understand this to be our weil, fua will we, or the maift part of us all, follow upon it, leaving the Frenchmen, and their evil French phrases togidder. And therefore, and for the true perpetual friendship of that tealm, will condition, and for our part, with the grace of Almighty God, keep fic heads and conditions of agreement, as noble and wife men can condefcend upon, for the weill of this hail island. As I have been partlings declaring to the Queen your fovereign, quhilk I shew to your lordships selfis both in religion, in the punishment of the earl Bothwile, for the Queen's last husband's flaughter, and for a mutual band of amity perpetually to remain amongis us.

Doubtless, my lords, without that, we may find sic time and friendly working, as may gif us occasion baith to forgette Middlemore and his late pretendit parliament, we will turn the leaf, leaving our sovereign agains out will to rest where she is, under the promise of friendship. As I have baith said, and will ever affirm, made be your sovereign, quhilk was only cause of her graces coming in that realme, and seek the help and moyen of French, or Spanish, till expulse this treasonable and salse pretendit authority, quhilk means to reign above us.

My lords, I desire your lordships consider, that it is he, that maist desires the amity betwixt Ingland and Scotland to continue, and of a poor man best cause has, that writ this.

My brother the laird of Skirling, schaws me, that in your lordships communing with him, it appearit to him, your 1 altho' the Q My lo the WI reason her fu hundre happy comes . oblivio for the fua me that ye as your be true French that wil plainly for in t guhilk i have yo

Man d'une mo cufe de qui me f que je n a n'offer leur peu day of 23 156

er

to

in

he

of

d,

n,

nd

to

ay

ajs

1,

ch

al

t,

n-

le.

ve

n.,

oft.

ľ-

fic

th

p. ur

it

e,

to

is.

1,

your mind was we shold suffer the earl of Murray to work, altho' it were agains reason to us, and complain thereof to the Queen's majesty, and her highness wald see it reformit. My lords, her majesty will be over meikle troublit to reform the wranges we have fustainit already. For I am fure, gif reason and justice may have place, our maistress, and we her subjects, have received express wrang, far above two hundred thousand pounds sterling, in the time of this unhappy government, feeing the reformation of fa great causes, comes, now a days, fo flowlie and the ungodly law of oblivion in fic matters so meikle practis'd, I think, nowther for the Queen's honour, nor our weill, your lordships would fua mean, nor that it is good to us to follow it. And that ye will give your fovereign sic advertisement thereof, as your good wisdoms shall find in this cause meet. It will be true and frindfull working for us, indeed, and nowther French phrases, nor boasting, and finding little other effect, that will cause us to hold away the Frenchmen. This is plainly written, and I defire your lordship's plain answer, for in truth and plainness langest continues gud friendship, quhilk in this matter I pray God may lang continue, and have your lordships in his keeping. Off Dumfreis, the 3d day of September 1568.

Your lordships at my power to command leifully

HERRIS.

Queen Mary to Q. Elizabeth 33.

MADAME ma bonne sœur. J'ay resœu de vos lettres, d'une mesme date; l'une, ou vous faites mention de l'excuse de Mons. de Murra pour tenir son pretendu parlement, qui me semble bien froid, pour obtenir plus de tollerance que je m'estois persuadée n'avoir par vostre promesse, quant a n'osser donner commission de venir sans un parlement pour leur peu de nombre de noblesse alors, je vous respons, qu'ils.

^{23 1568.} Cott. lib. Cal. I. An Original.

n'ont que trois ou quatre d'avantage, qui eussent aussi bien dit leur opinion hors de parlement, qui n'a esté tenu tant pour cette effect, mais pour faire ce qu'expressement nous avions requis estre empeschés, qui est la forfalture de mes subjects pour m'avoir estés fidelles, ce que je m'affurois, jusques a heir, avoir eu en promesse de vous, par la lettre ecrite a mi lord Scrup e Maistre Knoleis vous induire a ire contre eulx, voire, a les ensayre resentir; toutesois je vois que je l'ay mal pris, j'en suis plus marie, pour ce que sur votre lettre qu'ils me montrerent, et leur parole, je l'ay fi divulguement affuray que pour vengeance que j'en desiralfe, si non mettre difference entre leur faux deportemens, & les miens finceres. Dans vostre lettre aussi datee du 10me d'Aoust, vous metties ces mots. "I think your adverse party, uppon my fundry former advices, will hold no parliament at all: and if they do it shall be only in parliament at all; and if they do, it shall be only in " form of an affembly, to accord whom to fend into this " realm, and in what fort; for otherwise, if they shall " proceed in manner of a parliament, with any act of " judgment against any person, I shall not, in any wife, " allow thereof; and if they shall be so overseen, then " you may think the fame to be of no other moment, than " the former procedures; and by fuch their rash manner of " proceeding , they shall most prejudice themselves; and be affured to find me ready to condemn them, in their doings. " Sur quoy, j'ay contremandé mes serviteurs, les faissant retirer, souffrant selon vostre commandement d'être faussement nommes traitres, par ceulx, qui le sont de vray; & encore d'etre provoqués par escarmons dies, & par prinses de mes gens & lettres, & au contraire vous etts informée que mes subjects ont evahis les vostres, Madame, qui a fait ce rapport n'est pas homme de bien, car lain de Sesford & son fils sont & ont estes mes rebelles depuis le commencement; enquirés vous, s'ils n'estoient a Donfris aveques eulx, j'avois offri respondre de sa frontiere, ce qui me fut refusé, ce qui me devroit asses descharger, nearmoins, pour vous faire preuve de ma fidelité, et de les falsité, s'il vous me fayte donner le nom des coulpables,

& me fuivre . leur ay refte m leur fe rebelles aux Fra j'espero fceu fi Dieu q ce que du mor fi font, vous fu prest de vous aff rescue fervit la prenies comme rende co quelle n font def impossibl vous a f par quoi ma fince descrire. fœur, ga pour fau grace; j libremen je priera

vie. De qu'aveque

tent. Ce

ien

ant

ous

nes

is,

tre

ire

ois

fur

y fi

ffe,

les

me

erfe

110

in

this

of ife,

hen

han

of

and heir irs,

ent

Cont

, &

etes

me,

aird

puis ofris

qui

lest les, & me fortifier, je commanderay mes subjects les poursuivre, ou si vous voules que ce soit les vostres, les miens leur ayderont; je vous prie m'en mander vostre volonté, au reste mes subjects sidelles seront responsables a tout ce que leur fera mis su les contre vous, ni les vostres, ni les rebelles, despuis que me conseillates les faire retirer. Quant aux François, j'escrivis que l'on n'en fit nulle poursuite, car jesperois tant en vous, que je n'en aurois besoign, - je ne sceu si le dict aura en mes lettres, mais je vous jure devant Dieu que ne sçay chose du monde de leur venue, que ce que m'en aves manday, ni n'en ai oui de France mot du monde, & ne le puis croire pour cest occasion, et si ils fi font, c'est sans mon sceu ni consentement, Pourquoy je vous supplie me me condamner sans m'ouire, car je suis prest de tenir tout ce que j'ay offert a Mester Knoleis, & vous assure que votre amitié, qu'il vous plest m'offrir, sera rescue avant toutes les choses du monde, quant France fervit la pour presser leur retour a ceste condition, que prenies mes affaires en mein, en sœur, & bonne amie, comme ma Francé est en vous; mais une chose seule me rende confuse, j'ay tant d'enemis qu'ont votre oreille, la quelle ne pouvant avoir par parolle, toutes mes actions vous sont desguisées, & falsement raportées, par quoi il m'est impossible de m'assurer de vous, pour les manteries qu'on vous a fait, pour destruire vostre bonne volonté de moy; par quoi je desirerois bien avoir ce bien vous faire entendre ma sincere & bonne affection, laquelle je ne puis si bien descrire, que mes enemis a tort ne la decoloré. Ma bonne sœur, gagnes moy, envoyés moy querir, n'entrés en jalousie pour faulx raports de celle que ne desire que votre bonne grace; je me remettray sur Mester Knoleis a qui je me suis librement descouverte, & apres vous avoir baisée les mains, je prierai Dieu vous donner en fanté, longue & heureule vie. De Boton, ou je vous promets, je n'espere pertir, qu'aveques vostre bonne grace, quoyque les menteurs mentent. Ce 26 d'Aoust.

N. XV. (Vol. II. p. 137.)

Queen Elizabeth to the Earl Murray ".

IGHT trufty and right well beloved cousin, we greet you well. Where we hear fay, that certain reports are made in fundry parts of Scotland, that whatfoever should fall out now upon the hearing of the Queen of Scotts cause, in any proof to convince or to acquit the faid Queen concerning the horrible murder of her late husband our cousin. we have determined to restore her to her kingdom and government, we do fo much mislike hereof, as we cannot indure the fame to receive any credit: and therefore we have thought good to affure you, that the same is untruly devised by the authors to our dishonour. For as we have been always certified from our faid fifter, both by her letters and messages, that she is by no means guilty or participant of that murder, which we wish to be true, so surely if The should be found justly to be guilty thereof as hath been reported of her, whereof we would be very forry, then, indeed, it should behave us to consider otherwise of her cause than to satisfy her desire in restitution of her to the government of that Kingdom. And fo we would have you and all others think, that should be disposed to conceive honourably of us and our actions.

Indorsed 20 Sept. 1568.

N°. XVI. (Vol. II. p. 144.)

Sir Francis Knollys to Cecil, the 9th of October 1568, from York 25.

Bolton, to attend upon him here Thursday last, I made my 24 Paper Office. From a copy corrected by fecretary Cecil.

25 An Original. Paper - Office.

repair hi
next; a:
grace ar
imparted
what ha weighty opinion for his I
the extre
alfo faith
ended in of the r

A letter

writings,

PLEIS ane grea reasoned terminate not to er in fuspen the E. pi rents mig the effect jects of t attempt a is all her can againt but tranff till fhe th to be haft fear fhe fore their

repair hither accordingly, meaning to stay here until Monday next; as touching the matters of the commission, that his grace and the rest have from her highness, his grace hath imparted unto me of all things thereunto appertaining, and what hath hitherto passed, and altho' the matters be too weighty for my weak capacity, to presume to utter any opinion of mine own thereof, yet I see that my lord Herris, for his parte laboureth a reconciliation, to be had without the extremity of odious accusations; my lord of Ledington also saith to me, that he could wish these matters to be ended in dulce maner, so that it might be done with safety; of the rest you can conceive, by the advertisements and writings, sent up by our commissioners.

et

re

H

e,

n-

n,

nd

ot

ly ve

at

if

19

d

A letter from the bishop of Ross to the Queen of Scotts, from York, October 1568 26.

PLEIS your majesty I conferred at length with A. ane great part of a night, who affurit me that he had reasoned with B. this Saturday C. on the field, who determinate to him that it was the D. determinit purpose not to end your cause at this time, but to hold the same in suspence, and did that was in her power, to make the E. pursue extremity, to the effect F. and his adhetents might utter all they could to your dishonour, to the effect to cause you come in disdain with the hail subjects of this realm, that ye may be the mair unable to attempt any thing to her disadvantage. And to this effect is all her intention, and when they have produced all they can against you, D. will not appoint the matter instantly, but transport you up in the country, and retain you there till she think time to shew you favour, which is not likely to be hastily, because of your uncles in France, and the fear she has of yourself to be her unfriend. And therefore their counsel is, that ye write an writing to the D.

²⁶ Cott. lib. Calig. C. 1. a copy.

meaning that ye are informit that your subjects which has offendit you. - This in effect that your majesty hearing the estate of your affairs as they proceed in York, was informed that her majesty was informed of you, that you could not gudely remit your subjects in such fort as they might credit you hereafter, which was a great cause of the flay of this controverly to be ended. And therefore perfuading her D. effectually not to trust any who had made fuch narration. But like as ye had rendered you in her hands, as most tender to you of any living, so prayit her take na opinion of you, but that ye wald use her counfell in all your affairs, and wald prefer her friendship to all others, as well uncles as others, and affure her to keep that thing ye wald promise to your subjects by her advice. And if D. discredit you, ye wald be glad to satisfy her in that point be removing within her realm in fecret and quiet manner, where her G. pleased, until the time her G. were fully fatisfied, and all occasion of discredit removed from her. So that in the mean time your realm were holden in quietness, and your true subjects restored and maintained in their own estate, and sic other things And affirms that they believe tending to this effect. that this may be occasion to cause her credit you that ye offer fo far; and it may come that within two or three months she may become better - minded to your grace, for now she is not well minded, and will not shew you any pleasure for the causes foresaid.

N. B. The title of this paper is in Cecil's hand; the following key is added in another hand.

A. The laird of Lethington. B. The Duke of Norfolk.

C. Was the day he rode to Cawood.

D. The Queen of England.

E. The Queen of Scots commissioners.

F. The earl of Murray.

Deliber

HE the Quee and the The fe - That perswasio because 1 and that to fuch lo as for that a cor first name Queen of half by 1 of Lenox out of t choice fo law of Sc the gover ray as it is perpetuals the premi

That a command young kin young kir of the ear

²⁷ Pape

N°. XVII. (Vol. II. p. 156.)

123 ng vas

ley

er-

ner

ner

111-

to

ep

ce.

her

ind

her

re-

lm

red

ngs

eve

ye rec

ce,

you

the

Deliberation of Secretary Cecil's concerning Scotland, Dec. 21. 1568 27.

THE best way for England, but not the easiest, that the Queen of Scots might remain deprived of her crown, and the state continue as it is.

The fecond way for England profitable, and not so hard.

That the Queen of Scots might be induced, by some persuasions, to agree that her son might continue king, because he is crowned, and herself to remain also Queen; and that the government of the realm might be committed to such persons as the Queen of England should name, so as for the nomination of them it might be ordered, that a convenient number of persons of Scotland should be suff named to the Queen of England, indifferently for the Queen of Scots, and for her son, that is to say the one half by the Queen of Scots, and the other by the earle of Lenox and lady Lenox, parents to the child; and out of those, the Queen's majesty of England to make thoice for all the officers of the realm, that are, by the law of Scotland, disposable by the king or Queen of the land.

That until this may be done by the Queen's majesty, the government remain in the hands of the earle of Muray as it is, providing he shall not dispose of any offices or perpetuals to continue any longer but to these offered of the premises.

That a parliament be summoned in Scotland by several commandments, both of the Queen of Scots and of the young king.

That hostages be delivered unto England on the young king's behalf, to the number of twelve persons of the earle of Murray's part as the Queen of Scots shall ²⁷ Paper - Office.

name; and likewise on the Queen's behalf to the like num. ber as the earle of Murray shall name; the same not to be any that have by inheritance or office cause to be in this parliament, to remain from the beginning of the fummons of that parliament, until three months after that parliament; which hoftages shall be pledges, that the friends of either part shall keep the peace in all cases, till by this parliament it be concluded, that the ordinance which the Queen of England shall devise for the government of the realm (being not to the hurt of the crown of Scotland, nor contrary to the laws of Scotland for any man's inheritance, as the same was before the parliament at Edin. the Decem. 1567) shall be established to be kept and obeyed, under pain of high treason for the breakers thereof.

- That by the same parliament also be established all executions and judgments given against any person for the death of the late king.

communication That by the same parliament, a remission be made univerfally from the Queen of Scots to any her contrarys, and also from every one subject to another, saving that restitution be made of lands and houses, and all other things heritable, that have been by either fide taken from them which were the owners thereof at the committing of the Queen of Scotts to Lochlevin.

That by the same parliament it be declared who shall be fucceffors to the crown next after the Q. of Scotts and her issue; or else, that such right of the D. of Chatelhrault had, at the marriage of the Q. of Scotts with the lord

Darnley, may be conferred and not prejudiced.

That the Queen of Scotts may have leave of the Queen's majesty of England, twelve months after the faid parliament, and that she shall not depart out of England, without special licence of the Queen's majesty, died . ansablement

That the young king shall be nourished and brought up in England, till he be years of age.

It is to be confidered, that in this cause the composition between the Queen and her subjects may be made with certain articles, outwardly to be feen to the world for her honous yet fo and th

The (

 $\mathrm{W}_{\mathtt{E}}$ any wri make gi the fame you in us. We like conf tomate i to yow Queen o certain w amongst i fest untru plainly a likewise w advertised though th the Queen expect the our cousin time the f lished in thought it to confour only to ha

our frontie

as Paper

m:

be his ons lia-

nds his

the

the nd,

hethe

ed,

all

the

ade

ys,

hat

her

om

of

hall

and ault

ord

en's

enti

Spe-

up

100i

with her honour, as though all the parts should come of her, and yet for the surety of contrarys, that certain betwixt her and the Queen's majesty are to be concluded.

N. XVIII. (Vol. II. p. 159.)

The Queen to Sir Francis Knolleys, 22 Jan, 1568-925,

WE greet you well, we mean not, at this point, by any writing, to renew that which it hath pleased God to make grievous to us and forryfull to yow; but forbearing the same as unmeet at this point, having occasion to command you in our fervice, and yow also whilest you are to serve us. We require yow to consider of this that followeth with like confideration and diligence, as hitherto yow have accustomate in our fervise; at the time of our last letters written to yow the fourteenth of this month for removing of the Queen of Scots, we had understanding out of Scotland of certain writtings fent by her from thence into Scotland, amongst the which one is found to contain great and manifest untruths touching us and others also, as shall and may plainly appear unto yow by the copy of the fame, which likewise we send yow, and because at the same time we were advertised, that it should be shortly proclaimed in Scotland, though then it was not, we thought good first to remove the Queen, before we would disclose the same, and then expect the issue thereof; and now, this day, by letters from our cousin of Hunsdon we are ascertained, that since that time the same matters contained in the writings, are published in diverse parts of Scotland, whereupon we have thought it very meet, for the discharge of our honour, and to confound the falsehood contained in that writing, not only to have the same reproved by open proclamation upon our frontiers, the copy whereof we do herewith fend yow, as 1000 at you

²¹ Paper . Office.

but also in convenient fort to charge that Queen therewith, fo as she may be moved to declare the authors thereof. and perfuaders of her to write in fuch flanderous fort fuch untruths of us; and in the mean feason, we have here stayed her commissioners, knowing no other whom we may more probably presume to be parties hereunto, than they, until, the Queen shall name some other, and acquit them; who being generally charged, without expreffing to them any particularity, do use all manner of speeches to discharge themselves; wherefore our pleasure is, that ye shall, after ye have well perused the copy of this writing sent to yow, speedily declare unto her, that we have good understanding given us of diverse letters and writings, sent by her into Scotland, figned by her own hand, amongst which, one fuch writing is fent with her commandment expresly as now it is already published, as we are much troubled in mind that a princess as the is having a cause in our hands so implicated with difficultys and calamitys, should either conceave in her own mind, or allow of them that should devise such false, untrue, and improbable matters against us, and our honor, and specially to have the aventure to have the same being known to untrue to be published, and you shall also say, because we will not think so ill of her, as that it should proceed of her self, but rather she hath been counfelled thereunto, or by abuse made to think some part thereof to be true, we require her, even as the may look for ony favour at our hands, that she will disburden herfelf as much as truly she may herein, and name them which have been the authors and perswaders thereof, and fo fhe shall make as great amends to us as the cale may require; after you have thus far proceeded, and had fome answer of her, whether she shall deny the writing ablolutely, or name any that have been the advisers thereof you shall say unto her that we have stayed her commis fioners here, until we may have some answer thereof because we cannot but impute to them some part of this evil dealing, until by her answer the authors may be known; and as foon as you can have direct answers from he case stain having tention ment the writing imputed the concopy to the lord meet.

Sir Fra

over with -and fo letter sent letter, fei of time fh the fame unto Scotl to deliver that the made her alfo that to be mad intent and impugne h the utterly flanderous the faid all in Scotland devised in h

this for any

39 An Ori

from

h

re

y

1, m ge er

W,

ng

ne

ow ind im-

ave

uch

out

me

hall

t it

un-

part ook

her-

hem

and may

ome

blo-

reof.

mic

reof.

thi

y be

[were

om

from her, we pray you to return us the same; for as the case standeth, we cannot but be much disquieted with it, having our honour so deeply touched contrary to any intention in us, and for any thing we know in our judgment the earl of Murray and others named in the same writing void of thought for the matters, to them therein imputed; you may impart to the Queen of Scots either the contents of the slanderous letter, or shew her the copy to read it, and you may also impart this matter to the lord Scroop, to join with you there as you shall think meet.

Sir Francis Knolleys to Queen Elizabeth, from Wetherby, the 28th January 1568

WILL suppress my own grieffs, and pass them over with filence, for the present learning of your majesty and for this Queen's answer to the copie of her supposed letter sent unto Scotland, I must add this unto my brother's letter, sent unto Mr. Secretary yesternight late; in process of time she did not deny but that the first lines contained in the same copie, was agreeable to a letter that she had sent unto Scotland, which touched my lord of Murray's promise to deliver her fon into your majesty's hands, and to avoid that the same should not be done without her consent; made her; she saith, to write in that behalf; she saith also that she wrote that they should cause a proclamation to be made to stir her people to defend my lord of Murray's ment and purpose, for delivering of her said son, and impugne his rebellious government, as the termed it; but he utterly denyeth to have written any of the other flanderous part of the faid letter touching your majesty; the faid also, that she suspected that a Frenchman, now in Scotland, might be the author of forme Scotch letters devised in her name, but she would not allow me to write this for any part of her answer.

YOL, III.

N°. XIX. (Vol. II. p. 168.)

Sir Nicholas Throkmorton to the right honour, able the Lord of Liddington ...

OUR letter of the 3d of July, I have received the 15th of the same. For answer whereunto you shall under. stand, that friends here to my lord regent and you do wish such a concurrence in all doings, as in matter and circumstances there arise no dissension, or at the least, no more nor other than the difference of countries doth necessarily require. We here do think convenient that as few delays be used as may be, for the consummation of the matter in hand, which principally to advance, your allowance, profecution, and speedy promotion in Scotland, is most requisite, for you are so wise, and well acquainted with the state of the world, and with all our humours, as you know that some do allow and disallow for reason, some for respect of multitude, some for respect of persons, and fo the cause is to go forward as men do like to set it You are not to feek that some will use cautions, fome neutrality, fome delays, and fome will plainly impugne it. And yet all and every of these forts will alter their doings, when they shall see the regent and his favourers accord with the best and greatest part there, and agree with the wifest and strongest party here. Tho the matter has taken its beginning here, upon deep and weighty considerations, for the weil of both the princes and their realms, as well presently, as in time to come, yet it is thought most expedient, that the regent and realm of Scotland, by you, should propose the matter to the Queen our fovereign, if you like to use convenience, good order, or be disposed to leave but a scar, and no wound of the hurts I would be glad that this my letter should come to your hands before the convention, whereat it feems your 30 20th of July 1569. From the Original.

Queen's fhould b ance or me to V you ule fuch per end hath must need amongst y come to thence, propound meaning is able and should ha Queens ar throw us unhappy o jecture tha good occa fo flender! have not (out the a and the n from whon minister, r tegent, an Woddes de affections, to suppress material; l prefer her confervation proceed from

and inconfic fou are not fore, so he ially when

ır.

the

er-

do

ind

ft,

oth

23

the

al-

ıd,

ted

29

me

and

t it

ns,

im-

lter

fa-

and

the

hty

heir

t is

cot-

our

, or

urts

e to

Queen's restoration and marriage to the duke of Norfolk hould be propounded, either to wynne in them both allows. ance or rejection. To which proceedings, because you pray me to write frankly, I say and reason thus, methinketh you use a preposterous order, to demand the consent of fuch persons, in such matters, as their minds to a good end hath rather been felt or prepared, and therefore there must needs follow either a universal refusal or factious division amongst you, whereby a bloustering intelligence must needs come to Queen Elizabeth of the intended marriage from thence, which ought to have been fecretly and advifedly propounded unto her highness; hereby you see then the meaning is, by this dealing, her majefty shall be made inexorable and fo bring the matter to fuch passe, as this which should have wrought furety, quietness, and a stay to both Queens and their realms, shall augment your calamity, and throw us your best friends into divorse with you, and into unhappy division amongst ourselves; for you may not conjecture that the matter is now in deliberation, but expecteth good occasion for executing; fure I am you do not judge follenderly of the managing of this matter, as to think we have not cast the worst, or to enter therein so far without the affistance of the nobility, the ablest, the wifest, and the mightieft of this realm except Queen Elizabeth: from whom it hath been concealed untill you, as the fittest minister, might propound it to her on the behalf of the regent, and the nobility of Scotland. How far master Woddes defamations do carry them of Queen Elizabeth's iffections, and master secretary's, to assist the regent and to suppress the Queen of Scotts, I know not, nor is it not material; but I do assuredly think, that her majesty will refer her furety, the tranquillity of her reign, and the unservation of her people, before any device, which may roceed from vain discourse, or imperfections of passions, nd inconsiderate affections And as for Mr. Secretary fou are not to learn, that as he liketh not go too fast fore, so he coveteth not to tarry too far behind, and speilly when the reliques be of no great value or power.

from t

dicial

my for

was be were v

to decl

passed

And to

been de

fome c

marriag

ers, I f

others l

and fo

speech,

were of

fioners ,

cognition ration to

Lithingto

fate of o

duke, and have for

According

lodged, a

Berwick,

fpeeches |

in England

and friend

be none i

of the an

that discou

was enteredishonour

If I could as well affure you of his magnanimity, and constancy, as of his present conformity, I would say confidently, you may repose as well of him in this matter. as of the duke of Norfolk, the earls of Arundel, Pembroke, Leicester, Bedford, Shrewsbury, and the rest of the nobility; all which do embrace and proteste the accomplishment of this case. I have, according to your advice. written presently to my lord Regent, with the same zeal and care of his well doing that I owe to him, whom I love and honour. Mr. Secretary hath affured unto him the Queen of Scotland's favour of good opinion, wherewith he seemeth to be well fatisfy'd. If your credit be, as I trust, hasten your coming hither, for it is very necessary that you were here presently. Q. Elizabeth both doth write to my lord Regent in such fort, as he may perceive Mr. Wood's discourses of her majesty's affection to be vain, and Mr. Secretary otherwise bent than he conjectureth of him, the effect of which her majesty's letter you shall understand, by my lord Leicester's letter unto you a this dispatch. At the court, 20th July 1569.

N°. XX. (Vol. II. p. 170.)

Part of a letter from the earl of Murray to L. B probably Lord Eurleigh 31.

- BECAUSE I fee that great advantage is taken of fmall occasions, and that the mention of the marriag betwixt the Queen my sovereign's mother, and the D of Norfolk hath this while past been very frequent is both the realms, and then I myself to be spoken of a motioner, which I perceive is at the last come to be majesty's ears; I will, for satisfaction of her highness and the discharge of my duty towards her majesty, man fest unto you my interest, and medling in that matter ^{31 1569.} Harl. Lib. 37. B. 9. to 43.

and

011-

er,

em-

the

om.

ce,

zeal

ove

the

with

as I

Tary

doth

eive

be be

ijec-

you

ou at

. B

en of

rriag

e D nt i

of a

o he

ness

mani

atter

from the very beginning, knowing whatfoever is prejudicial to her highness, cannot but be hurtful to the king my fovereign, this his realm, and me. What conferences was betwixt the duke of Norfolk, and any of them that were with me within the realm of England, I am not able to declare; but I am no wife forgetful of any thing that passed betwixt him and me, either at that time, or since. And to the end her Majesty may understand how I have been dealt with, in this matter, I am compelled to touch some circumstances, before there was any mention of her marriage. In York, at the meeting of all the commissioners, I found very-and neutral dealing with the duke, and others her higness's commissioners in the beginning of the cause, as in the making of the others to proceed fincerely. and so furth. During which time, I entered into general fpeech, sticking at our just defence in the matters that were objected against us, by the said Queen's commisfioners, looking certainly for no other thing, but fummary cognition in the cause of controversy, with a final declaration to have followed. Upon a certain day the lord Lithington fecretary rode with the duke to Howard, what purpose they had I cannot say, but that night Lithington returning, and entering in conference with me upon the fate of our action, I was advised by him to pass to the duke, and require familiar conference, by the which I might have some feeling to what issue our matters would tend. According to which advice, having gotten time and place convenient in the gallery of the house where the duke was lodged, after renewing of our first acquaintance made at Berwick, the time before the affize of Leith, and some speeches passed betwixt us; he began to say to me, how he in England had favour and credit, and I in Scotland had will and friendship of many, it was to be thought there could be none more fit instruments, to travel for the continuance of the amity betwixt the realms, than we two. And to that discourse upon the present state of both, and how I was entered in that action tending fo far to the Queen's dishonour, I was willed by him to consider how matters stood in this, what honour I had received of the Queen. and what inconveniences her defamation in the matters laid to her charge might breed to her posterity. Her respect was not little to the crown of England, there was but one The Hamiltons my unfriends, had the next respect, and that I should esteem the issue of her body would be the more affectionate to me and mine, than any other that could attain to that crown. And so it should be meetest. that the affirmed her dimission made in Lochlevin, and we to abstract the letters of her hand write, that she should not be defamed in England. My reply to that was, how the matter had passed in parliament, and the letters seen of many, fo that the abstracting of the same could not then secure her to any purpose, and yet should we, in that doing, bring the ignominy upon us. Affirming it would not be fair for us that way to proceed, feeing the Queen's majesty of Eng. land was not made privy to the matter as she ought to be, in respect we were purposely come in England for that end, and for the - of the grants of our cause. The duke's answer was, he would take in hand to handle matters well enough at the court. After this, on the occafion of certain articles, that were required to be resolved on, before we entered on the declaration of the very ground of our action, we came up to the court; where fome new commissioners were adjoined to the former, and the hearing of the matter ordained to be in the parliament-house at Westminster, in presence of which commissioners of the said Queen, and ---- through the -rebuking of the Queen of England's own commissioners, we uttered the whole of the action, and produced fuch evidences, letters, and probations, as we had, which might move the Queen's majesty to think well of our cause. Whereupon expecting her highness declaration, and seeing no great likelihood of the same to be suddenly given, but daily motions then made to come to an accord with the faid Queen, our matters in hand in Scotland, in the mean feafon, standing in hazard and danger, we were put to the uttermost point of our wit, to imagine whereunto the matters would justific contin Queen other against flandin dispato began reporte and m him g jected his evil ing his shewed and no in my Berrick. pear to that my before r where th unto hi report 1 fpeak ir reign's might her, as preferme trary, f loved be having r was not 1

32 Prob

harm, me, (ho

n, nid

ect

ne

at,

he

hat

ft,

We

not

the

ny,

her

ing

r us

ng-

ight

for

The

nat-

cca-

lved

very

here

and rlia-

com-

ers,

fuch

night

aufe.

eeing

but

faid

n feae ut-

atters

would tend, tho' albeit we had left nothing undone for justification of our causes, yet appeared no end, but continual motions made to come to fome accord with the Oueen, and restore her to whole or half reign. I had no other answer to give them, but that I should neither do against conscience or honour in that matter. Notwithflanding feeing this my plain answer wrought no end, nor dispatch to us, and that I was informed that the duke began to mislike of me, and to speak of me, as that I had reported of the faid Queen irreverently, calling her ______ and murderer; I was advised to pass to him, and give him good words and to purge myself of the things objected to me, that I should not open the sudden entry of his evil grace, nor have him to our enemy ——— confidering his greatness. It being therewithal whispered, and shewed to me, that if I departed, he standing discontented and not fatisfied, I might peradventure find such trouble in my way, as my throat might be cut before I came to Berrick. And therefore fince it might well enough appear to her marriage, I should not put him in utter despair, that my good will could not be had therein. So few days before my departing I came to the park in Hampton court, where the duke and I met together, and there I declared unto him, that it was come to my ears, how fome mifreport should be made of me to him, as that I should speak irreverently and rashly of the said Queen my sovereign's mother, fuch words as before expressed, that he might —— " thereby my affections to be fo alienate from her, as that I could not love her, nor be content of her preferment, howbeit he might perswade himself of the contrary, for as she once was the person in the world that I loved best, having that honour to be so near unto her, and having received fuch advancement and honour by her, I was not so ungrate or so unnatural ever to wish her body ham, or to speak of her as was untruly reported of me, (howfoever the truth was in the felf) and as to the ³² Probably adulterer.

³³ Probably Suspea.

preservation of her son, now my sovereign, had moved me to enter into this cause, and that her own pressing was the occasion of that was uttered to her -- whensoever God should move her heart to repent of her bypast behaviour and life, and after her known repentance, that she should be separate from that ungodly and unlawful marriage that the was entered in, and then after were joined with fuch a godly and honourable a personage, as were affectioned to the true religion, and whom we might truft, I could find in my heart to love her, and to shew her as great pleasure, favour, and good will, as ever I did in my life; and in case, he should be that personage, there was none whom I could better like of, the Queen -- in -of England being made privy to the matter, and the allowing thereof, which being done, I should labour in all things that I could, to her honour and pleasure, that were not prejudicial to the king my fovereign's estate, and prayed him not to think otherwise of me, for my affection was rather buried and hidden within me, awaiting until God should direct her to know herself, that utterly alienated and abstracted from her; which he seemed to accept in very good part, faying, Earl of Murray thou thinks of me that thing, whereunto I will make none in England or Scotland privy, and thou hast Norfolk's life in thy hands. So departing, I came to my lodging, and by the way and all night, I was in continual thought and agitation of mind, how to behave myself in that weighty matter; first, imagining whereunto this should tend, if it were attempted without the Queen's majesty of England's knowledge and good will, this realm and I myself in particular having received fuch favour and comfort at her highness hands, and this whole ifle such peace and quietness, since God poffetfed her majesty with her crown. And on the other part, seeing the duke had disclosed him to me, protesting, none other were or should be privy to out fpeech, I tho't I could not find in my heart to utter any thing that might endanger him; moved to the uttermoft

her. The

with t

] pray

which

day o

lord

he be made

rence ,

the du courfe

perceiv

of Leic

duke's

cation

me to

refused

highner

obliged fame to her high

duke wa

prepared

tenew 1 Wood.

and form

should r

denly delaid before the nobi

Queen's

nothing had form

contrario

³⁴ Probably dishonour.

ed

as

er

12-

he ar-

led

ere

ft,

as

my

Was

OW-

ngs

not yed

was

God

ted

t in

me

cot-

nds.

way

tion ter:

vere

OW-

ular ess's

ince

on

me,

our

moft

with these cogitations, and all desire of sleep then removed. 1 prayed God to fend me fome good relief and outgate, to my discharge, and fatisfaction of my troubled mind, which I found indeed; for upon the morn, or within a day or two thereafter, I entered in conversation with my lord of Leicester, in his chamber at the court, where he began to find strange with me, that in the matter I made so difficult to him, standing so precisely on conferrence, and how when I had in my communication with the duke, come so far --- 35 and there he made some difcourse with me, about that which was talke betwixt us, I perceiving that the duke had --- the matter to my lord of Leicester, and thinking me thereby discharged at the duke's hands, therefore I repeated the same communication in every point to my lord of Leicester, who defired me to shew the same to the Queen's majesty, which I refused to do, willing him if he tho't it might import her highness any thing, that he as one -- by her majesty, and for many benefits received at her highness's hands is obliged to wish her well, should make declaration of the same to her majesty, as I understand by some speech of her highness to me, he did. This my declaration to the duke was the only cause, that Raid the violence and trouble prepared for me unexecuted, as I have divers ways The same declaration I was obliged to understood. tenew fince in writings of --- fent to my fervant John The sum whereof, I trust, he shewed the duke, and something also I wrote to himself, for it was tho't this should redeem some time, that the duke should not suddenly declare him our enemy, for his greatness was oft laid before me, and what friendship he had of the chief of the nobility in England, so that it might appear to the Queen's majesty of England - so cold towards us, and doing nothing publickly that might feem favourable for us, we had some cause to suspect that her highness should not be contrarious to the marriage when it should be proposed to her. The sharp message sent by her majesty with the lord ³⁵ Probably disclosed.

conf

may best

my

maje

Wil

Leic

the d

to fr

were only to fu

fible,

may i

my o'

truly

record

fensibl

this c

one p

other

and un

of a g

burrou

beareth

allowar

princip

of the

alfo lo

will aid

Boyd, who had the like commission from the duke tending fo far to the faid Queen's preferment, as it were proposing one manner of conditions from both, gave us to think that her highness had been foreseen in the duke's design, and that she might be induced to allow thereof. But howbeit it was devised in England, that the lord of Lethington should come as from me, and break the matter to her high. ness, as her majesty in a letter declared that she looked for his coming, yet that devise proceeded never of me, nor the noblemen at the convention could nowife accord to his fending, nor allow of the matter motioned, but altogether misliked it, as bringing with the same great inconveniencies to the furety and quietness of this whole isle; for our pro. ceedings have declared our milliking and difallowance of the purpose from the beginning, and if we had pleased he was ready for the journey. And in likewife it was devised to give confent, that the -- between the faid Queen and Bothwell, should be suffered to proceed in this realm, as it was defired by the faid lord Boyd, by reason we could not understand what was the Queen's majesty's pleasure, and allowance in that behalf --- And whereas ye mean, that her highness was not made privy of any such intention, the fault was not in me. The first motion being declared, as I have written, to my lord of Leicester, and by him imparted to her majesty, so far as I could perceived by fome speech of her highness's to me, before my departing. Thus I have plainly declared how I have been dealt withal for this marriage, and how just necessity move me not to require directly, that which the duke appeared fo --unto. And for my threatnings, to affent to the same, I have expressed the manner; the persons that laid the matter before me, were of my own company. But the duke fince hath spoken, that it was his writing which saved my life at that time. In conclusion I pray you persuade her majesty, that she let no speeches nor any other thing passed and objected to my prejudice, move her majesty to alter her favour - towards me, or any ways to doubt of my affured ³⁶ Probably divorce.

constancy towards her highness, for in any thing which may tend to her honour and surety, I will, while I live, bestow myself, and all that will do for me, notwithstanding my hazard or danger, as proof should declare, when her majesty finds time to employ me.

N'. XXI. (Vol. II. p. 182.)

William Maitland of Ledington, to my lord of Leicester, March 20th, 1570, from Ledington 37.

HE great defolation threatned to this whole realm, be the divisions thereof in dangerous factions, doth press me to frame my letters to your lordship, in other fort, then were behovefull for me, if I had no other respect, but only to maintain my private credit; therefore I am driven to furnish them with matter, which I know not to be plaufible, whereupon by misconstruing my meaning, some there may take occasion of offence, thinking that I rather utter my own passions, than go about to inform your lordship truly of the state; but I trust my plain dealing shall bear record to the fincerity of my meaning; to make the fame fensible, I will lay before your lordship's eyes, the plat of this country; which first is divided into two factions, the one pretending the maintenance of the king's reign, the other alledging the Queen to have been cruelly dealt withall, and unjustly deprived of her state; the former is composed of a good number of nobility, gentlemen, and principal burroughs of the realme, who shall have, as Mr. Randolph beareth us in hand, the Queen's majesty your sovereign's allowance and protection; the other hath in it some most principall of the nobility, and therewithall, good numbers of the inferior fort, throughout the whole realme, which also look affuredly that all kings do allow their quarrel and will aid them accordingly. What confequence this divition

ding

fing

that

and beit gton igh-

for his ther

pro-

e of

d he

vised

ueen

alm.

ould

ure,

ean,

tion,

red,

him

d by

ting.

ithal

ot to

e, I

atter

fince

fe at

efty,

and

r her

fured

³⁷ An Original.

will draw after it, I leave it to your lordships consideration; there is fallen out another division, accidentally, by my lord regent's death, which is like to change the flate of the other two factions, to encrease the one, and diminish the other, which is grounded upon the regiment of the realm. Some number of noblemen aspire to the government, pretending right thereto by reason of the Queen's demission of the croun, and her commission granted at that time for the regiment during the king's minority; another faction doth altogether repine against that division, thinking it neither fit nor tolerable, that three or four of the meanest fort amongst the earls, shall presume to challenge to themselves a rule over the whole realme, the next of the blood, the first in rank, the greatest alway both for the antientry of their houses, degree, and forces, being neglected; this order they think preposterous, that the meaner fort shall be placed in public function to command, and the greater shall continue as private men to obey; besides that, they think if the commission had in the beginning been valewable, (which the most part will not grant) yet can it not be extended to the present, for that the conditions thereunto annexed are ceased, and so the effect of the whole void; the latter part of this division hath many pretences, for besides the Queen's faction, which is wholly on that side, a great number of these that have heretofore professed the king's obedience, do favour the same, and will not yield to the government of the other, whose preferment for respects they mislike, when the Queen's faction shall be increased, with a part of the king's, and these not of least substance, and yow may judge what is like to ensue; an other incident is like to move men to enter in further discourses, it is given out here in Scotland that the Queen's majesty is fetting forth some forces towards the border, which shall enter this realm, to countenance these, that aspire to the regiment, and suppress the contrary faction, and bruits are spread, that the same shall be here out of hand; these that think themselves of equal force with their contrary faction at home, are rather an overmatch to them, vet no rather vice o mainte (altho driven were a us tog your f even a with a that pa the star defire, own fai and fuf land. how to that alfe deal pla or not; my judg I trust devotion about to loss of f highness be difal amity of land car for her t in fo do and the picion,

us, whi

jesty's he doth den

about to

vet not able to encounter with the forces of another prince. rather than yield to their inferiors, will, I fear, take advice of necessity, and evil councillors, and feek also the maintenance of some foreign prince, whereby her majesty (altho no further inconvenient were to be feared) must be driven to excessive charges, and it would appear there were a conspiracy of all the elements at one time to set us together by the ears, for now when the rumour of your forces coming towards the border is spread abroad, even at the same time is arrived at Dumbarton, a galzeon with a messenger sent expresly from the king of France, to that part of the nobility that favours the Queen, to learn the state of the country, and what support they lack or defire, either for furtherance of her affairs, or for their own fafety; affuredly this message will be well received, and suffered accordingly, this is the present state of Scotland. Now, if your lordship would also know my opinion, how to choice the best, as the case standeth; I will in that also satisfie your lordship, I am required from them to deal plainly, and your lordship shall judge whether I do so or not; for I think it plain dealing, when I simply utter my judgment, and go not about to difguife my intents. I trust the Queen's majesty hath a desire to retain at her devotion the realme of Scotland, which she hath gone about to purchase, with bestowing great charges, and the loss of some of her people; this desire is honourable for her highness, profitable for both the countrys, and of none to be difallowed; specially if it be (as I take it) to have the amity of the whole realme, for it is not a portion of Scotland can ferve her turn, nor will it prove commodious for her to fuit the friendship of a faction of Scotland, for in so doing, in gaining the best, she may lose the more, and the same would bring all her actions with us in sufpicion, if she should go about to nourish factions amongst us, which meaning I am fure never entered into her majelly's heart; then if it be the friendship of the whole she doth demand, let her not, for pleasure of one part, go about to overthrow the remnant, which will not be for

S

$

t

e

.

1

•

1

t

1 f

ľ

S

t

f

ľ

faifable, as fome may give her to understand; but rather. by way of treaty, let her go about to pacify the whole flate, bring the parties to an accord, reduce us all by good means to an uniformity, fo shall she give us all occasion to think well of her doings, that she tendeth our wealth, and provokes us univerfally to wish unto her majesty a most prosperous continuance; by the contrary, if, for the pleasure of a few, she will send forces to suppress these whom they mislike, and so consequently offend many; men be not so faint hearted, but they have courage to provide for their own fafety, and not only will embrace the means partly offered, but will also procure further, at the hand of other princes. This for mine own part, I do abhor, and protest I desire never to see forces of strangers to fet foot within this land, yet I know not what point necessity may drive men into; as if men in the middle of the fea were in a ship, which suddenly should be set on fire, the fear of burning would make them leap into the fea, and foon after the fear of the water would drive them to cleive again to the fired ship, so for avoiding present evil, men will many times be inforced to have recourse to another, no less dangerous. Trust me forces will not bring forth any good fruit to her majesty's behove, it must be fome way of treaty shall serve the turn, wherein by my former letters your lordship doth know already what is my judgment; you fee how plainly I do write, without confideration in what part my letters may be taken, yet my hope is that fuch as will favourably interpret them, shall think that I mean as well to her majesty, and that realme, as these that will utter other language. I wish the continuance of the amity betwixt the two countrys, without other respect, and will not conceal from her majesty any thing, to my knowledge, tending to the prejudice thereof; if I shall perceave her majesty taking frank dealings in evil part, I shall from thenceforth forbear; in the mean season I will not cease to trowble your lordship, as I shall have occasion to write, and so I take my leave of your lordship.

Letter

KIGH well, t laft mor and mer fired to is a ver the difta have, as answer 1 hereof f Lenox a Where i ledged, establishi king, gr they hav mine of our, unt require t governme very than us, in yie in a mati felves, ar our form taken for regard to of their v

whole wo

of govern

¹⁸ Cald

N°. XXII. (Vol. II. p. 189.)

Letter of Queen Elizabeth to the earle of Suffeks, July 2d, 1570 3.

KIGHT trufty and well beloved coufin, we greet you well, this day we have received your letters of 28 the last month, with all other letters, sent from Scotland, and mentioned in your letters, whereunto answer is defired to be given before the tenth of this month; which is a very short time, the weightiness of the matters, and the distance of the places considered; nevertheless we have, as the shortness could suffer it, resolved to give this answer following, which we will that yow, by warrand hereof shall cause to be given in our name to the earl of Lenox and the rest of the noblemen conveened with him. Where it is by them, in their letters, and writings alledged, that for lack of our refolute answer, concerning the establishing of the regiment of the realm, under their young king, great inconveniencies have happened, and therefore they have deferred now at their last convention to determine of the famine, who shall have the place of governour, until the 21st this month, before which time they require to have our advise, in what person or persons the government of that realme shall be established, we accept very thankfully the good will and reputation they have of us, in yielding fo frankly to require and follow our advise in a matter, that toucheth the state of their king, their selves, and realm so near, wherein as we perceive, that by our former forbearing to intermeddle therein, they have taken some discomfort, as though that we would not have tegard to their state and surety, so on the other part, they of their wisdoms ought to think, that it might be by the whole world evil interpreted in us to appoint them a form of government, or a governour by name, for that howfo-

¹¹ Calderw. MS. Hiftory, vol. 2. p. 189.

ever we should mean well if we should do so, yet it could not be without some jealousy in the heads of the estate, no. bility, and community of that realm, that the government thereof should be by me specially named, and ordained; so as finding difficulty on both parts, and yet misliking most that they should take any discomfort by our forbearing to show our mind therein, we have thought in this fort for to proceed, confidering with ourselves how now that realm had been a good space of time ruled in the name of their king, and by reason of his base age, governed heretosore by a very careful and honourable person, the earle of Murray, untill that by a mischievous person, (an evil example) he was murdered, whereby great disorder and confusion of necessity had, and will more follow, if determination be not made of some other special person, or perfons, to take the charge of governor, or superior ruler, speciall for administration of law and justice, we cannot but very well allow the defire of these lords to have some special governor to be chosen; and therefore being well affured, that their own understanding of all others is best to consider the state of that realm, and to discern the abilities and qualities of every person meet and capable for fuch a charge, we shall better fatisfie ourselves, whom they by their common consent shall first choose, and appoint to that purpose, then of any to be by us aforehand uncertainly named, and that because they shall perceave that we have care of the person of their king, who by nearness of blood, and in respect of his so young years, ought to be very tender and dear to us, we shall not hide our opinion from them, but if they shall all accord to name his grandfather, our cousin, the earl of Lenox to be governor alone, or jointly with others, (whom we hear to be in the mean time by their common confent appointed lieutenant-general) reason moveth us to think that none can be chosen in that whole realme, that shall more defire the preservation of the king, and be more meet to have the government for his fafety, being next to him in blood of any nobleman of that realm, or elsewhere; and yet hereby, we do not mean to prescrive to them and free well affu shall be our mine that real us given although could no shall fay for the fame wil the order prejudgin affuredly necessary tealme ru that realm folemnicie the whol complaint to do any but as we yea not may imper late action and clear declare of know to to hold, how plain how little the contra part, we nourable, when the

to hear he

the fame,

VOL.

to them this choice, except they shall of themselves fully and freely allow thereof; furthermore we would have them well affured, that what soever reports of devises, are, or shall be spread or invented, that we have already yielded our mind to alter the state of the king or government of that realme, the same are without just cause or ground by us given, for as we have already advertized them, that although we have yielded to hear, which in honour we could not refuse, what the Queen of Scotts on her part shall say and offer, not only for her own assurance, but for the wealth of that realm, yet not knowing what the fame will be, that shall be offered, we mean not to break the order of law and justice, by advancing her cause, or prejudging her contrary, before we shall deliberately and affiredly see, upon the hearing of the whole, some place necessary, and just cause to do; and therefore finding that realme ruled by a king, and the same affirmed by laws of that realme, and thereof invested by coronation and other follownities used and requisite and generally so received by the whole estates, we mean not by yielding to hear the complaints or informations of the Queen against her son, to do any act whereby to make conclusion of governments, but as we have found it, fo to fuffer the same to continue, yea not to fulfer it to be altered by any means that we my impeshe, as to our honour it doth belong, as by your late actions hath manifestly appeared, untill by some justice, and clear cause, we shall be directly induced otherwise to declare our opinion; and this we would have them to know to be our determination and course that we mean to hold, whereon we trust they for their king may fee how plainly and honourably we mean to proceed, and how little cause they have to doubt of us, whatsoever to the contrary they have or shall hear; and on the other part, we pray them of their wisdoms to think how unhenourable, and contrary to all human order it were for us, when the Queen of Scotland doth fo many ways require to hear her cause, and doth offer to be ordered by us in the same, as well for matters betwixt ourselves and her, o

d

t

0

0

m

ir

te

r-

n-

n-

n-

14

r, ot

ne

ell

est

he

for

ey

nly

ave

od,

ery

om

er,

me

fon

ole

ıg,

ty,

lm,

rive

0 appears

are, to advance

fafety (

ennimit

great he

demonst

your fto

gence f

parts wh neither o

to this prepared.

Flanders.

for the d

king of

he shall

to procur there, o

which will Queen ha

effect, ad

of money of to you be had a ger fuch fums

to cause y

dispoilit up to being, f

to receive i

fent. Orde

We have p

Queen of E

for lack of very good,

In that case take experie as betwixt herself and her son and his party of that realme, against which offers no reason could move us to refuse to give ear, that we should aforehand openly and directly, before the causes be heard and considered, as it were, give a judgment or sentence either for ourselves or for them whom the maketh to be her contraries. Finally ye shall admonish them, that they do not, by misconceiving our good meaning towards them, or by indirect affertions of their adverlary grounded on untruths, hinder or weaken their own cause, in such fort, that our good meaning towards them shall not take such effect towards them, as they shall defire, or themselves have need of. All this our answer ye shall cause be given them, and let them know, that for the shortness of time, this being the end of the fecond of this month, we neither could make any longer declaration of our mind, nor yet write any several letters, as if time might have served we would have done. 2 July , 1570.

N°. XXIII. (Vol. II. p. 189.)

The bishop of Ross, to secretary Lidington from Chattisworth ".

HAVE received your letters dated the 26th of May, here at Chattisworth, the 10 of January, but on the receipt thereof I had written to you at length, like as the Queen did with my lord Levingston, by the which you will be resolved of many points contained in your said letter. I writ to you that I received your letter and credit from Thomas Cowy at London, and sent to Leiceste to know the Queen of England's mind whether you should come here or not. He sent me word, that she will no ways have you come as one of the commissioners, because she is yet offended with you; and therefore it 39 15th June 1570.

e,

to

у,

ve

em

all

out

of ien

ing

as

this

nem

end

any

eral

one.

rom

May,

the

ie as

1 you

faid cre-

cester

you

e Wil

ners

ore i

appears good that ye come not hither, but remain where you re, to use your wisdom and diligence, as may best advance the Queen's affairs, for I perceive your weill and fafety depends thereon, in respect of the great seid and ennimity born against you by your Scots people, and the great heirship taken of your father's landis; both were sure demonstrations of their malice. Yet I am encouraged by your flout and deliberate mind. Affure yourfelf no diligence shall be omitted to procure supports forth off all parts where it may be had. We will not refuse the aid neither of Papist, Jew, nor Gentil, after my advice; and m this end, during this treaty, let all things be well prepared. And feeing my lord Seaton is desirous to go into flanders, the Queen thinks it very necessary that he so do, for the duke D'Alva has gotten express command of the king of Spain to give support, and I am sure that there he shall have aid both of Flanders and the pope, for it tides only on the coming of some men of countenance, to procure and receive the fame. He must needs tarry there, on the preparations thereof, during the treaty, which will be a great furtherance to the same here. The Queen has already written to the duke D'Alva for this effect, advertizing of his coming; there is certain fums of money coming for support of the Englishmen, as I wrote to you before from the pope. Whereupon I would he had a general commission to deal for them, and receive such sums as shall be given. The means shall be found to cause you be ansuerit of the sums you writ for, to be. dispoisit upon the furnishing of the castle of Edenburgh, so being, some honest and true man were sent to Flanders to receive it, as said is, which I would you prepared and fint. Orders shall be taken for the metals as you writ of. We have preponit your avyce in entering to treat with the Queen of England, for retiring of her forces puntyoally for lack of aid. Your answers to the Englishmen are tho't very good, but above all keep you weil out of their hands, In that case, estote prudentes sicut serpentes. You may take experience with the hard dealing with me, how ye would be used if ye were here, and yet I am not forth of danger, being in medio nationis pravæ; always no fear, with God's grace, shall make me shrink from her majesty's Cervice. Since the Queen of England has refused that you come here, it appears to me quod nondum est sedata malitia amorreorum, &c. and therefore if Athol or Cathenes might by any means be procured to come, they were the most fit for the purpose, Rothes were also meet, if he and I were not both of one firname; fo the treaty would get the less credit either in Scotland or here. Therefore avys, and fend the best may ferve the turn, and fail not Robert Melvil come with them, whoever comes, for so is the Queen's pleasure; in my last packet, with James Fogo, to you, in the beginning of May, I fent a letter of the Queen's own hand-writing to him, which I trust ye received. I am forry ye come not for the great relief I hoped to have had by your presence, for you could well have handled the Queen of England, after her humour, as you were wont to do. The rest I refer to your good wisdom, praying God to fend you health. From Chattisworth the 15th of January.

N°. XXIV. (Vol. II. p. 211.)

The declaration of John Cais to the lords of Grange and Lethington zoungare upon the 8th day of Oct. 1571.

HEREAS you defire to know the Queen's majefty's pleasure, what she will do for appeasing of these controversies, and therewith has offered yourselves to be at her commandment, touching the common tranquillity of the whole isle, and the amity of both realms; her pleasure in this behalf, that ye should leave off the maintenance of this civil discord, and give your obedience to the king, whom she will maintain to the utmost of her power.

And king's condition

practifed her own against struction thority,

If ye the will nition, When without

Articles

FIRST concerning of before have cont

That for maintaining in this to prejudg'd ministers, the kirk, co and injure

To fute other bendered tenor of the good memory

40 Calde

of

ar,

y's

you

na-

nes

the

and

get

ys,

ert

the

go,

reped

nave

oni,

the 0

8th

efty's

ntro-

t het

the

are it

ce o

king

And in this doing, fhe will deal with the regent and the king's party, to receive you into favour, upon reasonable conditions for security of life and livings.

Also she says that the Queen of Scotts, for that she has practifed with the pope and other princes, and also with her own subjects in England, great and dangerous treasons against the state of her own country, and also to the defruction of her own person, that she shall never bear authority, nor have liberty while she lives.

If ye refuse these gentle offers, now offered unto you, the will presently aid the king's party, with men, ammunion, and all necessary things, to be had against you.

Whereupon her majesty requires your answer with speed, without any delay.

N°. XXV. (Vol. II. p. 223.)

Articles sent by Knox to the general Assembly August 5th, 1572 *.

FIRST, desiring a new act to be made ratifying all things concerning the king and his obedience that were enacted of before without any change, and that the ministers who have contravened the former acts be corrected as accordeth.

That fute be made to the Regent's grace and nobility maintaining the king's cause, that whatsoever proceedeth in this treaty of peace they be mindful the kirk be not prejudg'd thereby, in any fort, and they especially of the ministers, that have been robbed of their possessions within the kirk, during the time of the troubles, or otherwise dung and injured, may be restored.

To fute at the regent, that no gift of any bishoprick or other benefice be given to any person, contrary to the tenor of the acts made in the time of the first regent of sood memory, and they that are given contra the said acts, ⁵⁰ Calderw. MS. Hiftory , Vol. 2. 356.

or to any unqualified person, may be revoked and made null by an act of secret council, and that all bishopricks, fo vacand may be presented, and qualified persons nominated thereunto, within a year after the vaking thereof, according to the order taken in Leith by the commissioners of the nobility and of the kirk in the month of January last, and in special to complain upon the giving of bishoprick of Ross to the lord Methven.

That no pentions of benefices, great or fmall, be given by fimple donation of any lord regent, without confent of the possessor of the said benefices having tittle thereto, and the admission of the superintendent or commissioners of the province where this benefice lyeth; or of the bishops lawfully elected according to the faid order taken at Leith; and defire an act of council to be made thereupon, until the next parliament, wherein the famine may be specially inacted, with inhibition to the lords of fession to give any letters or decreets, upon fuch simple gifts of benefices or pentions not being given in manner above rehearfed, and that the kirk prefently affembled declare all fuch gifts null fo far as lyeth in their power.

That the first form of presentation to benefices, which were in the first and second regent's time, be not changed as now it is commonly; but that this clause be contained in the prefentation, that if the persons presented make not residance, or be sanderous or found unworthy either in life or doctrine by the judgment of the kirk (to which alwife he shall be subject) or meet to be transported to another room at the fight of the kirk, the faid prefentation and all that shall fall thereupon shall be null and of no force nor effect; and this to have place also in the nomination of the bishops.

That an act be made in this affembly, that all things done in prejudice of the kirk's affumption of the third, either by papists or others, by giving of fews, liferents, or taks, or any otherwise disponing the said assumed thirds, be declared null with a folemn protestation, the whole kirk disafenteth thereto.

Tha admitte accoun once in as the and ne

Aner termine long po remedy Laft who pr of justic

Declar

BE it Killegrey England. tion bein accord a within t the fame George e the lord Chastella hock, fe goods of partakers of the w of Murra regent to

lieges , /

nade

cks,

ninat

ord-

s of

aft,

k of

iven

t of

and

the lawich ; intil

ially any or and

null

hich

iged

ned

not

life

wife

and

orce tion

one by

or

th

That an act be made decerning and ordaining all bishops, admitted to the order of the kirk now received, to give account of their whole rents, and intromissions therewith once in the year, as the kirk shall appoint, for such causes as the kirk may easily consider the same to be most expedient and necessar.

Anent the jurisdiction of the kirk, that the same be determined in this assembly, because this article hath been long postponed to make sute to the regent and council for remedy against messengers and excommunicate persons.

Last that orders be taken anent the procures of the kirk, who procure against ministers and ministry, and for sutting of justice of the kirk's actions in the session.

N°. XXVI. (Vol. II. p. 230.)

Declaration of Henry Killigrew, Esq; upon the peace concluded the 23d Feb. 1572.

BE it known to all men, by these presents, that I Henry Killegrewe, Esq; ambassador for the Queen's majesty of England. Forafmuch as, at the earnest motion and folicitation being made to me, on her highness's behalf, there is accord and pacification of the public troubles and civil war within this realm of Scotland agreed and concluded, and the fame favourably extended towards the right honourable George earl of Huntly, lord Gordon and Baidzenuch, and the lord John Hamilton, fon to the duke's Grace of Chastellarault, and commendatour of the abby of Abirbrothock, for the furety of their lives, livings, honours, and goods of them, their kinsfolks, friends, fervants, and partakers, now properly depending on them; in treating of the which faid pacification, the murders of the late earl of Murray uncle, and the earl of Levenax grandfather, late regent to the king's majesty of Scotland his realm and lieges, as also an article touching the discharge for the

fructis or moveable goods, which the faid persons have taken fra personis professing the king's obedience, before the damages done or committed by them, fince the 15th day of Junij, 1567, and before the penult day of July last by passed, by reason of the common cause or any thing depending thereupon, being thought by the king's commitfaries matteris of fuch wecht and importance, as the king's present regent could not conveniently, of himself, remit or discharge the same. Yet in respect of the necessity of the present pacification, and for the weil of the king, and common quietness of this realm and lieges, it is accorded. that the matters of remission of the said murderers, and of the discharge of the said fructis, moveable goods, and other damages, be moved by the persons desiring the said remissions and discharge to the Queen's majesty my sove. reign, as to the princefs nearest both in blood and habit. ation to the king of Scots. And whatfoever her majefly shall advise and counsel touching the said remission and discharge, the said lord regent, for the weil of the king and universal quietness of the realm of Scotland, shall perform, observe, and fulfil the same. And in likewise, the faid earl Huntly, and commendatour of Abirbrothock, being urged to have delivered pledges and hostages for observation of the conditions of the said accord and pacification, hath required me in place thereof, in her majesty's name, by virtue of my commission, to promise for them that they shall truly and faithfully observe and keep the faid pacification, and all articles and conditions thereof, for their parts, and that it would please her majesty to interpose herself, as surety and cautioner for them to that effect, to the king's majesty of Scotland their sovereign and his faid regent, which I have done and pro-mife to do, by virtue of her majesty's commission, as by the honourable and plain dealing of the faid earl and lord, their intention to peace well appears, the same being most agreeable to the mind of the Queen's majesty my fovereign, which so long by her ministers hath travelled for the faid pacification, and in the end, at her motion and folicit defire the n dience honou and b faid e by he charge kinsfo depend abstine shall b interpo to cauf and art to this with mi And th and th tution,

The

liament

THI her downers, the kin possession whose a of Scott her near 41 15

ive

ore

th

aly

ng

nif-

g's

nit

of

nd

d.

nd

nd aid

ve-

fty

nd

ng

all

e,

k,

for nd ner

ife

nd ons

em

10-

10.

by

d, oft

-91

for

nd

folicitation, the fame is accorded, knowing her majesty's defire, that the fame may continue unviolate, and that the noblemen and others now returning to the king's obedience shall have sufficient surety for their lives, livings, honours and goods. Therefore in her majesty's name, and by virtue of my commission, I promise to the aforefaid earl Huntly and commendatour of Abirbrothock, that by her majesty's good means, the said remission and discharge shall be purchased and obtained to them, their kinsfolks, friends, fervants, and partakers, now properly depending upon them (the persons specified in the first abstinence always excepted), as also that the said pacification shall be truly observed to them, and that her majesty shall interpose herself as conservatrix thereof, and endeavour herself to cause the same to be truly and sincerely kept in all points and articles thereof accordingly. In witness whereof, I have to this present subscribed with my hand, and sealed the same with mine own feal, the 13th day of Feb. Anno Domini 1572. And this to be performed by me, betwixt the date hereof, and the parliament which shall be appointed for their restitution, or at the furthest before the end of the faid parliament. Sic subscribitur.

The bishop of Glasgow's note concerning the Queen of Scotland's dowry *1.

THE Queen of Scotland, dowager of France, had for her dowry, besides other possessions, the dukedom of Turene, which was solemnly contracted and given to her by the king and estates of parliament; which dukedom she possessed peacefully till 1567, and then, upon the pacification betwixt the king and Mons. his brother, to augment whose appenage this dutchy was given, to which the Queen of Scotland yielded upon account of princes, who were her near relations, provided the equivalent which was promifed her should be faithfully performed. So that year, after a great many folicitations, in lieu of that dutchy, she had granted her the county of Vermandaile with the lands and bailiwicks of Seuley and Vetry; tho' 'tis known that county, and the other lands were not of equal value with Turene, but was promifed to have an addition of lands in the neighbourhood to an equal value, Upon this letters - patent were granted, which were confirmed in the courts of parliament, chamber of accounts. court of aids, chamber of the treasury, and others necesfary; upon which she entered into possession of that county, &c. Afterwards, by a valuation of the commissioners of the chamber of accounts, it was found that the revenue of that county, &c. did not amount to those of Turene, by 3000 livres. But instead of making up this deficiency according to justice, fome of the privy council, viz. M. de Cheverney, the presidents of Bellievre, Nicocholay and St. Bonet, in the name of the king, notwithstanding of her aforesaid losses, did sell and alienate the lands of Senlis, and the dutchy of Estaimpes, to Madam de Monpensier, from whom the king received money; of which fale the counfellors aforesaid obliged themselves to be guarantees, which hath hindered the aforesaid Queen to have justice done her. So that Madam de Monpensier hath been put in possession of these lands of Senlis, contrary to all the declaration, protestation and affurances of the king of France to Queen Mary's ambassadors. So that the Queen of Scotland is dispossessed of her dowry; contrary to all equity, without any regard to her quality.

^{41 1576.} Cott. lib. Calig. B. 4.

N°. XXVII. (Vol. II.) p. 236.

A letter from the Lord of Lochlevin to the Regent Mortoun ".

T will please your grace, I received your grace's letter, and has considered the same. The parson of Cam32 3d March 1577. E. of Morton's Archives. Bund. B. No. 19.

fey fra n which fent come answe behui which that t to co had w I unde come make for the not to heart the ki instrun was na that th largely to the ambitio far mo unplagu grant t have th not yo good w yourfelf are not pally for me that grudge,

your gra

handling

at

e

0

of

n ė.

n-

s, y, of

le

e,

de

er

nd

m

310

th

So

of

ia.

y's

of

nt

et-

m-

fey was here at me before the receit thereof, directed fra my lord of Mar, and the master anent my last written, which was the answer of the writing that the master fent to me, which I fend to your grace, defiring me to come to Sterling to confer with them. I had given my answer before the receit of your grace's letter, that I behuissit to be belyd Sanct Androis, at ane friends tryst, which I might not omit: I understand by my faid cousin, that the king's majesty is to write to divers of the nobility to come there, anent your lordships trial, and that he had written before his departure to my lord Monthrois. lunderstand, likewise, he will write to your grace to come there for the same effect, which I tho't good to make your grace foreseen of the same, praying your grace, for the love of God Almighty, to look upon the best, and not to fleep in fecurity, but to turn you with unfeigned heart to God, and to confider with yourfelf, that when the king's majesty was very young, God made him the instrument to divest his mother from her authority, who was natural princess, for offending his Divine Majesty, and that there ran no vice in her, but that the fame is as largely in you, except to that your grace condescended not to the destruction of your wife. For as to harlotry and ambition, I think your grace has as far offended God, and far more in avaritiousness, which vycis God never left unplagued, except speedy repentance, which I pray God grant to your grace, for otherwise your grace can never have the love of God nor man. I pray your grace flatter not yourfelf; for if your grace believes that ye have the good will of them that are the king's good willers ye deceive yourself; for surely I see perfectly that your own particulars are not contented, lat be the rest, and that most principally for your hard dealing. I pray your grace, beir with me that I am thus hamlie, for certainly it proceeds from no grudge, but from the very affection of my heart towards your grace, which has continued fince we were acquainted. And now I see, because the matter stands in your grace's handling with the king's majesty, for certainly, if your grace fall forth with him now, I fee not how ye shall meet hereafter; pray I your grace to call to God, and look on the best, and cast from your grace both your vices, to wit, ambition and avaritiousness. I am riding this day to Sanct Androis, and trust to return on Wednesday at the farthest. If your grace will command me in any offices that are honest, that I may do your grace pleasure at Sterling, advertise of your grace's mind, and shall do to my power and knowledge, and this with my heartilie, &c.

To our trusty cousin the lord Lochleven".

RUSTY coufin, after our most hearty commendations we received your letter of the 3d of March, and as we take your plainness therein in good part, as proceeding from a friend and kinfman, in whose good affection towards us we never doubted, so ye may not think it strange that we purge ourself fo far of your accusation, as in conscience we find not ourfelf to have offended in. As touching our offence to God, we intend not to excuse it, but to submit us to his mercy, for ambition furely we think none can juftly accuse us; for in our private estate we could, and can live as well contented, as any of our degree in Scotland, without further aspiring. The bearing too the charge of the government of the realm, indeed, mon lead us, or any other that shall occupy that place, not simply to respect ourfelf, but his majesty's rowme, which we supply, and therein not transcending the bounds of measure, as, we trust, it shall not be found we have done, it ought not to be attributed to any ambition in us. For as foon as ever his majesty shall think himself ready and able for his own government, none shall more willingly agree and advance the same nor I, since I think never to fet my face against him, whose honour, fasety, and preservation has been so

dear u his ha the ea As we in the yourfe my lo noblen heartil and as adverti we have gus fr you in 4th of For not in all cra

Letter

born p

fuch ,

caufes

but wh

crave t

I HA your let containi

 Co

⁴³ From the Original. E. of Morton's Archives, Bund. B. No. 36.

dear unto me, nor I will never believe to find otherwise at his hand than favour, although all the unfriends I have in the earth were about him, to persuade him to the contrary. As we write unto you, our friendly dealing and confidence in the house of Mar is not thankfully acquit; as we trust yourself considers; but because the ambassadors of England. my lord of Angus, the chancellor, treasurer, and some noblemen rides west this day to fee the king, we pray you heartily address yourself to be there as soon as ye can, and as ye shall find the likelihood of all things, let us be advertized thereof, with your own advice, by Alex. Hay, whom we have thought good to fend west, seeing my lord of Angus from Stirling rides to Douglas. And fo we commit you in the protection of God. At Holyrood-house, the 4th of March, 1577.

For the avaritiousness laid to our charge, indeed it lies not in us so liberally to deal the king's geare, as to satisfy all cravers, nor never shall any sovereign and native born prince, let be any officer, eschew the distains of such, as thinks them judges to their own reward; in many causes I doubt not to find the affistance of my friends, but where my actions shall appear unhonest, I will not crave their assistance, but let me bear my own burthen.

N°. XXVIII. (Vol. II. p. 265.)

Letter of Walfingham's to Randolph, Feb. 3,

SIR,

all

nd

es,

lay

he

ces

at

to

C.

2mc

we

mo

US

We

nd

ice

to fly

ive th-

the iny ect

nd

we to

ver

ce

nft

fo

310

HAVE received from my lord lieutenant the copy of your letter of the 25th of the last directed unto his lordship, containing a report of your negotiation with the king and his council, in your second audience, wherewith having made her majesty acquainted, she seemed somewhat to mislike, that you should so long defer to deal for the enlargement of Empedocles. But I made answer in your behalf, that I thought you were directed by the advice of the said Empedocles friends, in the soliciting of that cause, who knew what time was sittest for you to take to deal therein, with most effect, and best success, with which answer, her majesty did in the end rest very well satisfied, touching that point.

^{*} Cott. Lib. Calig. C. 6.

Your putting of us in hope that d'Aubigny might easily be won at her majesty's devotion, was at first interpreted to have been ironie spoke by you. But since it seemeth you insist upon it, I could wish you were otherwise persuaded of the man, or at least kept that opinion to yourself, for considering the end and purpose of his coming into Scotland, as may be many ways' sufficiently proved, was only to advance the Queen's liberty, and reception into that government, to overthrow religion, and to procure a foreign match with Villenarius, wherein the inclosed copy, which you may use to good purpose there, shall partly give you some light; there is no man here can be persuaded that he will change his purpose, for so small advantage as he is likely to find by it, and therefore you shall do well to forbear to harp any more upon that string, as I have already written to you. The prince of Orange fending, I fear will not be in time that it may do any good; for besides that these people are in themselves flow in their resolutions, their own affairs are, at present, so great, their state so confused, and the prince's authority fo small, that he cannot fo soon take order in it; and yet for mine own part, I have not been negligent or careless in the matter, having, more than three weeks past, sent one about it, from whom nevertheless I do yet hear nothing. The letters, you defire should be written thither by the French ministers, I have given order to Mr. Killingrew to procure, who, I doubt not, will carefully perform it, so that, I hope, I shall have them to fend you by the the 3d

This le

Sundry and thou laid the

FIRS

that D', the Kin and of king, to that fub fovereign by any ment of and inhim: a the king verned,

45 Co

to rule by the next. And fo I commit you to God. At Whitehall, the 3d of February 1580.

Your very loving cousin and servant,

tö

be ur

of e, al

d,

th ed

d,

at

n

UC

ne

ill ly to

en

De

le

rs

he

er

nt

ks

et

en

to lly

UQ

FRA. WALSINGHAM.

This letter is an original, and in some parts of it wrote in ciphers and explained by another hand. By Empedocles is understood Morton. By Villenarius the king of Scots, D'Aubigney is marked thus O I

3 Feb. 1580.

Sundry notes gathered upon good diligence given, and in time to be better manifested, being now thought meet to be in convenient fort used, and laid against D'Aubigny, to prove him abusing the king, the nobility, and that state *.

FIRST, it hath been informed, by credible means, that D'Aubigny was privy and acquainted with la Navè the King's mother's fecretary, coming into Scotland, and of his errand there, tending chiefly to persuade the king, to think and esteem it an evil president for princes, that subjects might have power to deprive their lawful sovereigns, as they did his mother, who was not minded, by any mean, to defeat him, either of the present government of that realm, or yet of the possession of the crown and inheritance thereof, but rather to assure the same to him: and that for the accomplishment of that assurance, the king should have been advised and drawn to have governed, for some short time, as prince, calling D'Aubigny to rule as governor of the prince, by commission from the Queen his mother, until the king's enemies were fuppressed; after which time, d'Aubigny should have powet given to establish and relign that kingdom to the king, by his mother's voluntary confent, whereby all fuch, as had before been in action against the Queen or her authority, might be brought to stand in the king's mercy. And for that the king might live in more furety, D'Aubigny should be declared both fecond person in succession of that crown, and also lieutenant general of Scotland, and that D'Aubigny, before his departure out of France, received commission from the king's mother to the effects remembered, or near That in this behalf he had conference with the bishops of Glasgow, and Ross, and with fir James Basord, with which persons, and with the duke of Guise he had and hath frequent intelligence, and by Sir James Baford he was advised to confer with the lord John Hamilton before his repair into Scotland, whereunto he agreed, and yet afterwards he fent one John Hamilton to the faid lord John to excuse him in this part, alledging, that he did forbear to come to him, lest thereby he should marr or hinder greater effects to be executed by him in Scotland.

⁴⁵ Cott. Lib. Calig. C. 6. An Original.

That before his coming into that realm, the nobility and country were well quieted and united in good concord, with great love betwixt the king and nobility, and amongst the noblesse, but he hath both drawn the king against fundry of the chiefest of his nobility, that have been most ready, and have expended their blood and possessions to preserve religion, and defend the king's person, his government and estate, and also hath given occasions of great suspicions and offence to be engendered betwixt the king and his nobility, and especially with such as have been in action against the king's mother, and her authority, who by force and means of the faid commission and practice, should have been brought into most dangerous condition; and who also may find themselves in no small perill while he possesses the king's ear, abuseth his presence, and holdeth such of the principal keys and ports of his realm, as he presently enjoyeth.

That

That great b majesty signs of honour shake the princes.

princes.
And
letters a betwixt having better fa Hume of fecretary
bond of that notl king fhor
to cut of declaration thereupon

That uprotection make his escaped contract firms the king's nox, with faid fir Jan of Bothwe band of the and witner he is draw fuch as he of law, which, con

This is a foregoing le for James

Vol.

That he hath drawn the king not only to forget the great benefits done to him and his realme, by the Queen's majefty of England, but also to requite the same with sundry signs of great unthankfulness, and wounding therewith the honour of her majesty, and thereby hath adventured to shake the happy amity long time continued betwixt those princes.

Ď.

et

ad

1 10

ld n,

y,

on

ar

he

d, nad

he

ore

yet

hn

ear

der

lity

rd,

ngft

inft

noft

to

nent

ions

his

tion

orce

have

alfo

elles

ch of ently

hat

And whereas these griefs were to be repaired by gentle letters and good offers, to have passed, and been done betwixt them: In which respect, the king and council having resolved to write to her majesty, for her highness better satisfaction in the late negotiation of Mr. Alexander Hume of Northberwick, had given order to the king's secretary to frame that letter: He minding to break the bond of amity in sunder, willed the secretary to be sure that nothing should be inserted in that letter, whereby the king should crave any thing at her hands, seeking thereby to cut off all loving courtesies betwixt them, as by the declaration of the said secretary may be better learned, and thereupon further approved.

That under the hope and encouragement of D'Aubigny's protection, Alexander King prefumed with that boldness to make his lewd harangue, and by his means hath hitherto escaped chassifement and correction, due for his offence.

That fir James Baford, condemned of the flaughter of the king's father, hath been called into the realme by Lenox, without the privity of the king. And whereas the faid fir James found in a green velvet defk, late the earl of Bothwell's, and faw, and had in his hands the principal band of the conspirators in that murder, and can best declare and witness who were authors and executors of the same; he is drawn by Lenox to suppress the truth, and to accuse such as he himself knoweth to be innocent, and as by order of law, will be so found, if they may have due trial, which, contrary to all justice, is by Lenox means denied.

This is the charge against D'Aubigny, mentioned in the foregoing letter by Walsingham; but by Basord they mean for James Balsour.

Vol. III.

N°. XXIX. (Vol. II. p. 283.)

The copy of the king of France his directions sent to Scotland with Seigneur de la Motte Fenelon.

Translated out of the French ...

FIRST, on their most christian majesty's part, he shall make the most honourable salutation and visiting to the most serene king of Scotland, their good brother and little son, that in him is possible.

To give him their letters that are closed, such and such like as they have written to him with their hands, and to show exprestly the perfect friendship and singular affection, that their majestys bear to him, and to bring back the answer.

To take heed to the things which touch near the most ferene king, to the effect that his person may be in no danger, but that it may be most surely preserved.

And that he be not hindered in the honest liberty that he ought to have, and that no greater, or straiter guards be about him than he had before.

And fuch like, that he be not impeached in the authority, that God hath given to him of king and prince fovereign above his fubjects, to the effect he may as freely ordain and command in his affairs, and in the affairs of his country, with his ordinary council, as he was used to do of before.

That his nobility, barons, and commonality of his country may have their free liberty to refort to his ferene majelly without suspicion of greater guards or more armed men about his person than the use was, that they be not affraid and hindered to resort; and further that the seigneur de la Motte Fenelon sall liberally and freely speak to the said serent king and council, requiring the re-establishing of that that may or hath been changed or altered.

And that he may know if the principalls of the nobility, and other of the govern that if them to f the

And
used the fovereighthat he
the faid wholly duty ro
with the

And

ferene 1

authority used to the sove moyen 1
that he i majesty
contry,
his crown
and conf

And effates, of pall performing will ance and ferene king contry, famine, if the which most invited the state of the state

Further the ferenthe dake

^{*6} Calderw. MS, History, Vol. 3. p. 208.

other men of good behaviour of the towns and commonality of the contry conveens, and are content with the form of government prefently with the faid ferene king, to the end that if there be any miscontent he may travaile to agree them together, and that he return not without the certainty of the samine.

lent

on.

Thall!

the little

fuch

d to ion, wer.

most

iger,

that ards

rity,

reign

dain

ntry,

te.

intry

jefty

bout

and

le la

rene

, and

And if he may understand that there be any who have not used them so reverently towards the said serene king, their sovereign lord, as the duty of their obedience required, that he may pray on this behalf of his majesty most christian, the said serene king his good brother, giving him councill wholly to forget the same, and exhorting them to do their duty rowards his majesty, in time coming, in all respects with the obedience and true subjection they ought him.

And if the faid feigneur de la Motte perceives the faid ferene king to be in any manner constrained of his person, authority, suberty, and disposition of his affairs, than he used to be, and not convenient for his royal dignity, or as the sovereignty of a prince does require, that he use all moyen lawful and honest to place him in the samine, and that he imploy as much as the credit of his most christian majesty may do towards the nobility, and subjects of that contry, and as much as may his name, with the name of his crown towards the Scottish nation, the which he loves and consides in as much as they were proper Frenchmen.

And that he wittness to the said serene king, and his estates, of his consent, and to all the nobility and principall personages of the contry, that his most Christian majety will continue on his part in the most ancient alliance and confederacy, which he hath had with the said serene king his good brother, praying his nobility and contry, with his principall subjects, to persevere in the samine, in all good understanding and friendship with him; the which, on his part, he shall do, observing the samine most inviolable.

Further his most christian majesty understanding that the serene king his good brother was contented with the duke of Lenox, and his servise; the said seigneur De

the pl

the nu

rest of town;

fide, 1

many

had I

well a vesterd

the lik

ferve t

next hi

and rat

worfe t

pleafure

the cau

left not him wit

to my i

prefentl

herewith many m with hir

the utte

made fu

to his n

one, for alter his do, fo v

has been jesty, w

as they lor he kr

her maje

it feems

la Motte had charge to pray his ferene majesty that he might remaine beside him to his contentment, believing that he should more willing intertain the points of love and confederacie, betwixt their majestys and their contrys, because he was good subject to them both; and if he might not remain, without some alteration of the tranquility of his estate, that he might retire him to his own house in the said contry, in surenes, or if he pleased to return to France that he might surely —— and if it pleases his serene majesty, to cause cease and stay the impeachments, that are made of new upon the frontiers, to the effect that the natural Frenchmen may enter as freely into the contry, as they were wont to do of before.

And that there may be no purpose of diffamation, nor no speech but honourable of the most Christian king, in that contry, but such like as is spoken most honourably of the ferene king of Scotland in France.

He had another head to propone, which he concealed till a little before his departure, to wit, that the Queen, the king's mother, was content to receive her fon in affociation of the kingdom.

N°. XXX. (Vol. II. p. 300.)

Lord Hunsdon to Sir Francis Walsingham, the 14th of August 1584, from Berwick ".

SIR.

A CCORDING to my former letters, touching my meeting with the earl of Arran upon Wednesday last, there came hither to me from the earle, the justice clerk, and Sir William Stuart, captain of Dumbarton, both of the king's privile council, to treat with me about the order of our meeting, referring wholly to me to appoint the hour, and the number we should meet withal; so as we concluded ⁴⁷ Calderw. MS. Hiftory, vol. 3. p. 374.

he

ving

love

rys,

he

quil-

own

d to

eales

ach-

the

into

nor

in ably

aled

en,

affo-

the

eting

Sir

ing's

our and

uded

the place to be Foulden, the hour to be ten o'clock, and the number with ourselves to be 13 of a side; and the rest of our troops to stand each of them a mile from the town; the one on the one fide, the other on the other fide, fo as our troops were two miles afunder; I was not many horsemen, but I supplied it with footmen, where I had 100 shot on horse, but they were very near 500 horse well appointed: According to which appointment, we met vesterday, and after some congratulations, the erle fell in the like protestations of his good will and readiness to ferve the Queen's majesty, before any prince in the world, next his fovereign, as he had done heretofore by his letters, and rather more; with such earnest vows, as unless he be worse than a devil, her majesty may dispose of him at her pleasure; this being ended, I entered with him touching the cause I had to deal with him, and so near as I could, left nothing unrehearsed, that I had to charge the king or him with any unkind dealing toward her majesty, according to my instructions, which without any delay he answered presently, as ye shall perceive by the said answers, sent herewith; but I replying unto him, he amplified them with many moe circumstances, but to this effect. Then I dealt with him touching the point of her majesty's satisfaction, for the uttering fuch practices as has been lately fet on foot for the disquieting of her majesty and her estate, who thereof made fundry discourses, what marriages have been offered to his majesty by fundrie princes, and by what means the earle has fought to divert them, and for what causes; the one, for that be marriage with Spain or France, he must also alter his religion, which as he is fure the king will never do, so will he never suffer him to hearken unto it, so long as he has any credit with him; he denys not but the king has been dealt withal be practices to deal against her majelty, which he has so far denied and refused to enter into, as they have left dealing therein, but what soever the king or he knoweth therein there shall be nothing hidden from her majesty, as her majesty shall know very shortly; surely it feems by his speeches, that if the king would have yielded thereunto there had been no small company of French in Scotland ere now to difquiet her majefty. -- This being ended, I dealt with him earnestly for the stay of this parliament, which now approacheth; or at the least that there may be nothing done therein, to the prejudice of these noblemen and others now in England, for the forfaulting of their livings and goods; hereupon he made a long discourse to me, first of the earl of Angus dealing about the earl of Morton, then of his going out, notwithflanding of fundrie gracious offers the king had made him, then of the road of Ruthven, how that prefently after they had the king's majesty in their bands, they imprisoned himself, dealt with the king for putting of the duke out of the realme, the king refused so to do, they told him plainly that if he would not he should have the earl of Arran's head in a dish; the king asked what offence the earl had made? and they answered it must be so, and should be so; hereupon, for the safeguard of Arran's life, the king was content to fend away the duke, and yet Arran afterwards fundrie times in danger of his life; I alledg. ed unto him the king's letter to the Queen's majelty, and his acts in council, that they had done nothing but for his fervise, and with his good liking and contentment, who answered me he durst do no otherwise, nor could not do any thing but that which pleased them, with such a number of other their dealings with the king whilft he was in their hands as are too long to be written, and too bad if they were true; I faid the king might have let the Queen's majesty's ambassador have known his mind secretly, and her majesty would have relieved him; he answered, that the king was not ignorant that the apprehensions in that manner, proceeded from Mr. Bow's practice, and thereby durst not impart so much to him, and yet the king was content, and did give remission to as many as would acknowledge their faults, and ask remission, and such as would not, he thought fit to banish, to try their further loyalty, in which time they conspired the king's second apprehension, and the killing of the earle, and others, and i fatisfi (as h land jesty conce of th taking fome ing h which provo stable mond confes ing re bring would majest fuch p not pri against aggrav the ki fufficie it, for therefo king fo ter of chiefly them at he dare furely doubted

majesty

of Ang

and the

an hatre

in in

eing

parthat

of for-le a ling

ith-

im,

hey

ned

out

him

l of

the

and

ife,

Ar-

edg.

and

for

ent,

not

h a

was bad

en's

and

that

that

reby

was

ac-

h as thet

cond

ers,

and seduced the ministers to their faction, and yet not fatisfied with these conspiracies and treasonable dealings (as he terms them), are entered into a third, being in England under her majesty's protection, to dishonour her majesty as far as in them lyeth, or at least to cause the king conceave some unkindness in her majesty, for harbouring of them; I wrote to you what the conspiracy was, the taking of the king, the killing of the earle of Arran, and some others, the taking of the castle of Edin. and bringing home the earles, to take the charge of the king; all which (fays he) is by Drummond confessed, and by the provoft of Glencudden not greatly denied, and the constable of the castle thereupon sled; the earl brought Drummond with him as far as Langton, where he lay, to have confessed the conspiracy before me, but having at his lighting received a blow on his leg with a horse, so as he could bring him no further, I replied that I thought verily they would not work any fuch practices in respect of the Queen's majesty, abiding within her realme, and if there be any fuch practices, they have proceeded from others, and they not privie unto them: and that if it be not apparently proved against them, that it will be thought to be some practice to aggravate, the fault, and to make them the more odious to the king. He answered me, that it should be proved so fufficiently, that they should not be able with truth to deny it, for their own hands is to be showed to part of it, and therefore concluded, that if her majesty should so press the king for them at this time, that would rather hinder this matter of the amitty, not further it, and that fince they feek chiefly his life, he could not, in any reason, seek to do them any good; and besides he assured me, that if he would he dare not, this last matter being fallen out as it is; and lurely if this matter had not fallen out, I would not have doubted the restoring of the earl of Mar very shortly, if her majesty would have employed me therein, but for the earl of Angus, I perceive the king is perfuaded that both he, and the rest of the Douglasses, have conceived so mortal? an hatred against him and the earl of Arran, about the death of the earl of Morton, as if they were at home, to-morrow next, they would not leave to practice and conspire the death of them both, and therefore a hard matter to do any thing for him: finally, he concluded and required me to assure her majesty from the king, that there shall no. thing be hid from her, nor any thing left undone that may fatisfie her majesty with reason, and that the king shall ne. ver do any thing, nor confent to have any thing done in her prejudice, fo long as he had any credit with him. or authority under him. Having this far proceeded, he defired to shew me his commission, which is under the great feal, to himself only, which is as large as may be, and yet fundrie of the privie council there with him, but not one in commission, nor present, nor near us all this time having spent almost five hours in these matters; he presented to me the master of Gray, who delivered to me a letter from the king in his commendation, whom I perceive the king means to fend to her majesty, and therefore requires a safe-conduct for his passage, which I pray you procure, and to fend it as foon as you may. I let him understand of the lord Seaton's negociation with the French king. He fwore to me, that Seaton was but a knave, and that it was partly against his will, that he should be fent thither. But his commission and instruction being of no great importance, he yielded the fooner; and if Seaton has gone beyond his instructions, which Arran drew himself, he will make Touching William Newgate, and Seaton fmart for it. Mark Golgan, he protested he never heard of any such; he fays there was a little poor foul, with a black beard, come thither a begging, who faid he was an enemy to Desmond, to whom he gave a croun, but never heard of him fince, and for any Scotsman going into leeland, he fays there is no fuch matter; if there be, there may be some few raskals that he knows not of; and touching the coming of any Jesuits into Scotland, he fays, it is but the slanderous devise of the king's enemys, and such as would have the world believe the king were ready to revolt in religion, who the world shall well fee will continue as conference the new was preacone E vill, hath the junction of the can conference these can range.

The my for I pray

Arrai to tl

As have to majest punish been so dead done is all the her majestal three so fuch as and w conspir constant therein, as what prince soever professed it most; and the earl himself dos protest to me, that to his knowledge, he never saw a Jesuit in his life, and did assure me if there was any in Scotland, as their ministers would do, if they preach such doctrine as they did in Scotland; and touching one Ballenden, of whom I wrote to yow, I heard from Mr. Colvill, the earle avows constantly that he knows not, nor hath not heard of any such man, but he would inquire at the justice clerk, and would inform me what he could learn of that; thus I have made you as short a discourse as I can of so many matters, so long discoursed upon, but these are the principal points of all our talk, so near as I can remember it, and for this time I commit you to the Almighty. At Berwick the 14th of August, 1584.

The king is very defirous to have my fon Robert Cary to come to him. I pray you know her majesty's pleasure.

101-

oire

to

red

no-

nay

ne-

one

im,

he

the

be,

but

this

tter

the

ires are, d of

He

was But

his

nake

and

ich;

ard,

to eard

Ire-

here

s, it

fuch

evolt

e as

Arran's Answers to the grieffs or articles proponed to the lord Hunsdon, fet down in another form.

As to the strait and severe persecution of all such, as have been noted to have been well affected to the Queen's majesty, it cannot appear they were either for that cause punished, or hardly dealt with, since his majesty of late has been so careful and diligent to choice out good instruments to deal betwixt her majesty and him, as his majesty has done in electing of your lordship and me; besides that in all their accusations, their good will and affection born to her majesty was, at no time, laid to their charge, but capital actions of treason many way tried now be the whole three estates, and more than manifest to the world.

As for his majesty inhibiting, by publick proclamation, such as were banished, not to repair in England; the bruits and whisperings that came to his majesty's ears, of their conspiracies and treasons, which since syn they accomplished, fo far as in them lay, moved his majesty to inhibit them to repair to any place, so near his majesty's realme, lest they should have attempted these things, which shortly they did attempt, being farther off, and more distant both by sea and land.

As for reception of Jesuits, and others, her majesty's fugitives, and not delivering them according to his promife, as your lordship propones, his majesty would be most glad that fo it might fall out by your lordfhip's travailes, that no fugitive of either realme should be received of either, and when so shall be, it shall not fail on his majesty's part, albeit in very deed this time bygone his majesty has been constrained to receipt her majesty's mean rebells and fugitives, contrar his good natural, fince her majesty hath receipt, in effect, the whole and greatest rebells and traitors his majesty in his own blood ever had; as for the agreement with his majesty's mother aneat their association, his majesty has commanded me, in presence of your lordship's servant, to affure her majesty and your lordship, in his majesty's name, that it is altogether false, and an untruth, nor any such like matter done yet.

His majesty has also commanded me to assure your lordship, that it is also salso and untrue, that his majesty has, by any means direct or indirect, sent any message to the pope, or received any from him; or that his majesty has dealt with Spain or any foreigners, to harm her majesty or her realm, which his majesty could have no honour to do, this good intelligence taking place, as I hope in God it shall.

As concerning the contemptuous usage of her majesty's ministers, fent unto his majesty, his majesty used none of them so; and if his majesty had, sufficient cause was given by them, as some of their own writs do yet testify: as I more particularly showed your lordship at Foulden at our late meeting.

The Soliber

THE majesty' I. Wher mea

2. Si getfulne been do fort or

fame to

3. Sh particular of her f Queen as for h may cla life, an made, your ma Queen of her late 6. Sh touching that she

48 Cot

to ey

id ea

's

e, at ve fo

in

ed ar

et,

in

is

as

to e, ke

by

e,

th

n, bo

18

of

en

I

m

N°. XXXI. (Vol. II. p. 304.)

The Scottish Queen's offers upon the effect of her liberty propounded by her fecretary Naw, November 1584 **.

HE Queen my mistress being once well assured of your majesty's amity,

1. Will declare openly that she will (as it is sincerely her meaning) straitly to join unto your majesty, and to the fame to yield and bear the chief honour and respect, before all other kings and princes in Christendom.

2. She will fwear, and protest solemnly, a sincere forgetfulness of all wrongs which she may pretend to have been done unto her in this realme, and will never, in any fort or manner whatfoever, shew offence for the same.

3. She will avow and acknowledge, as well in her own particular name, as also for her heirs and others descending of her for ever, your majesty, for just, true, and lawful Queen of England.

4. And confequently, will renounce, as well for herfelf, as for her faid heirs, all rights and pretences which she may claim to the crown of England, during your majesty's life, and other prejudice.

5. She will revoke all acts and shews, by her heretofore made, of pretence to this said crown to the prejudice of your majesty, as may be the taking of the arms and stile of Queen of England, by the commandment of king Francis, her late lord and husband.

6. She will renounce the pope's bull for fo much as may be expounded to turn in her favour, or for her behoof, touching the deprivation of her majesty, and will declare that she will never help and serve herself with it.

7. She will not profecute, during your majesty's life,

¹³ Cott. Lib. Calig. C. S. A Copy-

by open force or otherways, any publick declaration of her right in the fuccession of this realme, so as secret assurance be given unto her, or at the least publick promise, that no deciding thereof shall be made in the prejudice of her, or of the king her son, during your majesty's life, nor after your decease, until such time as they have been heard thereupon, in publick, free, and general assembly of the parliament of the said realme.

8. She will not practife, directly or indirectly, with any of your majesty's subjects, neither within nor out of your realme, any thing tending to war, civil or foreign, against your majesty and your estate, be it under pretext of religion, or for civil and politick government.

9. She will not maintain or support any of your subjects declared rebels, and convicted of treason against you.

ro. She will enter into the affociation, which was shewed her at Wingsield for the surety of your majesty's life, so as there be mended or right explicated some clauses, which I will shew to your Majesty, when I shall have the copy thereof, as I have before time required.

11. She will not treat with foreign kings and princes, for any war or trouble against this state, and will renounce, from this time, all enterprises made or to be made in her favour for that respect.

12. Furthermore, this realme being affailed by any civil or foreign war, she will take part with your majesty, and will affist you in your defence with all her forces and means, depending of herself and with all her friends of Christendom.

maintenance of your majesty, and the two realms of this isle, she will enter with your majesty in a league defensive, as shall be more particularly advised, and will perswade as much as in her, the king her son to do the like.

The leagues with all parts abroad remaining firm, and especially the antient league between France and Scotland, in that which shall not be against this present.

14. She will enter into a league offensive, having good affurance, or fecret declaration and acknowledgement of (which of her d nue of t

15. I doth off (better her righ

that hay

(better which, pounded country, ordef wh whole de realme, hostage f mifed un accorded after try: trouble o nothing to being further houst further, fubjects, fifted for of the cor

19. Sh done again as they are hath been have revol appointed

her right in the fuccession of this crown, and promise, that happening any breach betwixt France and this realme. (which she prayeth God never to happen) the just value of her dowry shall be placed for her in lands of the revenue of the crown.

15. For assurance of her promises and covenants, she doth offer to abide herself in this realme for a certain time, (better hostage can she not give than her own person) which, fo as she be kept in the liberty here before propounded, is not in case to escape secretly out of this country, in the fickly state she is in, and with the good ordef which your majesty can take therein.

16. And in case your majesty do agree to her full and whole deliverance, to retire herself at her will out of this realme, the faid Queen of Scotts she will give sufficient hostage for such time as will be advised.

17. If she abide in this realme, she will promise not to depart out of it, without your licence, fo as it be promiled unto her that her state, in such liberty as shall be accorded unto her, shall not be in any fort altered, untill after tryall to have attempted against your life, or other trouble of your estate.

er

ce

no

or

er

rd

he

ny

ur

nft

li-

eff

ed

as ch

py

s,

e,

er

vil

nd

18,

m.

nd

nis

n-

er-

re.

nd

d, od

of

18. If the go into Scotland, the will promife to alter nothing there in the religion which is now used there, she being suffered to have free exercise of hers, for her and her houshold, as it was at her return out of France; and further, to pull out every root of new division between the subjects, that none of the subjects of Scotland shall be ifted for his conscience, nor constrained to go to the service of the contrary religion.

19. She will grant a general abolition of all offences done against her in Scotland, and things shall remain there as they are at this prefent, for the respect, saving that which hath been done against her honour, which she meaneth to have revoked and annulled.

20. She will travel to fettle a fure and general reconciliation between the nobility of the country, and to cause to be appointed about the king her fon, and in his council, fuch as shall be fit for the entertainment of the peace and quiet of the country, and the amity of the realm.

21. She will do her best to content your majesty, in favour of the Scots lords banished and refuged hither, upon their due submission to their princes, and your majesty's promise to assist the said Queen and king of Scotland against them, if they happen to fall into their former saults.

22. She will proceed to the marriage of the king her fon, with the advice and good council of your majesty.

23. As she will pass nothing without the king her son, so doth she desire that he intervene conjointly with her in this treaty, for the greater and perfecter assurance thereof; for otherwise any thing can hardly be established to be sound and continue.

24. The faid Scotch Queen trusteth, that the French king, her good brother, according to the good affection which he hath always shewed her, and hath been afresh testified unto me by Mons: de Mannissiere for this said treaty, will very willingly intervene, and will assist her for the surety of her promises.

25. And so will the princes of the house of Lorrain, following the will of the said king, will bind themselves

thereunto.

26. For other kings and princes of Christendom, she will affay to obtain the like of them, if for greater solemnity and approbation of the treaty it be found to be necessary.

27. She doth defire a speedy answer, and final conclusion of the premises, to the end to meet in time with all inconveniencies.

28. And in the mean time, the more to strengthen the faid treaty, as made by her of a pure and frank will, she desireth that demonstration be made of some releasement of her captivity.

Object creta

THE affected her liber

That other ill nion had That possession possession

Novem 158

HE confidere

now is.
2. To

3. Or in that ft princes t maketh o tion town her libert daily.

49 Cott

Objections against the Scottish Queen, under secretary Walfinghame's hand, November 1584.

HE Queen of Scots is ambitious, and standeth ill affected to her majesty, and therefore it cannot be but that her liberty should bring peril unto her majesty.

That her enlargement will give comfort to papifts, and other ill affected subjects, and greatly advance the opinion had of her title as fuccessor.

That as long as the shall be continued in her majesty's possession, she may serve as it were a gage of her majesty's surety, for that her friends, for fear of the danger she may be thrown into, in case any thing should be done in her favour, dare not attempt any thing in the offence of her majesty.

November

ır ir 6

er

in

nd

ne |

to ry er

1, es

ill

ty

no n-

he

nt

What course were fit to be taken with the Queen of Scots, either to be enlarged or not ".

I HE course to be taken with the faid Queen may be considered of in three degrees; either,

1. To continue her under custody in that state she

2. To restrain her of the present liberty she now hath.

3. Or to fet her at liberty upon caution.

1. Touching the first, to continue her under custody in that state she now is; it is to be considered, that the princes that favour that queen, upon the complaint she maketh of hard usage, are greatly moved with commiseration towards her, and promise to do their endeavour for her liberty, for which purpose her ministers solicit them daily.

⁴⁹ Cott. Lib. Cal. 8.

And to move them the more to pity her case, she acquainteth them with her offers made to her majesty, which appeared to be no less profitable than reasonable for her majesty, so as the refusal and rejecting giveth her friends and favourers cause to think her hardly dealt withal, and therefore may, with the better ground and reason, attempt fomewhat for the fetting of her at liberty.

It is also likely that the faid Queen, upon this refusal, finding her case desperate, will continue her practice un. der hand, both at home and abroad, not only for her delivery, but to attain to the present possession of this crown. upon her pretended title, as she had hitherto done, as appeareth, and is most manifest by letters and plots intercepted, and chiefly by that late alteration of Scotland, which hath proceeded altogether by her direction, whereby a gap is laid open for the malice of all her majesty's enemies, fo as it appeareth that this manner of keeping her, with fuch number of persons as she now hath, and with liberty to write and receive letters (being duly confi. dered), is offensive to the princes, the said Queen's friends; rather chargeable, than profitable to her majesty; and subject to all fuch practices as may peril her majefly's person or state, without any provision for her majesty's safety, and therefore no way to be liked of.,

2. Touching the fecond, to restrain her in a more straighter degree of the liberty she hath hitherto enjoyed.

It may at first sight, be thought a remedy very apt to stop the course of the dangerous practices softered heretofore by her: For, true it is, that this remedy might prove very profitable, if the realme of Scotland stood in that sort devoted to her majesty, as few years past it did; and if the king of that realme were not likely, as well for the release of his mother, as for the advancement of both their pretended titles, to attempt somewhat against this realme and her majesty, wherein he should neither lack foreign assistance, nor a party here within this realme: But the king and that realme standing affected as they do, this restraint, instead

instead of following First, the rest of second of redress

Laftly , desperate to attemp matter ab being dul restraint , subject to

The land Queen at the mann performed or to be But first weighed,

For it is dereth her of the Scarevenge, fet on food to allow a fuch cause than it has fort, be a and theres mother, is the fame to home and dangerous advance his may enter

It is to

VOL.

inflead of remedying, is likely to breed these inconveniencies

First, it will increase the offence both in him, and in the rest of the princes her friends that misliked of her re-

Secondly, It will give them just cause to take some way of redress.

Laftly, It is to be doubted, that it may provoke some desperate ill-disposed person, all hope of her liberty removed, to attempt somewhat against her majesty's own person (a matter above all others to be weighed), which inconveniency being duly considered, it will appear manifestly, that the restraint, in a straighter degree, is likely to prove a remedy subject to very hard events.

The latter degree, whether it were fit to fet the faid Queen at liberty, ministreth some cause of doubt, touching the manner of the liberty, in what fort the same is to be performed, whether to be continued here within the realme, or to be restored into her own country.

But first, this proposition, before the particularities be weighed, is to be considered in generality.

For it is very hard for a well-affected fubject, that tendereth her majesty's surety, and weigheth either the nature of the Scottish Queen, being inclined to ambition and revenge, or her former actions, what practices she hath set on foot most dangerous for her majesty and this realme, to allow of her liberty, being not made acquainted with such causes, as time hath wrought, to make it less perilous than it hath been, nor with such cautions as may, in some sort, be devised to prevent both her ambition and malice; and therefore, to make this apparent.

It is to be confidered, that the danger that was in the mother, is now grown to be in the son. He pretendeth the same title she doth: Such as do affect her, both at home and abroad, do affect him (and he is the more dangerous for that he is unmarried, which may greatly advance his fortune; and that he is a man, whereby he may enter into action in his own person); where she is

ac.

er

ids ind

npt

al,

un-

de-

'n,

as

er-

d ,

re-

y's

ing

and nfi-

ds;

ub-

fon

and

ore

ed.

to

to-

ove

fort

the

ale

ore-

and af-

ing

nt,

restrained, he is at liberty; his own realme is now altoge, ther at his devotion, and the party affected to this crown abased; so as the matter duly considered, neither her liberty nor restraint doth greatly alter the case for perils towards her majesty, unless by such promises as may be made by way of treaty with her, the danger likely to grow from the king her son to be provided for.

But in this behalf it may be objected, that fo long as the mother remains in her majesty's hands, the king will attempt nothing for fear of his mother's peril.

To this objection it may be answered, first, That they hope that her majesty, being a prince of justice, and inclined to mercy, will not punish the mother for the son's offence, unless she shall be found, by good proof, culpable. Secondarily, That men will not be over-hasty, considering in what predicament the king standeth touching his expectation of this crown, to advise any thing that in time suture may be dangerous to the giver of such council as may reach to his mother's peril.

And lastly, the taking away of his mother, he being strong in the field through both foreign assistance, and a party here within the realme, will appear so weak a remedy (which may rather exasperate both him, and her party, to proceed with more courage and heat to revenge, if any such hard measure should be offered unto her), as they will suppose for the reason above specified, that no such extremity will be used.

It may also be objected, that the setting of her at liberty will greatly encourage the papists both at home and abroad; but herein, if the provision be duly considered, that may be made by parliament both here and there, they shall rather find cause of discomfort than otherwise.

These two doubts being resolved, and the perils that was in the mother appearing, most manifestly to be seen in the son accompanied with more danger, with due consideration had also of such remedies as may be provided for the preventing of the dangers, that her liberty may minister just cause to doubt of; there will be good cause of hope found, that the same will rather breed benefit than perils.

Now i performed tinued with that place being fo i that will v in that be much mothis realmost.

If abroa

France, ti then shall of fuch pri realme, w For the perils that fon. For dvice will of the trea arliament e well adv now the m ave interp e found v aely rejeć er, or he er majesty. rief shall ho is a m panish prac hat the refl

ence, but

dering the

ath deserve

cotland sha

ich counsel

specially ha

e.

wn

rty

eb

by

he

29 vill

ley

inn's

ole.

ing

ion

nay

to ong

may

vith

fure

the

i. erty

ad;

y be

ther

was fon

had

ting

e to

the

Now it resteth, in what fort the said liberty shall be performed; if it shall be thought meet she shall be continued within the realm with some limitation, especially in that place where she now resideth, the country round about being so insected in religion as it is, it is greatly to be doubted that will very much increase the corruption, and falling away in that behalf. Besides, she should have commodity, with much more ease, and speed, to entertain practices within this realme, than by being in her own country.

If abroad freely without limitation either in Scotland, or france, then shall her majesty lose the gages of her safety, then shall she be at hand to give advice in surtherance of such practices, as have been laid for to stir trouble in this ralme, wherein she hath been a principal party.

For the first, it is answered before, that the respect of any perils that may befal unto her, will in no fort restrain her fon. For the other, if it be considered what harm her dvice will work unto herself, in respect of the violation of the treaty, and the provision that may be made in writing there, it is to be thought, that she will then e well advised, before the attempt any such matter, which low she may do without perill. Besides such princes, as are interposed their faith and promise for her, cannot with honour affift her, wherein the French king will not te found very forward, who, in most friendly sort, hath, ately rejected all such requests, propounded either by er, or her fon's ministers, that might any way offend et majesty. And so to conclude, seeing the cause of her nef shall be taken away; the French king gratified, ho is a mediator for her, and will mislike, that, by any panish practice, she should be drawn to violate her faith, hat the rest of the princes shall have no just cause of ofence, but rather to think honourably of her majesty condering the Scottish Queen's carriage towards her, which ath deserved no way any such favour; the noblemen of totland shall be restored, who will be a good stay of ich counsells as may tend to the troubling of this realme, specially having so good a ground of warrant as the parliament to stand unto; the charges and perills which her practices might have bred to this realme shall be avoided; and lastly, the hope of the papists shall be taken away, by such good provisions, as in both the realmes may be made, whereby the perills that might sall into her majesty's own person, (a matter of all others to be weighed) shall be avoided, when by the change that may grow by any such wicked and ungodly practice, they shall see their case no way relieved in point of religion.

Reasons to induce her majesty to proceed in the treaty under Secretary Walfingham's hand ".

THAT fuch plots as have of late years been devised (tending to the raising of trouble within this realme) have grown from the Scots Queen's ministers, and favourers, not without her allowance and seeking: Or,

That the means used by the said ministers, to induce princes to give ear to the said plots, is principally grounded upon some commisseration had of their restraint.

That the stay, why the said plots have not been put in execution, hath proceeded, for that the said princes have, for the most part, been entertained with home and domestick troubles.

That it is greatly to be doubted, that now their realms begin to be quiet, that somewhat will be attempted in her favours by the said princes.

That it is also to be doubted, that somewhat may be attempted by some of her fautors in an extraordinary sort, to the perill of her majesty.

That for the preservation thereof, it shall be convenient for her majesty to proceed to the finishing of the treats, not long sithence begun between her and the said Queen.

50 Cott, Lib. Cal. C. 2.

Mada

lettre de le nom less me estant d & bonn fuivant portuné vertemer & me d jugeray prendz q mentir c ministres fant, & je puisse envoyé p cela, ce ne seroit que vous naturel de termes est desert ce paroitre vo moyens d' comme au toujours li aussi ne lug

nous. La

Nº. XXXII. (Vol. II. p. 315.)

Letter of Q. Mary to Q. Elizabeth ".

Madame ma bonne Sœur,

ier

d; by e, wn be

ne

he

fed

ave

rs,

uce

nd-

put ces

and

lmg

her

be ort.

ient

ty.

en.

VI'ASSEURANT que vous avez eu communication d'une lettre de Gray que vostre homme Semer me livra hier soubz le nom de mon filz y recongnoissant quasi de mot a la mot les mesmes raisons que le dit Gray m'escrivit en chifre estant dernierement pres de vous desmontrant la suffisance & bonne intention du personage je vous prieray seulement suivant ce que ci devant je vous ay tant instantement importuné que vous me permettiez desclaireir librement & ouvertement ce point de l'affociation d'entre moy & mon filz & me deslier les mains pour proceder avec lui comme je jugeray estre requis pour son bien & le mien. Et j'entreprendz quoi que l'on vous die & puisse en rapporter de faire mentir ce petit brouillon qui persuadé par aucuns de vos ministres a enterpris cette separation entre moy & mon enfant, & pour y commencer je vous supplie m'octroyer que je puisse parler a ce justice clerk qui vous a esté nouvellement envoyé pour mander par luy a mon filz mon intention fur cela, ce qui je me promis que ne me refuserez, quant ce ne seroit que pour demontrer en effect la bonne intention que vous m'avez asseurée avoir a l'accord & entretien de naturel devoir entre la mere & l'enfant qui dit en bonnes termes estre empesche pour vous me tenant captive en un desert ce que vous ne pourrez mieux desmentir & faire paroitre vostre bon desir a notre union que me donnant les moyens d'y proceder, & non m'en retenir & empescher comme aucun de vos ministres pretendent afin de laisser toujours lieu a leur mauvais & finistres practiques entre nous. La lettre porte que l'affociation n'est pas passée, aussi ne luy ai je jamais dit, bienque mon filz avoit accepte;

⁵¹ Cott. Lib. Col. B. VIII. Fol. 147. An original.

& que nous en avions convenu ensemble, comme l'acte figné de sa main, & ses lettres tant a moy, que en France en font foy, ayant donné ce meme temoignage de sa bouche propre a plusieurs ambassadeurs & personnes de credit. s'excusant de ne l'oser faire publier par crainte de vous seulement, demandant forces pour vous resister d'avant de fe declarer si ouvertement estant journellement persuadé au contraire par vos ministres qui luy promettoyent avecque une entreire a Yorck le faire declarer votre heretier. Au furplus Madame quand mon enfant seroit si malheureux que de s'opiniastrer en cette extreme impieté & ingratitude vers moy, je ne puis penser que vous non plus qu'aucun aultre prince de la Chretienté le vouluffiez en cela applaudir ou meintenir pour luy fayre acquerir ma malediction ains que plutos introviendres pour luy faire recongnoitre la raison trop juste & evidante devant Dieu & les hommes. Helas & encore ne luy vouloir j'en ofter, mays donner avec droit ce qu'il tient par usurpation. Je me suis du tout commisea vous, & fidelement faites si il vous plest que je ne en soye pis qu'auparavant, & que la faulsete des uns ne prevale desvant la verite vers vous, pour bien recevant mal, & la plus grande affliction que me sçaurroit arriver a sçavoir la Je vous supplie de me mander en cas perte de mon fils. qu'il persiste en cette m'esconnoissance de son devoir, que de luy ou de moy il vous plaist advouer pour legittime roy ou reyne d'Ecosse, & si vous aves agreable de poursuivre avec moy a part le traité commencé entre nous de quoy je vous requiers, fans plus attendre de response de ce ma gouverne enfant, vous en requerrant avec autant d'affec tion que je sens mon cœur oppresse d'ennuy. Pour Dieu souvenez vous de la promesse que m'avez faites de me prendre en votre protection me raportant de tout a vous & fur ce prian. Dieu qu'il vous viueille preserver de tout vos ennemys & diffimulez amys, comme je le desire de me consoler & de me venger de ceulz qui pourchassent un te malheur entre la mere & l'enfant. Je cesseray de vous troubler, mais non a m'ennuier que je ne reçoive quelque confoli

1

A la madam & cou

N. I

humain affeurer Dieu. gers & en cette maladie tandis que mon par ce volonté

Au r consolation de vous & de Dieu encore un coup je le supplie de vous garder de tout peril. Futhbery XII Mars.

Votre fidelement vouée sœur & obeissante cousine,

MARIE Q.

A la reyne d'Angleterre, madame ma bonne sœur & cousine.

acte

nce ou-

dit,

ous

de

que

Au

que vers ltre

ou que

enroit

le a

ove

def-

: la

r la

cas que

roy

vre

je

ma

fec-

ieu

me

us,

uts

me

te

ous

que

N°. XXXIII. (Vol. II. p. 315.)

A Testament by Q. Mary ".

N. B. The following paper was transcribed by the reva.

Mr. Crawford late regius professor of church-history in the university of Edinburgh. Part of this paper, according to him, is written by Naué, Mary's secretary, the rest with the Queen's own hand. What is marked "is in the Queen's hand.

Considerant par ma condition presente l'estat de vie humaine, si incertain, que personne ne s'en peust, ou doibt asseure, sinon soubs la grande & infinie misericorde de Dieu. Et me voulant prevaloir d'icelle contre tous les dangers & accidens, qui me pourroient inopinement survenir en cette captivité, mesmes a cause des grandes & longues maladies, ou j'ay été detenué jusques a present; j'ay advisé tandis que j'ay la commodité, ou raison en jugement, de pourvoir apres ma mort le salut de mon ame, enterrement de mon corps & disposition de mon bien, estat, & affaires, par ce present mon testament & ordonnance de mon dernier volonté, qui s'ensuyt.

Au nom du Pere, du Filz, & du benoite St. Esprit.

⁵² Cott. Lib. Velpal. L. 16. p. 415.

Premierement, me recongnoissant indigne pecheresse avec plus d'offences envers mon Dieu, que de fatisfaction par toutes les adversités que j'ay souffert; dont je la loue sa bonté Et m'appuyant sur la croix de mon Sauveur & Redempteur Jesus Christ. Je recommende mon ame a la benoiste & individue Trinité, & aux prieres de la glorieuse Vierge Marie, & de tous les anges saincts & sainctes de paradis, esperant par leur merites & intercession, estre aydee a obtenir de estre faicte participante avec eulx de felicité eternelle. Et pour m'y acheminer de cueur plus net & entier, despouillant des a present tout ressentiment des injures, calomnies, rebellions, & aultres offences, qui me pourroient avoir esté faictes durant ma vie, par mes subjets rebelles & aultres ennemis; J'en retriet la vengeance a Dieu, & le supplie leur pardonner, de mesme affection, que je luy requiers pardon a mes faultes, & a tous ceuls & celles que je puis avoir offense de faicts ou de parolles. Je veulx & ordonne, &c. [The two following paragraphs contain directions concerning the place and circumstances of ber burial.]

Pour ne contrevenir a la gloire, honneur, & conservation de l'Eglise catholique, apostolique & Romaine, en la quelle je veulx vivre & mourir, si le prince d'Escosse mon filz y puest etre reduiet contre la mauvaise nourriture qu'il a prise a mon tres grand regret en l'heresie de Calvin entre mes rebelles, je le laisse seul & unique heritier de mon royaume d'Escosse, de droict que je pretende justement en a la couronne d'Angleterre & pays qui en dependent, & generallement de tous & chacun mes meubles & immeubles qui resteront apres ma mort, & execution de ce present testament.

Si non, & que mon dit filz continue a vivre en la dite heresse, Je cede, transporte, & faicte don "de touts & "chacuns mes droicts, que je pretende & puis pretendre a la couronne d'Angleterre, & aultres droicts, seigneuries, ou royaulmes en dependantz, au roy catholique, ou aultre des siens qu'il luy plaira, avesques advis, confentement de sa sainteré; tant pour le voyr aujourhuy

" le fe " recon " recon " plus " luy m " je le " maifo " pour " coste " mon f " voue p " ou fail " Je] " & du " quelz " droict

Je faitz nox tenu mon herit volonté. Je veul

" parlie

troveront faits "al
tout tort Jen charg
three para
added]
de — N

After a

" Si mo " Hamilton " plus con " Lorraine " que j'aun "le feul feurs appui de la religion catholique, que pour reconnoissance de gratuites faveurs que moy, & les miens recommandez par moy, ont avons receu de luy en ma plus grande necessité; & resguard aussi au droict que luy mesme peut pretendre a ces ditz royaulmes & pays, je le supplie qu'en recompence il preign alliance, de la maison de Lorraine, & il ce pleut de celle de Guise, pour memoire de la race de laquelle je suis sortie au coste de Mere, n'a ayant de celuy de mon pere, que mon seul ensant, lequel estant Catholique j'ay tousjours voué pour une de ses silles, si il luy plaisoit de l'accepter, ou faillant une de ses niepces mariée comme sa fille.

" Je laysse mon filz a la protection du roy, de prince,

" & ducs de Lorraine & de Guise, & du Mayne, aux" quelz je recommende & son estat en Escosse, & mon
" droict en Angleterre, si il est catholique, & quelle le

" parlie de ceste reyne. '

Je faitz don au "conte de Lenox" du compte de Lenox tenu par feu son pere, & commande mon filz, comme mon heritier & successeur, d'obeyr en cest en droit a mon volonté.

Je veulx & ordonne toutes les sommes & deniers, qui se troveront par moys deues, tien mis cause de droict estre sais "a Lohliven" etre promptement payés & acquittés, & tout tort & griess reparés per lesdits executeurs desquelz Jen charge la conscience. Oultre, &c. [Follow two or three paragraphs concerning particular legacies, and then is added] Faict au manoir de Sheffeld en Angleterre le jour de—Mil cinq cens soixant & dix sept.

After a large blank page follows in the Queen's band:

[&]quot;Si mon filz meurt, au comte de Lenox, au Claude "Hamilton lequel se montrera le plus fidelle vers moy, & "plus constant en religion, au jugement de — Ducs de "Lorraine & de Guyse, ou je le rapporte sur ce de ceulx a "que j'auray donnay le charge de trayter avesque eux de par moy & ceulx, a condition de ce marrier ou allier en la dite mayson ou par leur advis."

Follow near two pages of particular legacies.

" Et le remets ma tante de Lenox au droict quelle peut ce pretendr a la conté d'Angous avant l'Acort fait par mon commandement entre ma dite tante de Lenox & le comte de Morton, veu quil a esté fait & par le seu roy mon Mary & moy, sur la promesse de sa fidelle assistance, si " luy & moy encourions dangier & besoign d'ayde, ce qu'il rompit, s'entendant secretement au les nos ennemis rebeles les, qu'attemtprient contre sa vie, & pour cest effect pris « les armes, & ont porté les bannieres desploiées, contre co nous, je revoque aussi tout autre don que je luy ai fait de conté de Morton sur promesses de ses bons services a adve-" nir, & entends que la dite Conté foit reunie a la couronne, " si elle se trouve y partenir, comme ses trahisons tant en la mort de mon feu Mary, que en mon banissement, & poursuit de la mien ne l'ont merité. Et defends a mon filz de ce jamays servire de luy pour la hayne qu'il aye a ses parents, la quelle je crains ne s'estende jusques a " luy, le connoissant du tout affectionné aux ennemis de er mon droite en ce royaume, du quel il est penconnaire. " Je recommende mon nepveu François Stuart a mon filz, et lui commande detenir pres de luy et s'enservir, et je lui laisse le bien du conte de Boduel son oncle, en respect ou'il est de mon sang, mon filleul, et ma " estè laisse en tutelle par son pere. " Je declare que mon frere bastard Robert Abbé de St. " Croix n'a eu que par circonvention Orkenay, et que le " ne fut jamays mon intention, comme il apert par la revocation que j'ay fayte depuys, et eté aussi faite d'avant " la afge de xxv. ans, ce que j'aimois deliberer si il ne " m'eussent prenner par prison de se de defayre aulx estats " je veulx donc que Orkenay soit reunie a la couronne comme une de plus necessaires pour mon filz, & fans

" mayson ne pourra etre bien tenue.

" Le " revier " ner fa

a ligne.

A letter

PLEA date the part of rected t the most princely know th all favou mitted i by the o me, if me, tha for any but wou any mea of that the trutl I should thereunt dignity 1 appear, any mat minds of band, a

53 Ap

fufficient

"Le filles de Morra ne parvient accessi heriter, ains revient la contè a la Couronne, si il luy plest luy donner sa ou fille en marriasge, et il nome l'ensienne si ligne.

N°. XXXIV. (Vol. II. p. 327.)

A letter from Mr. Archibald Douglas to the Queen of Scotts ".

PLEASE your majesty, I received your letter of the date the 12th of Nov. and in like manner has feen some part of the contents of one other of the same date, directed to Monf. de Movisir, ambassador for his majesty the most Christian king, both which are agreeable to your princely dignity, as by the one your highness desires to know the true cause of my banishment, and offers unto me all favour if I should be innocent of the heinous facts committed in the person of your husband of good memory, so by the other the faid ambassador is willed to declare unto me, if your husband's murder could be laid justly against me, that you could not follicit in my cause, neither yet for any person that was participant of that execrable fact, but would, feek the revenge thereof, when you should have any means to do it; your majesty's offer, if I be innocent of that crime, is most favourable, and your defire to know the truth of the same is most equitable; and therefore that I should with all my simplicity, sincerity and truth answer thereunto is most reasonable, to the end that your princely dignity may be my help, if my innocence shall sufficiently appear, and procure my condemnation, if I be culpable in any matter, except in the knowledge of the evil disposed minds of the most part of your nobility against your said husband, and not revealing of it; which I am assured was fufficiently known to himself, and to all that had judgment

⁵³ April - Harl. Lib. 37. B. 9. fo. 126.

never so little in that realme; which also I was constrained to understand, as he, that was specially employed betwixt the earl Morton, and a good number of your nobility, that they might with all humility intercede at your majesty's hand for his relief, in fuch matters as are more specially contained in the declaration following, which I am conftrained for my justification, by this letter to call to your majesty's remembrance. Notwithstanding that I am affured, to my grief, the reading thereof will not fmally offend your princely mind. It may please your majesty to remember, that in the year of God, 1566, the faid earl of Morton, with divers other nobility and gent. were declared rebels to your majesty, and banished your realme for insolent murder committed in your majesty's own chamber, which they alledged was done by command of your husband, who notwithstanding affirmed that he was compelled by them to subscribe the warrant given for that effect, howfoever the truth of that matter remains amongst them; it appertains not to me at this time to be curious; true it is that I was one of that number, that heavily offended against your majesty, and passed into France the time of our banishment, at the defire of the rest, to humbly pray your brother the most Christian king to intercede that our offences might be pardoned, and your majesty's clemency extended towards us, albeit divers of no small reputation, in that realme, was of the opinion, that the said fact merited neither to be requisite for, nor yet pardoned. Always fuch was the careful mind of his majesty towards the quietness of that realm, that the dealing in that cause was committed to Mons. de Movisir, who was directed at that time to go into Scotland, to congratulate the happy birth of your fon, whom Almighty God of his goodness may long preserve in happy estate and perpetual felicity; the careful travail of the faid de Movisir was so effectual, and your majesty's mind so inclined to mercy, that within short space thereafter, I was permitted to repair in Scotland, to deal with earls Murray, Athol, Bodvel, Arguile, and fecretary Ledington, in the name and behalf of the faid earl Morton, lords Reven,

Lindfay, offer in might fat mency to them, at declared had been and if y petite ar dealing 1 ing of fu of dealin felves in folved to have not ever, if t and con humbly : for his p they defin had anfw could no ponit, a therein, ftructed your for faithfully the faid e company ther deal faid ban ling, who the Que fent, you all, und forth of

during yo

mitigated

Lindfay, and remanent complesis, that they might make offer in the names of the faid earl, of any matter that might fatisfy your majesty's wrath, and procure your clemency to be extended in their favours; at my coming to them, after I had opened the effect of my meffage, they declared that the marriage betwixt you and your husband had been the occasion already of great evil in that realme. and if your husband should be suffered to follow the appetite and mind of fuch as was about him, that kind of dealing might produce with time worse effects; for helping of fuch inconvenience that might fall out by that kind of dealing, they had thought it convenient to join themfelves in league and band with some other noblemen, refolved to obey your majesty as their natural sovereign, and have nothing to do with your husband's command whatfoever, if the faid earl would for himself enter into that band and confederacy with them, they could be content to humbly request and travel by all means with your majesty for his pardon, but before they could any farther proceed. they defired to know the fald earl's mind herein; when I had answered, that he nor his friends, at my departure, could not know that any fuch like matter would be proponit, and therefore was not instructed what to answer therein, they defired that I should return sufficiently infructed in this matter to Sterling, before the baptism of your fon, whom God might preserve; this message was faithfully delivered to me at Newcastle in England, where the faid earl then remained, in presence of his friends and company, where they all condescended to have no farther dealing with your husband, and to enter into the faid band. With this deliberation I returned to Sterling, where at the request of the most Christian King and the Queen's majesty of England by their ambassadors prefent, your majesty's gracious pardon was granted unto them all, under condition always that they should remain banished forth of the realme, the space of two years, and farther during your majesty's pleasure, which limitation was after mitigated at the humble request of your own nobility, so that immediately after the faid earl of Morton repaired into Scotland to Quhittingaime, where the earl of Bodvell and fecretary Ledington come to him; what speech passed there amongst them, as God shall be my judge, I knew nothing at that time, but at their departure I was requested by the faid earl Morton to accompany the earl Bodvell and fecretary to Edenburgh, and to return with fuch answer as they should obtain of your majesty, which being given to me by the faid persons, as God shall be my judge, was no other than these words, "Schaw to the earl Morton " that the Queen will hear no speech of that matter ap-" pointed unto him;" when I craft that the answer might be made more fensible, fecretary Ledington said, that the earl would sufficiently understand it, albeit few or none at that time understand what passed amongst them. It is known to all men, als veill be railling letters passed betwixt the faid earl and Ledington when they become in divers factions. as also ane buck set furth by the ministers wherein they affirm that the earl of Morton has confessed to them, before his death, that the earl Bodvell come to Quhittingaime to prepon the calling away off the king your husband, to the which proposition the said earl of Morton affirms that he could give no answer unto such time he might know your majesty's mind therein, which he never received. As to the abominable murder, it is known too by the depositions of many persons that were executed to the death for the committing thereof, that the same was executed by them, and at the command of fuch of the nobility, as had subscrivit band for that effect; by this unpleasant declaration, the most part thereof known to yourself, and the remainder may be understood by the aforesaid witnesses that was examined in torture, and that are extant in the custody of the ordinary judges in Scotland, my innocency fo far as may concern any fact does appear sufficiently to your majesty. And as for my dealing aforefaid, I can be no otherwise charged therein, but as what would accuse the vessel that preserves the vine from harm, for the intemperancy of such as immoderately use the same. As for the special cause of my banist opinion co Morton of confessed loss of rep the occasio nishment . better judg man shoul how far e and how in of Morton the injurie time of hi shewing of time of the to accuse that being name of la nished my living in an were not continually troubles at know your service it s on the 8th finghame I it expedien declared ur that defire majesty. N ness to dire further inf partly by p this present any part c

my intentio

my banishment, I think the same has proceeded upon ane opinion conceived, that I was able to accuse the earl of Morton of fo much matter as they alledge himself to have confessed before he died, and would not be induced, for loss of reputation, to perform any part thereof. If this be the occasion of my trouble, as I suppose it is, what punishment I should deserve, I remit me to your majesty's better judgment, who well knows how careful ever ilk gentleman should be of his fame, reputation and honour, and how far ever ilk man should abhor the name of a pultroun, and how indecent it would have been to me to accuse the earl of Morton, being fo near of his kin, notwithstanding all the injuries I was constrained to receive at his hand all the time of his government, and for no other cause, but for hewing of particular friendship to particular friends in the time of the last cruel troubles in Scotland. Sorry I be now to accuse him in any matter being dead, and more forry that being on lyff, be such kind of dealing obtained that name of Ingrate. Always for my own part I have been banished my native country those three years and four months. living in anxiety of mind, my holl guds in Scotland, which were not small, intermittit and disposit upon, and has continually fince the time I was relieved out of my laft troubles at the defire of Monst. de Movisir, attended to know your majesty's pleasure, and to wait upon what service it should please your majesty for to command. Upon the 8th of April inft. your good friend secretary Walfinghame has declared unto me, that her highness tho't it expedient that I should retire myself where I pleased, I declared unto him I had no means whereby I might perform that desire, till such time as I should receive it from your majesty. Neither knew I where it would please your highness to direct me, until such time as I should have received further information from you. Upon this occasion, and partly by permission, I have taken the hardress to write this present letter, whereby your majesty may understand any part of my troubles past, and strait present. As to my intention future, I will never deny that I am fully refolved to spend the rest of my days in your majesty's service, and the king your fon's, wherefoever I shall be directed by your majesty, and for the better performing thereof, if so shall be her majesty's pleasure, to recommend the tryal of my innocency, and examination of the verity of the preceding narration, to the king your fon, with request that I may be pardoned for such offences as concerned your majefty's fervice, and var common to all men the time of his les aige and perdonit to all, except to me, I should be the bearer thereof myself, and be directed in whatfoever fervice it should please your majesty for to command. Most humble I beseech your majesty for to consider hereof, and to be fo gracious as to give order, that I may have means to ferve your majefty according to the fincerity of my meaning, and fo expecting your majesty's answer, after the kiffing your hand with all humility, I take leave from London.

Nº. XXXV. (Vol. II. p. 335.)

A letter from Sir Amias Pawlet ".

SIR,

Did forbear, according to your direction fignified in your letters of the fourth of this present, to proceed to the execution of the contents of Mr. Waade's letters unto you, for the dispersing of this lady's unnecessary servants, and for the seasing of her money, wherein I was bold to write unto you my simple opinion (although in vain as it now falleth out), by my letters of the 7th of this instant, which I doubt not are with you before this time; but upon the receipt of your letters of the 5th which came not unto my hands untill the 8th in the evening, by reason, as did appear by indorsement, that they had been mistaken, and

and oaths fo as in containeth guifte to (

55 Curle
Vol.

were fer

way tow

by my

intreated

I though

matters,

repairing Queen,

old man

the fide

of her h

of her

therein b

fate, I

my hand

required

with qui

and many ling again

might ha refuling fervants, upon she found the membran French c

had, in a

was left v

this houf

their wage

left in C

mifreckon

⁵⁴ Origin. Cal. C. 9.

were fent back to Windsor, after they were entered into the way towards me, I considered, that being accompanied only by my own fervants, it might be thought that they would be intreated to fay as I would command them, and therefore I thought good, for my better discharge in these moneymatters, to crave the affiftance of Mr. Richard Baggot, who repairing unto me the next morning, we had access to this Oueen, whom we found in her bed, troubled after the old manner with a defluxion, which was fallen down into the fide of her neck, and had bereft her of the use of one of her hands, unto whom I declared, that upon occasion of her former practices, doubting lest she would persist therein by corrupting underhand some bad members of this fate, I was expresly commanded to take her money into my hands, and to rest answerable for it, when it shall be required: advising her to deliver the faid money unto me with quietness. After many denials, many exclamations, and many bitter words against you (I say nothing of her railling against myself), with flat affirmation that her majesty might have her body, but her heart she should never have, refuling to deliver the key of the cabinet, I called my fervants, and fent for bars to break open the door, whereupon she yielded, and causing the door to be opened, I found there in the coffers, mentioned in Mr. Waade's remembrance, five rolls of canvas, containing five thousand French crowns, and two leather bags, whereof the one had, in gold, one hundred and four pounds two shillings, and the other had three pounds in filver, which bag of filver was left with her, affirming that she had no more money in this house, and that she was indebted to her servants for their wages. Mr. Waade's note maketh mention of 3 rolls lest in Curle's chamber, 35 wherein, no doubt, he was milreckoned, which is evident as well by the testimonies and oaths of diverse persons, as also by probable conjectures; so in truth we found only two rolls, every of which containeth one thousand crowns, which was this Queen's guifte to Curle's wife at her marriage. There is found in

Vol. III.

⁵⁵ Carle can tell you the truth of this matter.

Naw's chamber, in a cabinet, a chain worth by estimation one hundred pounds, and in money, in one bag nine hundred pounds, in a fecond bag two hundred fourfcore and fix pounds eighteen shillings. All the foresaid parcels of money are bestowed in bags, and sealed by Mr. Richard Baggot, faving five hundred pounds of Naw's money, which I referve in my hands, for the use of this houshold, and may be repayed at London, where her majesty shall appoint, out of the money, received lately by one of my fervants, out of the Exchequer. I feared lest the people might have dispersed this money in all this time, or have hidden the fame in fome fecret corners; for doubt whereof, I had caufed all this Queen's family, from the highest to the lowest, to be guarded in the feveral places where I found them, fo as yff I had not found the money with quietness, I had been forced to have fearch first all their lodgings, and then their own persons. I thank God with all my heart, as for a fingular bleffing, that that falleth out fo well, fearing lest a contrary success might have moved some hard conceits in her majesty.

have moved some hard conceits in her majesty.

Touching the dispersing of this Queen's servants, I trust

I have done so much, as may suffice to satisfy her majesty for the time, wherein I could not take any absolute course, until I heard again from you, partly because her majesty, by Mr. Waade's letter, doth refer to your consideration to return such as shall be discharged to their several dwellings and countries, wherein, as it feemeth, you have forgotten to deliver your opinion; partly, for that as yet, I have received no answer from you, of your resolution, upon the view of the Scottish family fent unto you; what persons you will appoint to be dismist; only this I have done, I have bestowed all fuch as are mentioned in this bill inclosed in three or four several rooms, as the same may suffice to contain them, and that their meat and drink shall be brought unto them by my fervants. It may please you, to advertise me by your next letters, in what fort, and for what course, I thall make their passports, as also, if they shall say that they are unpaid of their wages, what I shall do therein.

It is faid that they have been accustomed to be paid of their wages a charge this peo more east and fimp practices former lowed the have been faid remany hard

Others for my r in any that any fervice;

for me,
Mr. Mar
truft Mr
for the w think that might be fpeech of
was no co at Tyxall
matters,
is fuch as

Your accomfortable because in with her in God graning godly coutection.

Ambassador's

wages at Christmas, for the whole year. Her majesty's charge will be somewhat diminished by the departure of this people, and my charge by this occasion, will be the more easy. But the persons, all save Bastian, are such silly and simple souls, as there was no great cause to fear their practices, and upon this ground, I was of opinion, in my some letters, that all this dismissed train should have followed their mistress, until the next remove, and there to have been discharged upon the sudden, for doubt that the said remove might be delayed, yf she did fear, or expect any hard measure.

Others shall excuse their foolish pity as they may; but for my part, I renounce my part of the joys of heaven, yf in any thing that I have faid, written or done, I have had any other respect than the furtherance of her majesty's fervice; and fo I shall most earnestly pray you to affirm for me, as likewise for the not seasing of the money by Mr. Manners, the other commissioners and myself. trust Mr. Waade hath answered, in all humble duties. for the whole company, that no one of us did fo much as think that our commission reaching only to the papers, we might be bold to touch the money, fo as there was no fpeech of that all to my knowledge, and as you know I was no commissioner in this search, but had my hands full at Tyxall, discreet servants are not hastily to deal in great matters, without warrant, and especially where the cause is fuch as the delay of it carried no danger.

Your advertisement of that happy remove hath been greatly comfortable unto me. I will not say, in respect of myself, because my private interest hath no measure of comparison with her majesty's safety, and with the quiet of this realme. God grant a happy and speedy yssue to these good and godly councels; and so I commit you to his merciful protection. From Chartley the 10th of September 1586.

C

r

⁵⁶ This lady hath good store of money at present in the French ambassador's hands.

N°. XXXVI. (Vol. II. p. 349.)

Letter from the king of Scotts to Mr. Archibald Douglas his ambassador in England, October, 1586 57.

RESERVE up yourfelf na langer in the earnest dealing for my mother, for ye have done it too long; and think not that any your travellis can do goode if hir life be taken, for then adeu with my dealing with thaime that are the special instrumentis thairof; and theirfore, gif ye looke for the contineuance of my favour towartis you, spair na pains nor plainnes in this cace, but redde my letter wrettin to Williame Keith, and conform yourself quhollie to the contentis thairof, and in this requeift let me reap the fruictis of your great credit there, ather now or never. Fairwell. October, 1586.

Letter to fir William Keith, ambassador in England, probably from secretary Maitland. Nov. 27, 1586 58.

By your letters fent by this bearer, (albeit concerning no pleasant subject) his majesty conceives well of your earnestness and fidelity in your negotiations, as also of Mr. Archibald's activity and diligence, whom you so greatly praise and recommend. I wish the issue correspond to his Majesty's opinion, your care and travell, and his great diligence as you write. His majesty takes this rigorous proceeding against his mother deeply in heart, as a matter greatly concerning him both in honour and otherwise. His highnesses actions and behaviour utter 57 Cott. Lib. Calig. C. 9. An Original in the king's hand.

58 A Copy in the collect. of fir A. Dick. Vol. A. fol. 219.

plainly appreh ment ! directe fellors . diffolut princes tremity his high far besi his mai fhall in thereto. your m and your my own I am gla that you great acc the duty am conft to fcribb witness o your neg

The potential the rigoro jesty, an not go al cations ag plainly not only how far nature prevails, but also how he apprehends of the fequel of that process, and of what moment he esteems it. There is an ambassade shortly to be directed, wherein will be employed an earl and two counfellors, on whose answer will depend the continuance or diffolution of the amity and good intelligence between the princes of this ifle. In the mean feafon, if farther extremity be used, and his majesty's suit and request disdained, his highness will think himself dishonoured and contemned far besides his expectation and deferts. Ye may perceive his majesty's disposition by his letter to you, which you shall impart to Mr. Archibald, and both deal according thereto. I need not to recommend to your care, concerning your master's service both in weill and in honour. As you and your colleague shall behave yourself in this behalf, so for my own part, will I interpret your affection to your master. I am glad of that I hear of yourfelf, and I do fully credit that you write of Mr. Archibald, whose friends here make great account of his professed devotion to the Queen, besides the duty he owes to the king's majesty her son. Farther I am constrained to remit to next occasion, having scarce time to scribble these few lines (which of themselves may bear witness of my haste). Wishing you a prosperous issue of your negotiation, I commit you, &c. Halyrudhouse, Novr. 27th , 1586.

Novr. 27

The people, and all estates here are so far moved by the rigorous proceedings against the Queen, that his majesty, and all that have credit are importuned, and may not go abroad for exclamations against them, and imprecations against the Queen of England.

3

,

E

t

N

ur

of

fo

l, ies in ter

N°. XXXVII. (Vol. II.) p. 352.

To the king's majesty, from Mr. Archibald Douglas ".

PLEASE your majesty, I received your letter of the date the 28th of September, the 5th of October, which was the fame day that I directed Wm. Murray towards your highness, by fuch letters as he carried, and others of feveral dates, your majesty may perceive that I had omitted nothing for far as my travel might reach unto, anent the performing of the two chief points contained the faid letter befor the receit thereof, which by these presents I must repeat for answering of the saidis. As to the first, so far as may concern the interceding for the Queen your majesty's mother her life, I have divers times and in every audience travelled with this Queen in that matter, specially to know what her full determination must be in that point, and could never bring her to any further answer, but that this proceeding against her by order of justice was no less against her mind, than against their will that loved her best; as towards her life she could give no answer thereunto, untill such time as the law hath declared whether she was innocent or guilty. Herewithal it was her pleasure thus far to inform me, that it was a number of the affociants that earnestly pressed her that the law might proceed against her, giving reasons that fo long as she was suffered to deal in matters, so long would never this realme be in quiet, neither her life, neither this state in assurance, and in the end they used this protestation that if she would not in this matter follow their advice, that they should remain without all blame whatsoever should fall out; whereupon she had granted them liberty to proceed, lest such as had made the request, might hereaft happen And cause hath b feets, ceived will be life an whereo ing wit the pro to bear prayed contrar and by that be now ot make tl when it in giving councel of the p told her understo to me r me for dealing of my n that I n towards fome di from co day afte leaves o

was her matter a

answer

^{19 16} Oct. 1586. From the Original in the collect, of fir A. Dick. Vol. B. fol. 324.

hereafter have charged herself with inconvenience if any should happen.

e

g

le

10

1-

er

ed

er

er

1g

d, er

as

y.

at

er

at

ng

2, nis

er

ty

ght

cke

And by myfelf I know this her fpeech to be true, because both papist and protestant has behaved them, as it hath been her pleasure to declare, but upon divers refeeds, the one to avoid suspicion that otherwise was conteived against them, the other upon zeal, and care that they will be known to have for prefervation of their fovereign's life and state in this perilous time, upon consideration whereof, I have been conftrained to enter into fome dealing with both, wherewith I made her majesty acquainted; the protestants, and such as in other matters will be known to bear no small favour unto your majesty's fervice, hath prayed that they may be excused from any dealing in the contrary of that, which by their oath they have avowed, and by their speech to their sovereign requested for, and that before my coming in this country; if they should now otherwise do, it would produce no better effect but to make them subject to the accusation of their sovereign, when it should please her to do it, of their inconstancy, in giving councell whereby they might incur the danger of ill councellors and be consequent worthy of punishment. Such of the papifts, as I did deal with, went immediately, and told her majesty what I had spoken to them, who albeit she understood the matter of before, fent for me and declared to me my own speech that I had uttered to them, willing me for the weil of my maister's fervice to abstain from dealing with fuch, as were not yet fufficiently moved to think of my mafter as she did. I craved leave of her majesty, that I might inform them of your majefty's late behaviour towards her, and the state of this realme, whereunto with some difficulty she gave her consent. At my late departure from court, which was upon the 5th of this instant, and the day after that the lords of this grand jury had taken their leaves of her majesty to go northward to Fothringham, it was her pleasure to promise to have further speech in this matter at the returning of the faid lords, and to give full answer according to your majesty's contentment to the remainder matters, that I had proponit in name of your ma-As to the 2d part concerning the affociation, and defire that the promise made to the master of Gray concerning your majesty's title may be fulfilled; it appears by the faid letter, that the very point, whereupon the question that may bring your majesty's title in doubt hath not been rightly at the writing of the faid letter confidered, which I take to have proceeded for lack of reading of the act of parliament, wherein is fulfilled all the promife made by the Queen to the faid mafter, and nothing may now cause any doubt to arise against your faid title, except that an opinion should be conceived by these lords of this parliament that are so vehement at this time against the Queen your majesty's mother, that your majesty is, or may be proved hereafter affenting to her proceedings, and fome that love your majefty's fervice were of that opinion that too earnest request might move a ground, whereupon suspicions might grow in men so ill affected in that matter, which I tho't might be helped by obtaining of a declaration in parliament of your majefty's innocence at this time, and by reason that good nature and public honesty would constrain you to intercede for the Queen your mother, which would carry with itself, without any further, fome fuspicion that might move ill affected men to doubt. In my former letters I humbly craved of your majefty that some learned men in the laws, might be moved to advise with the words of the affociation, and the mitigation contained in the act of parliament, and withall to advise what sufpicious effects your majesty's request might work in these choleric men at this time, and how their minds might be best moved to receive reason; and upon all these considerations they might have formed the words of a declarator of your majesty's innocence to be obtained in this parliament, and failing thereof, the very words of a protestation for the same effect that might best serve for your majesty's service, and for my better information. Albeit this was my simple opinion, I shall be contented to follow any direction it shall please your majesty to give; I have already opened the substance hereof to the Queen of his realme, who feems not to be offen with mind beside dates majes fent u while and b receiv your r my le majest

A m

IT wall this come it.

I content the content to the

of it, Queen we we the wh us how but for letter, your m netly a flances, is not

fir A. Dic

The

offended herewith, and hath granted liberty to deal therein with such of the parliament as may remain in any doubt of mind. This being the sum of my proceedings in this matter, besides the remainder, contained in other letters of several dates, I am constrained to lay the whole open before your majesty, and to humbly pray that full information may be sent unto me what further to do herein; in this middle time, while I shall receive more ample direction I shall proceed and be doing according to such direction as I have already received. And so, most gracious sovereign, wishing unto your majesty all happy success in your affairs, I humbly take my leave from London, 16th of Oct. this 1586. Your majesty's most humble subject and obed fervant.

A memorial for his majesty by the master of Gray ...

IT will please your majesty, I have tho't meeter to set down all things as they occur, and all advertisements as they come to my ears, then jointly in a lettre.

I came to Vare the 24th of Decr, and fent to Wm. Keith, and Mr. Archibald Douglas to advertise the Queen of it, lik as they did at their audience. She promised the Queen your majesty's mother's life should be spared till we were heard. The 27th they came to Vare to me, the which day Sir Rob! came to Vare, where they shewed us how far they had already gone in their negociation, but for that the discourse of it is set down in our general letter, I remit me to it, only this far I will testify unto your majesty that Wm. Keith hath used himself right honestly and wisely till our coming, respecting all circumstances, and chiefly his colleague his dealing, which indeed is not better than your majesty knows already.

The 29th day of Decr. we came to London, where ^{60 12} Jan. 1586. An Original in his own hand in the collect. of fir A. Dick. Vol. A. fol. 222.

we were no ways friendly received, nor after the honest fort it has pleafed your majesty use her ambassadors; never man sent to welcome or convey us. The same day we understood of Mr. de Bellievre his leave taking, and for that the custom permitted not, we sent our excuses by Mr. George Young.

The 1st day of Jany. Wm. Keith, and his colleague according to the custom sent to crave our audience. We received the answer contained in the general letter, and could not have answer till the 6th day, what was done that day your majesty has it in the general, yet we was not out of esperance at that time, albeit we received hard answers.

The 8th day we fpeak with the earl of Leicester, where our conference was, as is set down in the general. I remarked this, that he that day said plainly the detaining of the Queen of Scotland prisoner was for that she pretended a succession to this crown. Judge then by this, what is tho't of your Majesty as ye shall hear a little after.

The 9th day we speak with the French ambassador, whom we found very plain in making to us a wife discourse of all his proceedings, and Mr. de Bellievre we thanked him in your majesty's name and opened such things as we had to treat with this Queen, save the last point, as more largely fet down by our general.

It is tho't here, and some friends of your majesty's advised me, that Bellievre his negociation was not effectual, and that the resident was not privy to it, as indeed I think is true, for since Bellievre his perting, there is a talk of this Chasteauneus his servants taken with his whole papers and pacquets, which he was sending in France for that they charge him with a conspiracy of late against the Queen here her life. It is alledged his servant has consessed the matter, but whom I shall trust I know not, but till I see proof I shall account him an honest man, for indeed so he appears, and one (without doubt) who hath been very instant in this matter. I shew him that the Queen and earl of Leicester had desired to speak with me in private, and

I she for the friend that this is that that with her, sualid

T we g looke fee y but f know wife think but y not t with down She o of Le despit I ope it tha She a and f causes dersta of fu not a fo. willin fhe h

faid,

craved his opinion; he gave it freely that he tho't it meetest, I shew him the reason why I communicate that to him, for that I had been suspected by some of her majesty's friends in France to have done evil offices in her service, that he should be my witness that my earnest dealing in this should be a sufficient testimony that all was lyes, and that this knave Naué who now had betrayed her, had in that done evil offices; he desired me, seeing she saw only with other solks eyes, that I should no ways impute it to her, for the like she had done to himself by Naué his persuasion. I answered he should be my witness in that.

The 9th day we fent to court to crave audience, which we got the 10th day; at the first, she said a thing long looked for should be welcome when it comes, I would now fee your master's offers. I answered, no man makes offers but for some cause; we would, and like your majesty, first know the cause to be extant for which we offer, and likewife that it be extant till your majesty has heard us. I think it be extant yet, but I will not promife for an hour, but you think to shift in that fort. I answered we mind not to shift, but to offer from our sovereign all things that with reason may be; and in special, we offered as is set down in our general, all was refused and tho't nothing. She called on the three that were in the house, the earl of Leicester, my lord admiral, and chamberlain, and very despitefully repeated all our offers in presence of them all. I opened the last part and said, Madam, for what respect is it that men deal against your person or estate for her cause? She answered, because they think she shall succeed to me, and for that she is a papist; appearingly said I both the causes may be removed, she faid she would be glad to understand it. If Madam, said I, all that she has of right of fuccession were in the king our sovereign's person, were not all hope of papifts removed? She answered, I hope fo. Then Madam I think the Queen his mother shall willingly demit all her rights in his person. She answered she hath no right, for she is declared unhabil. Then I faid, if she have no right, appearingly the hope ceases already, fo that it is not to be feared that any man attempt for her. The Queen answered, but the papists allow not our declaration; then let it fall, fays I, in the king's perfon by her affignation. The earl of Leicester answered, The is a prisoner, how can she demit? I answered the demission is to her son, by the advice of all the friends she has in Europe, and in case, as God forbid, that any attempt cuttis the Queen here away, who shall party with her to prove the demission or assignation to be inessectual, her son being opposite party and having all the princes her friends for him, having bonded for the efficacy of it with his majesty of before. The Queen made as she could not comprehend my meaning, and fir Robt opened the matter again, she yet made as tho' she understood not. So the earl of Leicester answered that our meaning was, that the king should be put in his mother's place. Is it fo, the Queen answered, then I put myself in a worse case than of before; by God's pasfion, that were to cut my own throat, and for a dutchy, or an earldom to yourfelf, you or fuch as you would cause fome of your desperate knaves kill me. No, by God, he shall never be in that place. I answered he craves nothing of your majesty but only of his mother. The earl of Leicester answered that were to make him party to the Queen my mistress. I said, he will be far more party, if he be in her place thro' her death. She would stay no longer, but faid she should not have a worse in his mother's place. And faid, tell your king what good I have done for him in holding the crown on his head fince he was born, and that I mind to keep the league that now ftands between us, and if he break it shall be a double fault, and with this minded to have bidden us a farewell; but we achevit (i. est. finished arguing upon this point). And I spake craving of her that her life may be spared for 15 days; The refused. Sir Robt craved for only eight days, the said not for an hour; and fo geid her away. Your majefty fees we have delivered all we had for offers, but all is for nothing, for she and her councel has laid a determination that they mind to follow forth, and I fee it comes rather of her withouthere.

your no medlethope if further that I they has been thing letters determ cefter to fpe that I the re time, dealin God w use sh very co less sf said for So

For

your f
(i. e. had c not m pray fincered

your

of her councel than herself, which I like the worse; for without doubt, sir, it shall cut off all friendship ye had here. Altho' it were that once they had meaned well to your majesty, yet remembering themselves, that they have medled with your mother's blood, good faith they cannot hope great good of yourself, a thing in truth I am forry for; further your majesty may perceive by this last discourse of that I proponit, if they had meaned well to your majesty, they had used it otherwise than they have done, for reason has bound them. But I dare not write all. I mind something to speak in this matter, because we look shurly our letters shall be trussit by the way.

For that I fee private credit nor no means can alter their determination, altho' the Queen again and the earl of Leicester has desired to speak with me in particular; I mind not to speak, nor shall not; but assuredly shall let all men see that I in particular was no ways tyed to England, but for the respect of your majesty's service. So albeit, at this time, I could not effectuate that I desired, yet my upright dealing in it shall be manifested to the world. We are, God willing, then to crave audience, where we mind to use sharply our instructions, which hitherto we have used very calmly, for we can, for your honour's cause; say no less for your majesty, than the French ambassador has said for his master.

So I pray your majefty confider my upright dealing in your service, and not the effect, for had it been doable (i. e. possible to be done) by any I might have here had credit, but being I came only for that cause I will not my credit shall serve here to any surther purpose. I pray God preserve your majesty and send you a true and sincere friendship. From London this 12th of Jan. 1586.

1

d

ľ

I understand the Queen is to send one of her own to your majesty.

To the right hon. my lord vice chancellor and fecretary to his majesty, from the master of Gray ".

My lord, I fend you these lines with this inclosed to his majesty, whereby your lordship shall understand how matters goes here. And before all things I pray your lordship move his majesty to respect my diligence, and not the effect in this negociation, for I swear if it had been for the crown of England to myself I could do no more, and let not unfriends have advantage of me, for the world shall see that I loved England for his majesty's fervice only. I look shortly to find your lordship friend as ye made promise, and by God I shall be to you if I can. Wm. Keith and I devysed, if matters had gone well, to have run a course that your lordship might have here been in credit and others disappointed, but now I will do for you as for myself; which is to care for no credit here, for in conscience they mean not honestly to the king our sovereign, and if they may, he will go get his mother is gone or shortly to go, therefore my lord without all kind of scruple I pray you to advise him the best is not this way. They fay here, that it has been faid by one who heard it from you, that ye defired not the king and England to agree, because it would rack the noblemen, and gave an example of it by king James the fourth, I answered in your name that I was affured you never had spoken it. Mr. Archibald is the speaker of it, who I assure your lordship has been a poison in this matter, for they lean very mickle to his opinion. He cares not, he fays, for at length the king will be fain to deal this way, either by fair means or necess fity, so that when he deals this course he is affured to be welcome; to fet down all that is past of the like purposes, it would consume more paper than I have here, so I defer it to r the Qu residen shall p this Q taken l that all with th found : minded have fe ing, bu truffed our ow pacquet day, w instructi we fay mon ma about th except Queen a me. I I fee a and I ci lordship

To the

So after

1 commi

T ma former le to take of cil; albe

Vol. A. fol. 179.

of fir A. 1

it to meeting. There is a new conspiracy alledged against the Queen to have been intended, for the French ambaffador relident three of his men taken, but I think in the end it shall prove nothing. Mr. Stafford who is ambassador for this Queen in France, is touched with it, his brother is taken here, always it has done this harm in our negociation that all this council would not move this Queen to meddle with the Queen of Scotland's blood, till this invention was found forth. I remit all other things to the inclosed. We minded to have fent to his majesty a discourse, which we have fet down of all our proceedings fince our hither coming, but we are furely advertized that the bearer is to be truffed by the way for our pacquets, fo that we defer it till our own coming; this I have put in a privy part beside the pacquet. We shall I think take leave on Fryday the 13th day, where we mind exactly to follow the rigour of our instructions, for it cannot stand with the king's honour that we fay less than the French ambassador, which was, le roy mon maistre ne peult moins faire que se resentir. So that about the 24th I think we shall, God willing, be at home except that some stay come which we look not for. Queen and the earl of Leicester has defired to speak with me. I refused fave in presence of my colleagues, by reason I see a determination which particular credit cannot help, and I crave no credit but for that cause. It will please your lordship retire the inclosed from his majesty and keep it. So after my service commended to yourself and bedfellow, 1 commit you to God. From London the 12th of Jan. 1586.

To the king's majesty, from fir Robert Melvil ".

It may please your majesty, since the direction of our former letters, we had audience, and her majesty appeared to take our overtures in good part in presence of her council; albeit no offers could take place with them, having

of fir A. Dick. Vol. A. fol. 181.

taken resolution to proceed with extremity, not the less it pleased her majesty to desire us to stay for two days on taking our leave, untill she had advised upon our propositions; since which time, her majesty is become more hard by some letters (as we are informed) has come from Scotland, making some hope to believe that your majesty takes not this matter to heart, as we know the contrary in effect, and had of before removed the like opinion out of her majefty's mind, which by finister information was credited, thir reports has hindered our commission, and abused this Queen, fearing in like manner we shall be stay. ed until answer come from Scotland by such person as they have intelligence of. And albeit that it will be well enough known to all men how heavily your majesty takes this proceeding to heart, the truth is, that they have by this occasion so persuaded the Queen, that it is like to hinder our negotiation. As also Alchinder (i. e. Alexander) Steward is to be directed in their party, by our knowledge, who has awantyt more of his credit, than I believe he may perform, and we wreat him to delift from this dealing, faying it does harm, and he is not meet for that purpose, remitting to your majesty's good discretion to take order herein as we shall be answerable to your majesty not to omit any point we have in charge, as the truth is, the master of Grhaye has behaved himself very uprightly and discreetly in this charge, and evil tayne with be divers in these parts who were of before his friends. We have been behalding to the menstrals who has born us best company, but has not been troubled with others. Wylzeme Kethe hath left nothing undone that he hath in charge. As for master Archibald he has promised at all times to do his dewoyr, wherein he shall find true report made to your majesty, craving pardon of your majesty that I have been so tedious, after I have kissed your majesty's hand I humbly take my leave. Praying God to grant your majesty many good days and happy, in whose protection I commit your majesty at London, the 20th of Jan. 1586.

SIR,

not i

To t

 \mathbf{P}_{LE} fince (majest incline leave , lord Le my lo show . refoluti always confere have n crave c has fou your m time ye difficult Written credit w clear th made c meaning proceed is able with yo

A. fol. 1

SIR.

e n y y

t

d

IS

11

28

y

)

1-

-

e

t

e

d

n

n

ľ

-

ALBEIT Master George has not been in commission he is not inferior in his service to any of us, as well by his good advice and diligent care he takes for the advancement of your service, wherein we have not been a little furthered.

To the king's majesty, from the master of Gray and Sir Robert Melvill ".

LEASE it your majesty in the last audience we had, fince our last advertisement by W. Murray, we find her majesty at the resuming our offers something mitigated, and inclined to confider more deeply of them, before we got our leave, at our reasoning, certain of the council, namely, my lord Leicester, sir Christopher Haton, my lord Hunsdon, and my lord Hawart being present in the chamber, gave little show of any great contentment to heare from her former resolution, now cassin in perplexitie what she should do. always we left her in that state, and since have daily pressed conference with the whole council, which to this hour we have not yet obtained. This day we have fent down to crave our leave. The greatest hinder which our negotiation has found hitherto is a persuasion they have here that either your majesty deals superficially in this matter, or that with time ye may be moved to digest it, which when with great difficulty we had expugnit, we find anew that certain letters written to them of late from Scotland has found fome place of credit with them in our contrare. So that refolving now to clear them of that doubt by a special message, they have made choice of Sir Alexander Stewart to try your highness's meaning in it, and to perfuade your majefty to like of their proceedings, where from no terror we can fay out unto him is able to divert him, he has given out that he has credit with your majesty, and that he doubts not to help this matter

Vol. III.

^{4.} fol. 180.

at your highness's hand. If he come there that errand, we think your majesty will not oversee the great disgrace that his attempts shall give us here, if he be not tane order with before that he be further heard, and if so be that any other be directed (as our intelligence gives us there shall) our humble suit is to your majesty, that it may please your highness to hear of us what we find here, and at what point we leave this matter with her majesty, before that they find accidence, the causes whereof remitting to our private letters. We commit your majesty for the present to God's eternal protection. From London this 21st of Jan. 1586.

N°. XXXVIII. (Vol. II. p. 360.)

Copy of a letter from the earls of Shrewsbury and Kent, &c. touching their proceedings with regard to the death of the Scottish Queen, to her majesty's council.

IT may please your honble good lordships to be advertised, that, on Saturday the 4th of this present, I Robert Beale came to the house of me the earl of Kent in the county of - to whom your lordships letter and message was delivered, and her majesty's commission shewn; whereupon I the earl forthwith fent precepts for the staying of such hues and crie as had troubled the country, requiring the officers to make stay of all such persons, as should bring any fuch warrants without names, as before had been done, and to bring them to the next justice of peace, to the intent that, upon their examination, the occasion and causes of such seditious bruites might be bolted out and known. It was also resolved that I the said earl of Kent fhould, on the Monday following, come to Lylford to Mr. Elmes, to be the nearer and readier to confer with my lord of Shrewsbury. Sonday at night, I Robert

Beal ing | Drue cove bein that him . the Thip' and his l the f prom the ! peace I con your requir borou tingd Warra peace nefda the n Whic Mond

The f

upon

letters

bury's

and of

to fir

Bruder

clock i

the ex

came !

betwee

the fu

ľ

3

e

ď,

ty

en

ch

18

en

to

nd.

nd:

nt

to

th

ri

Beale came to Fotheringay, where after the communicating the commission, &c. unto us sir Amice Pawlet and sir Drue Drury, by reason that sir A. Pawlet was but late recovered and not able to repair to the earl of Shrewsbury, being then at Orton, fix miles off; it was thought good that we fir Drue Drury and Robert Beale should go unto him, which we did on --- morning; and together with the delivery of her majefty's commission, and your lordship's letter imparted unto him what both the earl of Kent and we thought meet to be done in the cause, praying his lordship hither the day following, to confer with me the faid earl, concerning the fame; which his lordship And for the better colouring of the matter, I the faid earl of Shrewsbury fent to Mr. Beale, a justice of peace of the county of Huntingdon next adjoining, to whom I communicated that warrant, which Robert Beale had under your lordship's hands, for the staying of the hues and cries. requiring him to give notice thereof to the town of Peterborough, and especially unto the justices of peace of Huntingdonshire, and to cause the pursuers and bringers of such warrants to be stayed, and brought to the next justice of peace; and to bring us word to Fotheringay castle on Wednelday morning what he had done, and what he should in the mean time understand of the authors of such bruites. Which like order, I also sir Amias Pawlet had taken on Monday morning in this town, and other places adjoining. The same night, the sheriff of the county of Northampton upon the receit of your lordship's letter came to Arundel, and letters were fent to me the earl of Kent of the earl of Shrewfbury's intention and meeting here on Tuesday by noon; and other letters were also sent with their lordships affent to fir Edward Montague, fir Richard Knightly. Mr. Tho. Brudenell, &c. to be here on Wednesday by eight of the clock in the morning, at which time it was thought meet that the execution should be. So upon Tuesday, we the earls came hither, where the fheriff met us; and upon conference between us it was resolved, that the care for the lending for the furgeons, and other necessary provision should be com-

mirted unto him against the time. And we forthwith repaired unto her, and first in the presence of herself and her folks, to the intent that they might fee and report hereafter that The was not otherwise proceeded with than according to law, and the form of the statute made in the 27th year of her majesty's reign, it was thought convenient that her majesty's commission should be read unto her, and afterwards The was by fundry speeches willed to prepare herself against the next morning. She was also put in remembrance of her fault, the honourable manner of proceeding with her, and the necessity that was imposed upon her majesty to proceed to execution, for that otherwise it was found that they could not both stand together; and however, fithence the lord Buckhurft's his being here new conspiracys were attempted. and fo would be still; wherefore since she had now a good while fince warning, by the faid lord and Robert Beale, to think upon and prepare herself to die, we doubted not but that The was, before this, fettled, and therefore would accept this message in good part. And to the effect that no christian duty might be faid to be omitted, that might be for her comfort, and tend to the falvation both of her body and foul in the world to come, we offered unto her that if it would please her to confer with the bishop and dean of Peterborough, The might; which dean, we had, for that purpose, appointed to be lodged within one mile of that place. Hereto she replied, croffing herself in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, saying that she was ready to die in the catholic Roman faith, which her ancestors had professed, from which she would not be removed. And albeit we used many persuasions to the contrary, yet we prevailed nothing; and therefore, when she demanded the admittance of her prieft, we utterly denied that unto her. Hereupon, fhe demanded to understand what answer we had touching her former petition to her majesty, concerning her papers To the first of accounts, and the bestowing of her body. we had none other answer to make, but that we thought if they were not sent before, the same might be in Mr. Waade's custody, who was now in France, and seeing her papers coul but appo that there woul her i all c jesty' petiti Babin that eftfoc tough that the v her n ther, procu would the d the re The Th how in fure h been l accuse

> Upo commit of us of Drurie had be watch take or tion, fo as the

becom

could not any wife pleasure her majesty, we doubted not but that the same would be delivered unto such as she should appoint. For, for our own parts, we undoubtedly thought that her majesty would not make any profit of her things, and therefore (in our opinion) she might set down what she would have done, and the fame should be imparted unto her majesty, of whom both she and others might expect Touching her body, we knew not her maall courtefy. jesty's pleasure, and therefore could neither say that her petition should be denyed, or granted. For the practice of Babington, she utterly denied it, and would have inferred it, that her death was for her religion; whereunto it was eftfoons by us replied, that for many years she was not touched for religion, nor should have been now, but that this proceeding against her was for treason, in that the was culpable of that horrible conspiracy for destroying her majesty's person; which she again denied, adding further, that albeit she for herself forgave them that were the procurers of her death, yet she doubted not but that God would take vengeance thereof. And being charged with the depositions of Naue and Curle to prove it against her, the replied, that the accused none, but that hereafter when the shall be dead, and they remain alive, it shall be seen how indifferently she had been dealt with, and what meafure had been used unto her; and asked whether it had been heard before this, that fervants had been practifed to accuse thair mistress, and hereupon also required what was become of them, and where they remained.

l

0

t

t

1 ľ

1

d

d

n

,

d

e

ft

Upon our departure from her, for that it seemed by the commission, that the charge of her was in the disposition of us the earls, we required S. Amias Paulet and S. Drue Drurie, to receive, for that night, the charge, which they had before, and to cause the whole number of soldiers to watch that night, and that her folks should be put up, and take order that only four of them should be at the execution, remaining aloof of and guarded with certain persons so as they should not come near unto her, which were Melvil her steward, the physician, surgeon, and apothecary.

Wednesday morning, after that we the earls were repaired unto the castle, and the sheriff had prepared all things in the hall for the execution, he was commanded to go into her chamber, and to bring her down to the place where were present, we which have figned this letter, Mr. Henry Talbot, etq; fir Edward Montague, knt. his son and heir apparent, and William Montague his brother, fir Richard Knightly, knt. Mr. Thomas Brudenel, Mr. Beuill, Mr. Robert and John Wingesield, Mr. Forrest, and Rayner, Benjamin Piggot, Mr. Dean of Peterborough, and others.

At the stairfold, she paused to speak to Melvil in our hearing, which was to this effect, "Melvil, as thou halt been an honest servant to me, so I pray thee continue to my fon, and commend me unto him. I have not impugn'd his religion, nor the religion of others, but wish him well. And as I forgive all that have offended me in Scotland, for I would that he should also: and befeech God, that he would fend him his Holy Spirit, and illuminate him." Melvil's answer was, that he would so do, and at that instant he would befeech God to affist him with his Spirit. Then she demanded to speak with her priest, which was denied unto her, the rather for that she came with a superstitious pair of beads and a crucifix. She then defired to have her women to help her, and upon her earnest request, and faying that when other gentlewomen were executed, The had read in chronicles that they had women allowed unto them, it was permitted that she should have two named by herself, which were Mrs. Curle and Kennedy. After she came to the scaffold, first, in presence of them all, her majesty's commission was openly read; and afterwards Mr. Dean of Peterborough, according to a direction which he had received, the night before, from us the earls, would have made a godly admonition to her, to repent and dye well in the fear of God and charity to the world. But at the first entry, she utterly refused it, saying that she was catholic, and that it were a folly to move her, being fo refolutely minded, and that our prayers would little avail her. Whereupon, to the intent it might appear that we, and the whole affembly, had a christian defire to have was : Almi alfo, of hi kingo all h up fl Th this e and t and fough and Quee be m and a

confic

unto wards

her S

by the was general fine ding, tion, fcaffol and her refervant none not yi might as fen Thi

fervice

be em

have her die well, a godly prayer, conceiv'd by Mr. Dean, was read and pronounced by us all. "That it would please Almighty God to send her his Holy Spirit and grace, and also, if it were his will, to pardon all her offences, and of his mercy to receive her into his heavenly and everlasting kingdom, and finally to bless her majesty, and confound all her enemies; "whereof Mr. Dean, minding to repair up shortly, can shew your lordships a copy.

d

0

C

y

r

rt

n

er st

n

ď

0

e

at 25

1-0

,

d

0

m

r-

n

d

ut

e

d

to

This done, the pronounced a prayer upon her knees to this effect, " to befeech God to fend her his Holy Spirit, and that she trusted to receive her falvation in his blood, and of his grace to be received into his kingdom, befought God to forgive her enemies, as she forgave them; and to turn his wrath from this land, to blefs the Queen's majesty, that she might serve him. Likewise to be merciful to her fon, to have compassion of his church, and altho' she was not worthy to be heard, yet she had a confidence in his mercy, and prayed all the faints, to pray unto her Saviour to receive her." After this (turning towards her servants) she desired them to pray for her, that her Saviour would receive her. Then, upon petition made by the executioners, she pardoned them; and faid, she was glad that the end of all her forrows was fo near. Then the difliked the whining and weeping of her women, faying, that they rather ought to thank God for her resolution, and kissing them, willed them to depart from the scaffold, and farewell. And so resolutely kneeled down. and having a kercheff banded about her eyes, laid down her neck, whereupon the executioner proceeded. fervants were incontinently removed, and order taken that none should approach unto her corps, but that it should be embalmed by the furgeon appointed. And further her crosse, apparel, and other things are retained here, are not yielded unto the executioner for inconveniences that might follow, but he is remitted to be rewarded by fuch as fent him hither.

This hath been the manner of our dealings in this fervice, whereof we have thought good to advertise your.

lordships, as particularly as we could, for the time, and further have thought good to fignify unto your lordships besides, that for the avoiding of all sinister and slanderous reports that may be raised to the contrary, we have caused a note thereof to be conceived to the same effect in writing, which we the said lords have subscribed, with the hands of such other there the knights and gentlemen above named that were present at the action. And so beseching Almighty God long to bless her majesty with a most prosperous reign, and to confound all his, and her enemies, we take our leaves. From Fotheringay-Castle, the 8th of February 1586, in hast.

Your lordships at commandment.

N. B. This, as well as feveral other papers in this Appendix, is taken from a collection made by Mr. Crawfurd of Drumfoy, historiographer to Queen Anne, now in the library of the faculty of Advocates. Mr. Crawfurd's transcriber has omitted to mention the book in the Cott. Lib. where it is to be found.

N°. XXXIX. (Vol. II. p. 365.)

The objections against Mr. Davison, in the cause of the late Scottish Queen, must concern things done either, 1. Before her trial at Fotheringay.

2. During that session. 3. After the same ".

BEFORE her trial, he neither is, nor can be charged to have had any hand at all in the cause of the said Queen, or done any thing whatsoever concerning the same, directly or indirectly.

2. During that fession, he remained at court, where the only interest he had therein, was as her majesty's 64 Cott. Lib. Calig. C. I.

fecr impansy answ

it is what cause jesty other

fed 3. publiother
And

T

her nunto to the and o

furer majest should

2.

Fo

five or it up, same, in her 3. 7 comma fend cording fecretary, to receive the letters from the commissioners, impart them to her highness, and return them her answers.

nd

ps

us

ed

ithe

ve

h-

ne

e-

10 p-

n

0-

C

e

- 3. After the return thence, of the faid commissioners, it is well known to all her council,
- 1. That he never was at any deliberation or meeting whatsoever, in parliament, or council, concerning the cause of the said Queen, till the sending down of her majesty's warrant unto the commissioners, by the lords and others of her council.
- 2. That he was no party in figning the fentence, paffed against her.
- 3. That he never penned either the proclamation publishing the same, the warrant after her death, nor any other letter, or thing whatsoever concerning the same.

That the only thing which can be specially and truly imputed to him, is the carrying up the said warrant unto her majesty to be signed. She sending a great counsellor unto him, with her pleasure to that end, and carrying it to the great seal of England, by her own special direction and commandment.

For the better clearing of which truth, it is evident,

1. That the letter, being penned by the lord treafurer, was delivered by him unto Mr. Davison, with her majesty's own privity, to be ready for to sign, when she should be pleased to call for it.

2. That being in his hands, he retained it at the least five or fix weeks unpresented, nor once offering to carry it up, till she sent a great counsellor unto him for the same, and was sharply reproved therefor by a great peer, in her majesty's own presence.

3. That having figned it, she gave him an express commandment to carry it to the seal, and being sealed to send it immediately away unto the commissioners, according to the direction. Herself appointing the hall of Fotheringay for the place of execution, misliking the court-yard, in divers respects, and in conclusion absolutely forbad him to trouble her any further, or let her hear any more hereof, till it was done. She, for her part, having (as she said) performed all that, in law or reason, could be required of her.

4. Which directions notwithstanding, he kept the warrant sealed all that night, and the greatest part of the next day in his hands, brought it back with him to the court, acquainted her majesty withal, and finding her majesty resolved to proceed therein, according to her former directions, and yet desirous to carry the matter so, as she might throw the burthen from herself, he absolutely resolved to quit his hands thereof.

5. And hereupon went over unto the lord treasurer's chamber, together with Mr. vice chamberlain Hatton, and in his presence restored the same into the hands of the said lord treasurer, of whom he had before received it, who from henceforth kept it, till himself and the rest of the council sent it away.

Which, in substance and truth, is all the part and interest the said Davison had in this cause, whatsoever is, or may be pretended to the contrary.

Touching the fending down thereof unto the commiffioners, that it was the general act of her majesty's council (as is before mentioned) and not any private act of his, may appear by, therewith to the commissioners. 3. The testimonies of the lords and others to whom they were directed. As also, 4. of Mr. Beale, by whom they were fent. 5. The tenor of her majesty's first commission for their calling to the star-chamber for the same, and private appearance and submission afterward instead thereof, before the lord chancellor Bromley. 6. The confession of Mr. Attorney general in open court confirmed. 7. By the sentence itself upon record. 8. Besides a common act of council, containing an answer

to be traord dently

1.

being 2. fioner

and av

pronot it till

prefen majest

to the staying day in the lor

Wh Davisor to the fervice

Cal.

The Scottiff to be verbally delivered to the Scottish ambassador then remaining here, avowing and justifying the same.

Now where fome suppose him to have given some extraordinary furtherance thereunto, the contrary may evidently appear by,

1. His former absolute refusal to fign the band of affociation, being earnestly pressed thereunto by her majesty's self.

2. His excusing of himself from being used as a commissioner, in the examination of Babington and his complices, and avoiding the same by a journey to the Bath.

3. His being a mean to flay the commissioners from pronouncing of the sentence at Fotheringay, and deferring it till they should return to her majesty's presence.

4. His keeping the warrant in his hands fix weeks unpresented, without once offering to carry it up, till her majesty sent expressly for the same to sign.

5. His deferring to fend it away after it was fealed unto the commissioners, as he was specially commanded, staying it all that night, and the greatest part of the next day in his hands.

6. And finally, his restoring thereof into the hands of the lord treasurer, of whom he had before received the same.

Which are clear and evident proofs, that the faid-Davison did nothing in this cause whatsoever, contrary to the duty of the place he then held in her majesty's service.

Cal. C. q.

This feems to be an original. On the back is this title,

The innocency of Mr. Davison in the cause of the late Scottish Queen.

APPENDIX

TO THE

THIRD VOLUME.

Nº. I. (Vol. III. p. 80.)

Letter from @, to his majesty King James '.

MOST worthy prince, the depending dangers upon your affectionates have been fuch, as hath inforced filence in him, who is faithfully devoted to your person, and in due time of trial, will undergo all hazards of fortune, for the maintenance of the just regal rights, that, by the laws divine, of nature, and of nations, is invested in your royal person. Fall not then, most noble and renowned prince, from him, whose providence hath in many dangers preserved you, no doubt to be an instrument of his glory, and the good of his people. Some secrets, I find, have been revealed to your prejudice, which perfo in par ation corre abled of m thy n Christ to Mr faithfu have affure humbl dorfen token you re affection are a to be Conde love, good of to your traording person; doms, many to the sound fubalter justice. of man served whatever royal pand pre-

his glor

2. I

ī.]

From the Original. Bibl. Fac. Jur. Edin. A. T. 34. N°. 4. In the former editions, I printed this as a letter from Sir Robert Cecil, but am now fatisfied that I was miftaken in forming this opinion. See Sir D. Dalrymple's Rem. on the Hist. of Scot. p. 233. As the letter is curious, I republish it, though I cannot pretend to say to which of the King's numerous correspondents in England it should be ascribed.

which must proceed from some ambitious violent spirited person near your majesty in council and favour; no man in particular will I accuse, but I am sure it hath no foundation from any, with whom, for your fervice, I have held correspondence; otherwise, I had, long since, been disabled from performance of those duties, that the thoughts of my heart endeavoureth; being only known to this worthy nobleman bearer hereof, one noted in all parts of Christendom for his fidelity to your person and state, and to Mr. David Fowlis your most loyal servant, my first and faithful correspondent; and unto James Hudsone, whom I have found in all things that concern you, most secret and affured. It may, therefore, please your majesty, at the humble motion of , which jargon I desire to be the indorsement of your commands unto me, that, by some token of your favour, he may understand in what terms you regard his fidelity, fecrecy and fervice. My passionate affection to your person (not as you are a king, but as you are a good king, and have just title, after my sovereign, to be a great king) doth transport me to presumption. Condemn not, most noble prince, the motives of care and love, altho' mixed with defects in judgment.

1. I, therefore, first beseech your majesty, that for the good of those whom God, by divine Providence, hath destined to your charge, that you will be pleased to have an extraordinary care of all practicers or practices, against your person; for it is not to be doubted, but that in both kingdoms, either out of ambition, faction, or fear, there are many that desire to have their sovereign in minority, whereby the sovereignty and state might be swayed by partiality of subalternate persons, rather than by true rule of power and justice. Preserve your person, and fear not the practices of man upon the point of your right, which will be preserved and maintained against all assaults of competition whatever. Thus I leave the protection of your person, and royal posterity, to the Almighty God of Heaven, who bless and preserve you and all yours, in all regal happiness to his glory.

n.

C

n

1

e

n

1-

C

,

et

2. Next to the prefervation of your person, is the conversation and secret keeping of your councells, which, as I have said, are often betrayed and discovered, either out of pretended zeal in religion, turbulent faction, or base conception, the which your majesty is to regard with all circumspection, as a matter most dangerous to your person and state, and the only means to ruin and destroy all those that stand faithfully devoted to your majesty's service. Some particulars, and persons of this nature, I make no doubt have been discovered by the endeavours of this nobleman, the bearer hereof, of whom your majesty may be surther informed.

3. The third point considerable is that your majesty, by all means possible, secure yourself of the good affection of the French King and States, by the negociation of some faithful secret consident; the French naturally distasting the union of the British islands under one monarch. In Germany, I doubt not, but you have many allies and friends, but by reason of their remote state, they do not so much importe this affair; which must be guided by a quick and fudden motion.

4. When God, by whose Providence, the period of all persons and times is determined, shall call to his kingdom of glory her majesty (although I do assuredly hope that there will not be any question in competition, yet for that I hold it not fitting to give any minute entrance into a cause of for high a nature), I do humbly befeech your majesty to defign a fecret, faithful, and experienced confident fervant of yours, being of an approved fidelity and judgment, continually to be here resident, whose negociation, it were convenient your majesty should fortifie, with such secret trust and powers, as there may not need 14 days respite, to post for authority, in a cause, that cannot endure 10 hours respite, without varieties of danger. In the which it is to be confidered, that all fuch as pretend least good to your establishment, will not in public oppugn your title, but out of their cunning ambition will feek to gain time, by alledging their pretence of common good to the state, in propounding of good conditions for disburthening the commotive the profit the profit the motive venter veyor to the profits

court familie tion of will b repine being variety of the restrain most p plain d kingdo

The time por the hear prevent of themfel derogate princely

Your no way The diff base and attendar common weale, of divers hard laws, heavy impositions, corruptions, oppressions, &c. which is a main point to lead the popular, who are much disgusted with many particulars of this nature. It were therefore convenient, that these motives, out of your majesty's providence should be prevented, by your free offer in these points following, viz.

t

2

1

h

Ċ

t

T

Y

of

e

16

1-

s,

h

nd

all

m

at

at

ife

fty

int

n-

ere

ret

е,

10

1 it

to

e,

1e,

te,

the

1. That your majesty would be pleased to abolish purveyors and purveyance, being a matter infinitely offensive to the common people, and the whole kingdom, and not profitable to the prince.

2. That your majesty would be pleased to dissolve the court of wards, being the ruin of all the noble and ancient families of this realme, by base matches, and evil education of their children, by which no revenue of the crown will be defrayed.

3. The abrogating the multiplicity of penal laws, generally repined against by the subject, in regard of their uncertainty, being many times altered from their true meaning, by variety of interpretations.

4. That your majesty will be pleased to admit free outport of the native commodities of this kingdom, now often restrained by subalternate persons for private profit, being most prejudicial to the commerce of all merchants, and a plain destruction to the true industry and manufacture of all kingdoms, and against the profit of the crown.

These, being by your majesty's confidents in the point of time propounded, will assuredly confirm unto your majesty the hearts and affections of the whole kingdom, and absolutely prevent all infinuations and devices of designed patriots, that, out of pretext of common good, would seek to patronize themselves in popular opinion and power, and thereby to derogate from your majesty's bounty and free favour, by princely merit of your moderation, judgment and justice.

Your majesty's favour, thus granted to the subject, will no way impeach the profits of the crown but advance them. The disproportionable gain of some checquer officers, with the base and mercenary profits of the idle unnecessary clerks and attendants, will only suffer some detriment; but infinite will be the good unto the kingdom, which will confirm unto your majesty the universal love and affection of the people, and establish your renown in the highest esteem to all posterity.

The Lord preferve your majesty, and make you triumphant over all your enemies.

My care over his person, whose letters pass in this pacquet, and will die before he leave to be yours, shall be no less than of mine own life, and in like esteem I will hold all your faithful confidents, notwithstanding I will hold myself referved from being known unto any of them, in my particular devoted affections unto your majesty, only this extraordinary worthy man, whose associate I am in his misfortune, doth know my heart, and we both will pray for you, and if we live you shall find us together.

I beseech your majesty burn this letter, and the others; for altho' it be in an unusual hand, yet it may be discovered.

Your majesty's most devoted, and humble servant,

0.

N. E

mu

mu

affe

his efca of H on I ftore to F

Jame with Alençon Franc Allen, killin Alva, 208. Nethe Ambaffa

Vo

INDEX

I N D E X.

N. B. The Numeral Letters refer to the Volume, and the Figures to the Pages.

À

ADAMSON, Archbishop of St. Andrews, is excommunicated by the synod of Fife, ii. 324. He excommunicated his opponents, ib. is restored by the general affembly upon conditions, 325.

t

n

•

r

his mean submission to the general assembly, iii. 2. Albany, Alexander Duke of, cabals with his nobles against his brother K. James III. i. 58. is made prisoner, but escapes to France, ibid. concludes a treaty with Ed. IV. of England, 59. procures assistance to invade Scotland on mean conditions, ib. returns to Scotland, and is restored to favor, 60. cabals again, but is forced to fly to France, 61.

Duke of, made Regent during the minority of K. James V. i. 37. 64. after feveral unsuccessful struggles with the nobility, he is forced to retire to France, 65.

Alengon, Duke of, Q. Elizabeth long amuses the court of France by carrying on a treaty of marriage with him, ii. 257.

Allen, cardinal, published a book proving the lawfulness of killing excommunicated Princes, ii. 310.

Alva, Duke of, his intrigues in favor of Q. Mary, ii. 208. 212. 227. is recalled from his government of the Netherlands, 235.

Ambassadors, their office, i. 90.

Vol. III.

INDEX

dangerous distemper, i. 139. the motives of his opposition to the Q. Regent, 163. his great influence on the bench of Bishops and weight in Parliament, 169. go. verned the church with great moderation, 170. persecutes the Reformers, 171. is imprisoned for celebrating Mass, 310.

ruins Q. Mary's affairs by his imprudent conduct, ii. 118. is taken prisoner in Dumbarton Castle, and hanged, 198.

-the castle of, demolished by the French, i. 119. - the prior of, promotes a treaty between the Q. Regent and the Reformers, i. 183. is provoked to leave the court, 186. is one of the chief promoters of the reformation, 201. some account, and a character of him, 202. artful endeavours used to undermine him. ibid. presumption of his innocence of the designs charged on him, ibid. is fent by the convention to invite the Queen to Scotland, 258. is received by her with confidence and affection, 260. restrains the turbulent spirit of the people against popery, 275. is sent to restrain the licentious practices of the borderers, 281. executes his commission with vigor and prudence, ibid. a conspiracy against him discovered, 291. is created Earl of Mar, 293. becomes obnoxious to the Earl of Huntley, ib. See Mar and Murray.

Angus, Gilbert de Umfraville, Earl of, was the only man who afferted the independency of his country, i. 11.

who afferted the independency of his country, i. 11.

Douglas Earl of, affumes the Regency during the minority of K. James V. i. 38. 65. is unable to gain his affections, ibid. is attainted and flies into England, 66.

obtains leave to return into Scotland, ii. 278. furrenders himself to K. James VI. 288. he with several others seize the cattle of Stirling to oppose Arran, 292. they are forced to fly into England at the approach of the King with an army, 293. he is attainted and his estate forseited, 300.

is concerned in a plot in favor of Spain, iii. 7.

is fe burg to fi him

Q. H Anne, i. 31

a par

Archbis Scotl gives of al made ftroke

iii. 1.
Argyll,
monia
terest Queen
her tr

gent, as lieu 186. quarrel Mortor they re raife for him by

Forbes defeate Arifiocrac

moted

INDEX.

is seized and committed prisoner to the castle of Edinburgh, 8. escapes and slies to the mountains, 9. offers to submit to a trial, 13. sentence is pronounced against him, 14. he resuses to submit, 15.

Anjou, Duke of, a marriage proposed between him and

Q. Elizabeth, ii. 205.

Anne, a Princess of Denmark, married to K. James VI.

Her arrival in Scotland and coronation, iii. 1. heads a party that opposes the chancellor, II.

Archbishops, Bishops, Deans and Chapters revived in Scotland during the King's minority, ii. 222, 223, this gives great offence to many of the clergy, ibid. an act of affembly against these offices, 271, 272. Bishops made subject to presbyteries and affemblies, 324. a great stroke given to their authority, 370, 371.

- None of them present at the Queen's coronation

iii. I.

d

Į.

16

of 1,

ed

he

n-

rit

he

his 13.

lar

nan

the

gain 66.

fur-

eral

of

his

. 7.

Argyll, Earl of, is appointed to carry the crown matrimonial to the Dauphin of France, i. 169. uses his interest with the Reformers to make a treaty with the Queen Regent, 183. leaves her court in resentment of her treachery; 186.

refuses to accede to a treaty with Murray the Regent, ii. 161. is soon after forced to submit, 162. acts as lieutenant to the Queen after the Regent's murder, 186. is prevailed on to join the King's party, 202 quarrels with Athole, 240. confederates with him against Morton, the Regent, for their mutual defence, ibid. they remonstrate against him to the King, 243. they raise forces against him, 249. negociate a treaty with him by the mediation of Q. Elizabeth, 250. is promoted to the office of chancellor, 252.

The King's authority delegated to him and Lord Forbes against the popish Lords, iii. 18. his forces are defeated in an engagement with them, ibid. driftocracy, predominant in Scotland, i. 272.

INDEX.

Armada, Spanish, preparations for it, ii. 374, 375. it is defeated, 380.

pe

El

30

an

by

pre

En

dre

mu

du

cho

ma

fer

his foo

froi

for

ftop

app

Allemi

irre

the

folio

dref

Kin

chui

min

Mar

Affocia

Atbole

Allalli

Arun

Asby .

Artic

Arran, Earl, is appointed Regent during the minority of O. Mary, i. 99. his character, 100. confents to the schemes of England, which disgusts the public, 102. becomes suspicious of the Earl of Lenox, 106. is forced to renounce the friendship with England and declare for France, 107. and to perfecute the Reformers, 109. publicly abjures the doctrines of the Reformers, ibid. is contemned by one half and little trusted by the other part of the nation, 110. heads the partisans of France and defenders of popery, III. attempts in vain to feize the murderers of cardinal Beatoun, 117. is forced to make a truce with the conspirators, 118. his eldest son is conditionally excluded all right of fuccession, 120. his mean concession to the court of France, 128, 129. gets the title of Chatelherault, 129. is undermined by the Q. Dowager, 136, 137. proposals and arguments for his resignation, 138. he confents to it, 139, retracts by the influence of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, 140. is at last prevailed on and gets advantageous terms, 141. See Chatelberault.

eldest fon of the Duke of Chatelherault, joins in an affociation with the Reformers, i. 200. narrowly escapes intended ruin at the court of France, 201. is full of refertment against the French on that account, ibid. the Congregation solicit Q. Elizabeth to marry him, 250. his great imprudence with regard to Q. Mary, 283. discovers a conspiracy against the Queen's favorite, 290.

Morton, ibid.

late Capt. Stewart, gets that title and estate, ii. 266. is appointed to conduct Morton from Dumbarton to Edinburgh, ibid. his infamous marriage with the Countess of March, 269. his variance with Lenox, ibid. is frustrated in an attempt to rescue the King at Ruthven, 280. is confined prisoner to the castle of Stirling, ibid. regains his liberty and the King's regard, 286. resumes his power and arrogance, ibid. gets the Ruthven conspirators declared

is

of

the

beced

for

icly

ned

na-

of of

the

ded

lhe-

37-

con-

and

an apes

re-

the

his vers

by 266.

to

itess

fruf-

280.

ains

ner

ared

guilty of high treason, 289. is detested as author of a persecution against the clergy, 295. is gained over to Q. Elizabeth's interest, 299. gets several forseited estates, 301. his corruption and insolence, 307. is made chancellor and has unlimited power, ibid. his venality is exceeded by that of his wife, 308. his monstrous tyranny and oppression, 309. his power undermined by Wotton the English envoy, 320. is confined in the castle of St. Andrews, but soon recovers savor, 321. his interest sinks much, 323 is stripped of his honors and spoils, and reduced to his original station, ibid.

Articles, Lords of, their origin and business, i. 84. by whome chosen, 85, 86. the subsequent variations and political use made of this institution, 86, 87.

Arundel, Earl of, is appointed a commissioner to the conference at Westminster, ii. 150.

Asby, ambassador from Q. Elizabeth to Scotland, ii. 377. his great promises to King James, ibid. his promises are soon forgot, 381. he is ashamed and withdraws privately from Scotland, ibid.

Association, the frequency of it in Scotland, how accounted for, ii. 22. feveral instances of it in France, 22, 23. as stop put to it there and in Scotland, 23. several great menapprove of it, 23, 24.

prevailed greatly afterwards, iii. 2.

Allembly of the church of Scotland, the first but feeble and irregular, i. 257. another affembly, their demands from the convention, 283, 284. two other affemblies in vain folicit an augmentation of their revenues, 302. they address Q. Mary in high strains of complaints, 353.

an affembly proceeds at Glasgow notwithstanding the King's interdiction, ii. 272, 273.

two assemblies yield many of the privileges of the church to the King, iii. 38, 39. declare it lawful for ministers to sit in Parliament, 42. See Clergy.

Association, formed in defence of Q. Elizabeth against Q. Mary, ii. 303.

Atbole, Earl of, the occasion of his quarrel with the Earl of Argyll, ii. 240. joins with him in opposing Morton the Regent, ib dies soon after an entertainment at Morton's, 251. fuspicions of his being poisoned, 252.

INDEX

Aubigne, Lord de, second son of the Lord Lenox, arrives in Scotland from France, ii. 255. becomes soon a great favorite of K. James, ibid. high titles and posts bestowed on him, ibid. notes against him, Appendix, 319. See Lenox.

Austrian family, their origin and power, i. 90, 91.

]

Bahington, Anthony, fome account of him, ii. 324. the rife of his conspiracy against Q Elizabeth, 328, 329. the names and scheme of operations of his associates, 330. they are betrayed, seized and executed, 330, 331.

Bacon, Sir Nicholas, appointed one of the commissioners to the confederares at Westminster, ii. 150.

Baliol, John, his claim to the crown of Scotland, i. 10. is preferred by Ed. I. 12 foon forced by him to refign, ib.

Ballard, a trafficking prieft, folicits an invasion of England from Spain, ii 320. joins in a conspiracy to murder Q Elizabeth, 330. is discovered and taken into custody, 331.

and executed, ibid.

Barons, their jurisdiction very extensive, i. 22. the difference between the greater and lesser, whence, 81. three hundred of them remonstrate against the conduct of the Q Dowager, 157. the lesser admitted by their representatives in Parliament, ii. 373. petition of the lesser Barons to Parliament, Append. 194. See Nobles.

Basilicon Doron, a book published by King James VI.

strengthens his interest in England, iii. 44.

Beatoun, Cardinal, made use of by K. James V. to mortify the nobles, i. 70. 71. his pretensions to the Regency on the death of that Prince, 98. forges a testament of the late King, ib. his views how disappointed, ib. his character, 99. opposes the Earl of Arran, Regent, 102, 103 excites most of the nation against the English, 105. seizes

th Le de is

Bedfe wi

Lo in ibid

Black and por is o

Blacks mu Boeth

i. 5

Bolton Bonot Borden

Bothmon

prev

the (

INDEX.

s,

es

a-

ed

ee

he 29.

es,

I.

to 10.

ib.

and

ili-

31.

nce

red

ger,

Par-

lia-

VI.

tify

on late

ter,

ex-

izes

the young Queen and her mother, ib. cajols the Earl of Lenox, ib. obliges the Regent to renounce England and declare for France, 107. and to perfecute the Reformers, 109. engrosses the chief direction of affairs, 110. his double dealing with the Earl of Lenox resented, 111. is murdered, 116. his death fatal to the Catholics, 117. a vain attempt to revenge it, ibid. scandalous reports concerning him, 151.

Bedford, Earl of, comes as ambassador from Q. Elizabeth to witness the baptism of James VI. ii. 44. his instructions, 46. his letters to Sir W. Cecil. Appendix, 225. 232. 238.

Bellendon, Sir Lewis, justice clerk, K. James's resident at London, ii. 318. joins in promoting Q. Elizabeth's interest in Scotland, ibid. is sent with her envoy into that country, ibid.

Black, Mr. David, minister at St. Andrews, his ridiculous and seditious expressions in the pulpit, iii. 28. being supported by the clergy, he declines the civil jurisdiction, 29. is condemned by the privy council, 30. is sentenced by the King to reside beyond Spey, 31.

Blackadder, captain, and three others, executed for the murder of Darnly, ii. 95.

Boethius, Hector, his history of Scotland, some account of, Bolton Castle, Q. Mary confined a prisoner there, ii. 134. Bonot, a foreigner, made governor of Orkney, i. 155. Borderers, an attempt to restrain their licentious practices, i. 281.

Q. Mary visits them, ii. 34. a scuffle there, in which the English warden, &c. were made prisoners, 238. Borthwick, Lord, assists the Q. Regent in defending Leith, i. 219.

Bothwell, James Hepburn, Earl of, intercepts a fum of money from England to the Congregation, i. 218. favors the Queen Regent, but resides at his own house, 219. is by the Earl of Murray summoned to a public trial, 336. prevents it by leaving the kingdom, ibid. a sentence of outlawry against him prevented by the Queen, ibid. is permitted to return, 346.

escapes with her after the murder of Rizio, ii. 17. fome account of his former behaviour, 26, 27. commences a favorite of the Queen, 28. fhe reconciles him to several Lords, with whom he was at variance, 28, 29. he increases in favor with her, 3 t. circumstances concurring in this, ibid. he is wounded in attempting to seize one of the borderers, 34. the Queen's extraordinary regard for him on this occasion, ibid to fecure adherents he obtains a pardon for Morton and his affociates, 48. propofes the reftoration of the popifh ecclesiastical jurisdiction, to. his views in this, 51. is suspected the author of Darnly's murder, 58. is charged with it by Lenox, 59. but fill favored by the Queen, 61. appointed governor of Edinburgh Castle, 62. his trial is hurried on, ibid. remarkable partiality in his favor, 64. Lenox accuses him openly, ibid. comes to his trial with a great retinue, 65, is acquitted by a jury, 66. the trial univerfally censured, 67. challenges any that would accuse him, ibid. feveral acts of Parliament passed in his favor, 68. he procures an act in favor of the reformation, 69. p vails on feveral of the hobles to recommend him as a husband to the Queen, 73. feizes the Queen on a journey from Stirling, and carries her to Dunbar, 77, his view in this, 78. obtains a pardon under the great feal, ibid. procures a divorce from his wife, 79. carries the Queen to the castle of Edinburgh, 80. is created Duke of Orkney, 81. and married to the Queen, ibid. is not allowed the title of King, 82. he watches the Queen very closely, ibid. endeavours to get the Prince into his custody, 83; 84. is alarmed with an affociation of the nobles against the Queen and him, 85, 86. carries the Queen to the calle of Borth wick, 87. raifes forces against the confederate Lords, ibid. he marches against them, 88. proposes a single combat, $9 this how prevented, 90. takes his last farewell of the Queen and is forced to fly, ibid. fends for a calket of letters from Q Mary to him, 95. they are intercepted by

Bo

Bo.

I

Bri

Bru

ા h

the Earl of Morton, ibid. his miserable fate; 108, 109, reflections on his conduct, 110. copy of his divorce from Lady Jean Gordon, Appendix 243.

Bailrwell, Francis Stewart, created Earl of Bothwell, ii. 382.

is imprisoned for consulting witches, iii. 3, 4, escapes and attempts to break into the King's presence, 5, retires to the north, ibid. he and his adherents are attainted, 74 fails in an attempt to seize the King, ibid. is taken under protection of Q. Elizabeth, who solicits for him, 9, seizes the King's person, 11, forces him to dismiss the chancellor, and his other favorites, ibid. and to grant him a remission, ibid. his bold and insolent behaviour afterwards, 12, is encouraged by the English ambassador, 15, makes another attempt to come at the King, 16, is repulsed and obliged to fly to the north of England, 17, is abandoned by Elizabeth, and forced to fly into Spain and Italy, 21, remains in indigent obscurity, ib. and is never after reconciled to the King, ibid.

marriage of Q. Mary to the Earl of Bothwell, ii. 8 r.

THE REAL PROPERTY.

Bothwellhaugh. See Hamilton.

13

7.

es

ral

es.

S

or-

on

ar-

to-

his

y's

till

in-

ole

id.

ed

7.

of

an

on

he

ng,

18.

tle

nd

of id.

13

en th-

fid.

at,

of

by

English, i. 128. they consent to restore it and its dependencies to the French, 130.

Bowes, Envoy from Q. Elizabeth, accuses Lenox of disturbing the peace, ii. 259. is refused an audience, ibid. is fent to encourage the confpirators at Ruthven, 278.

fent to inquire about King James's correspondence with the Pope, iii. 46.

Boyd, Lord, his ambitious views in the time of K. James III. frustrated, i. 37.

Mary, ii. 202. joins the Ruthven conspirators, 2753

Brienne, Count de, comes as ambassador from France to witness the baptism of K. James VI. ii. 44.

Bruce, Robert, his claim to the crown of Scotland, i. 10. his grandson afferts his right, and vindicates the honor of his country, 12. he attempts to reduce the power of the nobles, 47, 48

INDEX:

Bruce, a prieft, employed by the King of Spain to feduce the Scotch nobles, ii. 382.

Mr. Robert, a presbyterian minister, performs the ceremony of the coronation of K. James's Queen, iii. r.

Edward, abbot of Kinloss, acquits himself with address and reputation as ambassador at the court of England, iii. 43.

Mr. Robert, a minister, his resolution in resusing to publish the King's account of Gowrie's conspiracy, iii. 68. is deprived and banished on that account, ibid. Buchanan, George, his history of Scotland, some account of, i. 5. remarks on his dialogue De Jure Regis, 188.

alone accuses Q. Mary of a criminal correspondence with Rizio, ii. 12. approved of assassination, 23. attends the Regent into England when called on to accuse Q. Mary, 138. was one of the preceptors of K. James VI. 241.

Cat

t

I

V

P

W

ha

de

ag

K.

Cecri e ro b

commended for his great genius, iii. 102.

Burleigh. See Cecil.

Boroughs, when first represented in Parliament, ii, 373.

(

Cais, John, a declaration of his in name of Q. Elizabeth to the Lords of Grange at Lethington, Appendix 308.

Caithness, Earl of, his protest at the trial of Bothwell for the murder of Darnly, ii. 67.

Calvin, the patron and restorer of presbyterian church-government, i. 255

Camden, some mistakes of his, ii. 45, 46. 75.

Canongate, near Edinburgh, a Parliament held there, ii. 199. Cardan, fome account of him, i. 139, 140, his remarkable cure of the Bishop of St. Andrews, ibid.

Carey, Sir George, fent ambassador from Q. Elizabeth to encourage the conspirators at Ruthven, ii. 278.

INDEX.

carey, Robert, sent by Q. Elizabeth to sooth K. James after the death of his mother, ii. 366. is not permitted to enter Scotland, ibid.

- was the first that brought K. James intelligence of the death of Q. Elizabeth, iii. 90.

Casket of letters from Q. Mary to Bothwell, feized by the Earl of Morton, ii. 95. her enemies avail themfelves much of them, ibid.

Cassis, Earl of, joins the King's party, ii. 202.

Castelnan, the French ambassador, is employed to procure the consent of his court to Queen Mary's marriage with Darnly, i. 328.

he endeavours so make up the differences between the Queen and him, ii. 30. his intercession in behalf of Q. Mary, 313.

Catherine of Medicis, assumes the government after the death of Francis II. her son, i. 252. her harsh treatment of Q. Mary, ibid. her views in behaving more friendly to her, 313, 314.

bends her whole endeavours to destroy the Protestants, ii. 206. her artful conduct with that view, ib. Cecil, his great capacity as a minister, i. 237. 262. is employed to negociate a peace with France, ibid. overreaches the French ambassador in the treaty of Edinburgh, ibid. a letter of his cited to show that Q. Elizabeth had no intention to intercept Q. Mary, in her return to Scotland, 271.

Westminster, ii. 150. is sent by Q. Elizabeth with proposals to Q. Mary, 191. has an interview with her, which excites Q. Elizabeth's jealousy, 235. is treated harfuly by Q. Elizabeth for consenting to Q. Mary's death , 365.

1

to

Sir Robert, son to the former, heads the party against Essex, iii. 72. his character, 73. his great affiduity, ibid. enters into a private correspondence with K. James, 79.

total and the man place the the

INDEX.

Celibacy of the popish clergy, a chief engine of their policy, i. 148. 178.

Charles V. Emperor, his great power, i. 90. and unlimited ambition, 91, 92. is checked by Francis I. 92.

K. of France makes a league with Q. Elizabeth, ii. 213, 214.

of Arran, Regent of Scotland, i. 129. his right of fuccession to the crown of Scotland maintained, 163. enters a protestation to save his right, 166, 167. joins the Reformers, in endeavouring to expel the French army, 196. joins in association with them, 200. is looked on as the head of the congregation, 201. His pusillanimity, 216. becomes obnoxious to Q. Mary, 282. deprived of his French pension, 313. is alarmed at the Earl of Lenox's return to Scotland, 322. an accommodation brought about by the Queen's influence, ibid. adheres to Murray in opposing the Queen's marriage, 348. is pardoned on his humble application, but forced to reside in France, 351.

his partifans grumble at Murray's being advanced to the Regency, ii. 113, 114. returns from France and heads the Queen's adherents, 159, is made her lieutenant-general, 160. His resolution wavering, the Regent commits him prisoner to the castle of Edinburgh, 161, is set at liberty by Kirkaldy, and joins the Queen's party, 184, is proclaimed traitor by Lenox the new Regent, 189, is reconciled to Morton the Regent, 230, articles of a treaty between them, ibid. His death 238. Church of Scotland, revolutions in it after the union of the crowns, iii. 99, 100. See Assembly, Clergy.

t

0

T

p p li

1

, a

th

th

th

ul

Church Lands annexed to the crown by Parliament, ii. 371. Class, the inflitution and nature of, i. 28, 29.

Clergy, popish, their great riches and power, i. 68. 145.

were made use of by K. James V. to suppress the nobles, 70. made a considerable body in Parliament, 146. their great influence over the laity, 147. they ingrossed learning, ibid. and held many of the chief employments, 148.

their power increased by celibacy, ibid. they seized the estates of the intestate, 149. and tried all matrimonial and testamentary causes, 150. become obnoxious to the laity, ibid. their great corruptions, whence, 151. those of Scotland particularly dissolute, ibid. their weak defence of their tenets, 152. try in vain to impose false miracles, 153. their impositic conduct to the Reformers, 172.

Clergy, reformed, try in vain to recover the revenues of the church, i. 258, 259, 260. procure a demolition of all relics of popery, 261. a new regulation concerning their revenues, 283—288. they are no gainers by it, 289. their stipends, what in those days, ibid. are offended at the moderation of their leaders, 310. occasion a tumult among the people, ibid. 311. more complaints of their poverty, 323.

,

ľ

S

V

e

are jealous of Q. Mary, ii. 49. the small allowances appointed to support them all, ibid. their application for payment of their stipends of little effect, 113. fresh complaints of the desiciency of the funds for their maintenance, 175. are put off with fair words and promises, ib. 176. archbishops, &c. introduced among them by Morton, 222. their grievances under his administration, 237. they approve of the Ruthven conspirators, 279. by favoring them they provoke the King, 290. severe laws made against them, 294, 295. they of Edinburgh sly into England, 295. as do several others that were most eminent, ibid. more vigorous measures against them, 301. they obtain no redress on the restoration of the exiled Lords, 323. represent their grievances to Parliament, 369. a maintenance provided for them by Parliament, 371, 372.

they prevail to get Presbyterian government established by law, iii. 5. their zeal against the Popish Lords, 12, 13, 23, their rash proceedings, 24, 25, they erect a standing Council of the Church, 26, vindicate one of their number who declined the civil jurisdiction, 28, 29, their standing Council ordered to leave Edinburgh, 30, this occasions a violent tumult there, 30, 31, 32, they use their utmost efforts to spirit the people, 34, are de-

DE

Cou

Crai

Cran

10

to ba

his

Crim

Croc ,

vai

der

Kir

gra

of !

pre

Cunin

of t

refu

prif

agai

Darnly

i. 31

pern

Curle,

Crow

Crick

W

ferted and fly to England, 35. their power greatly reduced, ibid. are prevailed on to give up many of their privileges, 38. are restored to a seat in parliament, 40. this violently opposed by many of them, 41. but carried in their general Assembly, 42. those entitled to this privilege are laid under many regulations and reftrictions, 49. they are brought under great subjection, ibid. the revolutions among them fince the Union of the Crowns, 99, 100.

Clinton, Lord, appointed a commissioner at the conference at Westminster, ii. 150.

Cockburn, of Ormiston, receives a supply of money from the English to the congregation, i. 218. is intercepted and robbed of it, ibid.

Coin in Scotland, fome account of, i. 211. 236.

Commissaries appointed to try causes in place of the Spiritual Court, i. 246.

they are deprived of all authority, ii. 50.

Confession of faith by the Reformers, consented to by Parliament, i. 246.

Congregation, the Protestants distinguished by that name, i. 179. their leaders enter into an affociation, 180. are involved in difficulties, 215. apply to Q. Elizabeth for affiftance, 216. money fent them by her, intercepted, 218. make a rash and desperate attempt on Leith, and are repulsed, 219. are no less unfortunate in a fecond skirmish, 219. are quite dispirited and retreat to Stirling, ibid. are joined by the body of the nobles, 220. their army dwindles away, 221. are animated by Knox, ibid. they apply again to Q. Elizabeth, 222. their parties harass the French, 227. are assisted by a fleet from England, 229. conclude a treaty at Berwick, with the D. of Norfolk, 230. the design and substance of this treaty, ibid. negociate a peace with France, 238. articles of the treaty, 240. they reap advantages from it, 241. See Reformation.

Covenant, national, framed in defence of the King and Government, ii. 378. the nature and reasonableness of it, 379. the progress of it since, ibid.

INDEX.

Courtefy of Scotland, what, i. 64.

Craig, a minister, boldly testifies against Q. Mary's marriage with Bothwell, ii. 81.

crawford, Capt. of Jordan Hill, furprises Dumbarton Castle, ii. 195, 196. the difficulties of that enterprise, ibid.

Earl of, one of the heads of the Spanish faction; ii. 377. 382. offers his service to the K. of Spain, ibid-joins in rebellion against the King, 385. is forced to submit to him, and imprisoned a short time, ibid.

Crichton, Regent during the minority of K. James II. his barbarous policy, i. 54.

a Jesuit, a plot against Q. Elizabeth discovered by his means, ii. 302.

Criminals, a remarkable instance of the difficulty of bringing them to justice, i. 20, 21.

Croc, du, the French ambassador, refused to countenance Q. Mary's marriage with Bothwell, ii. 81. attempts in vain a reconciliation between the Queen and the confederate Lords, 88, 89. mediates a truce between the King and Queen's party in Scotland, 214.

Crown matrimonial of Scotland, rights conveyed by the grant of, i. 164. is granted by Parliament to the Dauphin of France, 166. deputies appointed to carry it, but are prevented, 169.

is demanded by Darnley, ii. 9.

Cuningbam, Robert, appears at the trial of Bothwell in name of the Earl of Lenox, ii. 66. demands a delay, which is refused, ibid.

Curle, one of Q. Mary's fecretaries, is feized and carried prisoner to London, ii. 335. is produced an evidence against her, 344.

D.

Darnly, Henry, Lord, proposed as a husband to Q. Mary, i. 318. his right of succession considered, 319. is permitted to visit the court of Scotland, 325. arrives

there, and quickly gains the Queen's heart, 326. his character, 328. difgusts several of the nobles, particularly Murray, ibid. 329. cultivates a familiarity with David Rizio, is despised on that account, 330. grows intolerably insolent and haughty, 338. schemes to assalfment Murray, 340. a plot to seize and send him to England prevented by the Queen, ibid. evidences of this, 341, 342. his marriage with the Queen celebrated, 344 is honored with the title of King of Scotland, 345.

is implacable with respect to the exiled nobles, ii. 2. lose's the Queen's affection by his untoward behaviour, 8. demands the Crown matrimonial, 9. becomes suspicious of Rizio's ill offices with the Queen, ibid. his resolution to be avenged of him encouraged by the nobles, 11. articles agreed on between them for that purpose, 13. heads the conspirators who perpetrate the murder, 15. confines the Queen after it is committed, 16. prohibits the meeting of the Parliament, ibid. makes his escape with the Queen, 17. her hatred to him increases, 25. is neglected by her and treated with little respect by the nobles, 30. resolves to leave Scotland, 32. his wayward and capricious behaviour, 33. he writes the reasons of his conduct to the Queen, 34. his strange behaviour at the baptism of the Prince, 45. a false reason alledged for this consuted, 46. retires to his father at Glasgow, 48. falls sick there, 51. conjectures concerning his diftentper, ibid. is neglected by the Queen, 52. The afterwards vifits and expresses affection for him, 54. he is prevailed on by her to come to Edinburgh, 56. is lodged in a separate house, ibid. he is murdered there, 57. his character, ibid, a proclamation issued for discovering the murderers, 59. a remis inquiry made into it, 59. 67. Capt. Blackadder and three others executed on that account, 95. the confession of Morton the Regent at his death concerning the murder, 267.

of objections of the Court of England against his marriage with Q. Mary, App. 212.

David I. K. of Scotland, his profusion to the church, i. 145.

David

David Davil the tere ibid defin 364 vor late : Desse, the 1 128. Discipli i. 25 States frustr

Douglas
they a dered
it, 55

in mak undergibid. is him to 358.

fupport drive of the Kin to affift 231. wh

Drury,

ii. 305.

Vol.

David II. troubles during his minority, i. 35.

Davison, sent into Scotland by Q. Elizabeth, as a spy on the French ambassador, ii. 282. is sent to gain Arran's interest to Q. Elizabeth, 299. this he soon accomplishes, ibid. brings the warrant for Q. Mary's death at Q. Elizabeth's desire, 354. is charged by her with disobeying her orders, 364. is imprisoned, tried, and fined, and loses all favor, 365. objections against him in the cause of the late Scottish Queen, App. 376.

Desse, Monsieur, is sent with a supply of forces to assist the French against the English in Scotland, i. 127, 128. his fuccess there, ibid.

Discipline in the church, the first book of, composed, i. 258. why objected against in a convention of the States, ibid.

another attempt in favor of Church-discipline frustrated, ii. 270.

Douglas, the power and property of that family, i. 35. they aspire to independency, 36. Will. Earl of, murdered by K. James II. 54. his son endeavours to resent it, 55. is forced to sly into England, ibid.

--- William, Q. Mary committed a prisoner to his castle of Lochleven, ii. 94.

George, brother to the above, affifts the Queen in making her escape, ii. 114, 115.

archibald, one of Darnly's murderers, ii. 327. undergoes a mock trial for that crime and is acquitted, ibid. is fent ambassador to England, ibid. letter from him to the Q. of Scotts, Appendix, 347. to the King, 358.

Drury, Sir William, enters Scotland with an army to support the King's party, ii. 186. they join him and drive off the Queen's, ibid, he procures a truce between the King and Queen's parties, 214. comes with forces to assist Morton in besieging the castle of Edinburgh, 231. which is forced to surrender 232.

Sir Drue, is appointed one of Q. Mary's keepers

ü. 305.

VOL. III.

I N DI E X.

Dudley, Lord Robert, recommended by Q. Elizabeth as a husband to Q. Mary, i. 314. why a favorite of Q. Elizabeth's, ibid. is highly promoted by her, 315. his fituation extremely delicate, 316. becomes suspicious of Cecil, 317.

Dumbarton Castle, surprised and taken in the King's name by the Regent, ii. 195 - 197.

Dury, a minister of Edinburgh, banished from his charge by K. James for his free invectives against the courtiers, ii. 273. after being restored, he is driven from it a second time for approving the Raid of Ruthven, 290.

E first in a convention to the Edinburgh, is taken and burnt by the English, i. 112.

a great fray there between the French and Scots, 132, 133. is seized by the Reformers, 190. its inhabitants are terribly alarmed by the French, 218. a treaty there with the French and English, 238, 239. a loan demanded of it by Q. Mary, 352. which is granted for the superiority of Leith, ibid.

the treaty of, insisted on by Q. Elizabeth, ii. 46, 47. is possessed by the Queen's party, 184. and fortisted by them, 199. the City and Castle hold out against the King's forces, 212. are reduced to great straits by famine, 213. are relieved by a truce, 214. the citizens take up arms to promote the King's marriage, 386.

they rife again and infult the King and his ministers on the murder of the Earl of Murray, iii. 4, 5. assist the King against Huntly, 16. a violent tumult there on account of the Clergy, 30. 33. they are severely punished for it by the King, 34. 37. their ministers return to their charges, 38, 39. divided into parishes, and number of ministers increased, 39. they decline publishing the account of Gowrie's conspiracy, 67. all

Edward
Scotle
11. It
his wa
Eglinton
ii. 20
Elizabeta
i. 169
is fpan
them

matter

her to affistan

her rig

and Ma

for the

Scotland clines, 262, 26 exceffive her difficult, ib in her parties by Q. I her into VII. ibid 301. The to Q. Ma

authority

314. the

vorites ,

marriage .

Darnly, cerning 1

except one, who is banished, are persuaded by the King to do it, 68.

Edward I. of England, destroyed the public archives of Scotland, i. 4. is made umpire between Bruce and Baliol, 11. his art to acquire the superiority of Scotland, ibid. his wars with the Scots under Robert Bruce, 12, 13. 47. Eglinton, Earl of, is prevailed on to join the King's party, ii. 202.

Elizabeth, her peaceable accession to the Crown of England, i. 169. supports the congregation in Scotland, 216. is sparing in her supplies, 217. resolves to support them on a fecond application, 222. her good conduct in matters of importance, 223. motives that determined her to affift them, 225, 226. her deliberate and resolute conduct, 228, 229. sends a strong fleet to their affiftance, 229. concludes a treaty with them, 230. her right to the Crown of England afferted by Francis and Mary, in France, 239, obtains advantageous terms for the Scots, ibid. is folicited by the Parliament of Scotland to marry the Earl of Arran, 250. this she declines, 251. the feeds of her discontent with Q. Mary, 262, 263. her jealoufy of the succession, 264. 266. her excessive vanity and jealousy of Mary's beauty, 267, 268. her dissimulation to her, 269. refuses her a safe conduct, ib. evidences that she had no intention to molest Mary in her passage to Scotland, 271. sends to congratulate her arrival in Scotland, 277. refuses a concession made by Q. Mary, 278. her jealousy of her right betrayed her into mean actions, 279. her resemblance to Hen. VII. ibid. a personal interview with Q. Mary proposed, 301. She artfully declines it, 302. her views in regard to Q. Mary's marriage, 306, 307. assumes a disagreeable authority, ibid. names one for a husband to Q. Mary, 314. the different qualifications of her ministers and favorites, 315. dissembles with Q. Mary about her marriage, 315. 317. and likewise with regard to L. Darnly, 320. affronts Q Mary by her infinuation concerning Lenox, ib. is perplexed about the marriage of the Scottish Queen, 324, 325. permits Darnly to visit the court of Scotland, 325. affects to declare against Q. Mary's marriage to him, 332. 333. her reasons for this conduct, 333. 334. her great dissimulation in that affair, 339. her harsh and deceitful behaviour to Murray and his affociates who had fled to her, 350.

Elizabeth, is struck at hearing of the birth of James VI. ii. 29. confents to stand godmother to him, ibid. the Parliament address her to settle the succession, 37. this greatly embarrasses her, 38, 39. The fooths and gains her Parliament, 40. endeavours to accommodate her differences with Mary, 46. writes to delay the trial of Damly's murderers, 65. interposes in her behalf when a prisoner, 97. her ambassador is refused access to Q. Mary, 99. she offers affistance to the other nobles, 100. her deliberations concerning the disposal of Q. Mary on her arrival in England, 123, 124. resolves to detain her there, 125. her motives to this conduct, 126. fends her letters of condolence, and gives orders to watch her conduct, 127, 128. The gladly accepts the office of umpire between her and her subjects, 128, 129. receives a very pressing letter from Q. Mary, 131. her precautions against her, 132. appoints commissioners to hear Q. Mary and her accusers, 138 her important fituation on that occasion, ib. her views in this affair, 140, 141. receives the Regent's demands, 145. 16-moves the conference to Westminster, 147. her mean artifices to get the evidence of Q. Mary's guilt from the Regent, 154. treats her with greater rigor, 155. writes a harsh letter to Q. Mary, 166. she dismisses the Regent without approving or condemning him, 157. but fecretly supports his party, 158. makes proposals to the Regent in her favor, 162. Norfolk's project concealed from her, 166. discovers and defeats a rebellion in Q. Mary's favor, 171, 172. resolves to deliver her up to the Regent, 176. her great concern at his death, 181. continues to encourage factions in Scotland, 182, 183. her political conduct with regard to Lenox, king part prop her ib. the fione der betw agair Fran twee jealo ciate her estate and behal

187

297. 298. and with against 303, endan

him,

ven,

for he the plorm and to ces he and p conclubing to mulati

187 - 189. is excommunicated, and deprived of her kingdom, &c. by the Pope, 188. supports the King's party in Scotland, and names Lenox to be Regent, 189. proposes a treaty of accommodation between Q. Mary and her subjects, 190. procures a cessation of hostilities. ib. sends proposals to Q. Mary, 191. her artifices in the conduct of this affair, 192. appoints commissioners to frame a treaty, 193. finds a pretence to render their meeting fruitless, 195. a marriage proposed between her and the D. of Anjou, 205. declares openly against the Queen's party, 211. concludes a treaty with France, 213. her motives for negociating a peace between the two parties in Scotland, 226, 227. is jealous of Cecil's interview with Q. Mary, 235. negociates a treaty between Morton and his adversaries, 250. her answer to K. James's demand of a possession of an estate in England, 251. a marriage between het and the D. of Alençon proposed, 254. interposes in behalf of Morton, 259. her measures in order to save him, 262, 263. countenances the conspirators at Ruthven, 278. is alarmed at a conspiracy against her, 296, 297. the defigns of Q. Mary's adherents against her, 298. endeavours to recover her interest in Scotland, and gains Arran to her interest, 299. amuses Q. Mary with a fruitless negociation, 302. a new conspiracy against her, ibid. an affociation formed for her defence, 303, 304. her suspicions of Q. Mary, ibid. her life endangered by a conspiracy, 310. this how discovered and prevented, 311. occasions an extraordinary statute for her preservation, ib. is in a dangerous situation from the progress of the holy league 316. endeavours to form a confederacy of the Protestant Princes, 317. and to proceed with rigor against Q. Mary, 318. advances her interest in Scotland, and proposes a league with it, 319. settles a pension upon K. James, ibid. concludes a treaty with Scotland, 325 account of Babington's conspiracy against her, 328 - 331. her dissimulation after Q Mary's conviction, 346, 347. her

S

1-

n

INDEX

ദ

answer to K. James's intercession for her, 350. her farther dissimulation and anxiety, 352. figns the warrant for her execution, 354. her speech to Davison on that occasion, ib. affects to lament Q. Mary's death, 363. several marks of her artifice in that affair, 364, 365. she endeavours to sooth K. James, 365. provocations given by her to Spain, 374, 375. prepares to meet its resentment, 376, 377. endeavours to secure Scotland, ibid. tries to prevent K. James's marriage, 385.

1

1

t

a

Ente

Epil

i.

th

Erro

pe

38

by 13.

the part

is CI

of K

com

turn

247.

betw

for this cl

73. 1

of Lo

ibid.

E neva

Effex,

Erskin

Eng

Elizabeth, folicits him to treat conspirators against him with rigor, iii. 9. evades the decision of K. James's right of succession to the Crown of England, 43, 44. is disgusted at several of his proceedings, 45, 46. discovers his correspondence with the Pope, ibid. fresh grounds of her suspicion, 72. her conduct with regard to the Earl of Essex, 78. her irresolution concerning his death, and great concern after it, ibid. receives ambassadors from K. James with regard, and increases his subsidy, 79. her last illness, 83. conjectures concerning the causes of her melancholy, 83—86. her death, 86. and character, 87. declared the K. of Scots her successor, 89. some of her letters, Appendix, 199. 227. 241, 242. 250. 264. 266. 282. 303.

Elphing fron, fecretary to K. James VI. deceives him into a correspondence with the Pope, iii. 46. is tried and found guilty of high treason, and pardoned on the Queen's intercession, ibid.

England, the English seize and detain King James I. of Scotland long a prisoner, i. 35. the nobles there humbled, 39. had early two houses of Parliament, 82. they invade Scotland, 112. their depredations there, 113, 114. a peace between England, France, and Scotland, 114. invade Scotland again, 121. gain a great victory, 122, 123. it proves of little advantage to them, 125. they force the Scots into a closer union with France, 126. conclude a peace, 130. an English sleet arrives in Scotland to affish the congregation, 228. a peace concluded between them, 229, 230. they enter Scotland and besiege the French in Leith, 230. are several times repulsed, 232. causes of their bad fuccess, 233. articles of a treaty of peace, 241. they quit Scotland, 242. reflections on the right of succes-fion to their Crown, 264-267.

England, the Parliament favors Q. Mary's right of fuccession, iii. 37. a league between England and France, 213. between England and Scotland, 325. the national covenant adopted in England, 379.

Entails, with what view introduced, i. 23, 24.

Episcopul government in the Church, some account of it, i. 254. an attempt to revive it, ii. 222. it is abolished by the Affembly, 271.

- jurisdiction abolished, iii. 5. See Archbishops.

Errol, Earl of, one of the heads of the Spanish faction, ii. 377. his offers of fervice to the K. of Spain, 382. appears in rebellion, 384. is forced to fubmit to the King, 385. imprisoned for a short time, ibid.

- joins in another conspiracy, iii. 7. is summoned by the King to furrender, 9. offers to fubmit to a trial,

13. sentence pronounced against him, 14.

Erskine of Dun, is employed by the Queen Regent to deceive the Protestants, i. 180. his resentment of this usage, ibid.

- Lord, governor of Edinburgh Castle, acts a neutral part between the Queen Regent and the congregation, i. 220. receives the Queen Regent into the Castle, 232.

is created Earl of Mar, 297. See Mar.

- Alexander has the chief direction of the education of K. James VI. ii. 241. admits fome of the nobles to make complaints to him against Morton the Regent, 243. is turned out of Stirling Castle by his nephew the Earl of Mar, Esneval, the French Envoy, endeavours to obstruct a treaty.

between England and Scotland, ii. 325.

Effex, Earl of, fet up by the English Papists as a candidate for the Crown, iii. 20. heads a party in England, 72. his character, ibid. is greatly distinguished by the Queen, 73. favors the K. of Scots, ibid. obtains the offices of Lord Lieutenant and Commander in Chief in Ireland, ibid. is unfuccefsful in that expedition, ibid. receives a harsh letter from the Queen, 74. returns to England and is confined, ibid. is tried and censured, ibid. endeavours to spirit up King James, 75. his rash and frantic conduct, 76. is again taken into custody, 77. his death, 78. his son and associates are restored to their honors after the accession of K. James, ibid.

INDEX.

Europe, the state of, at the beginning of the sixteenth century, i. 87.

Excommunication, a terrible engine of the Popish Clergy,

F

Felton, an Englishman, fixes the Pope's excommunication of Q. Elizabeth on the gates of the Bishop of London's palace, ii. 188.

Fenelon, M. de la Motte, sent by the French King to interpose for K. James when confined by the Ruthven conspirators, ii. 282. is forced to return without success, ibid.

Feudal Government, its origin, and aristocratical genius, i. 15, 16, 17, 18. causes which limited the power of feudal Monarchs, 17. feudal vasials liable to sew taxes, 18. a remarkable instance of the feebleness of seudal government, 21, 22. the most perfect idea of the seudal system, how attained, 45. state of it in England, 80—82. and in Scotland, 78, 79, 80.

Fife, a populous and powerful country, much devoted to the congregation, i. 227. is destroyed and plundered by the French, ibid.

the fynod of, excommunicates the Archbishop of St. Andrew's for contumacy, ii. 324.

they excommunicate the Popish Lords, iii. 13.

Flowden, the battle of, i. 64.

Forbes, Lord, with the Earl of Argyle, is fent against the Popish Lords, iii. 18. are defeated by them, ibid. Fordun, John de, his history of Scotland when wrote, i. 4.

Card great

For!

Fot b

de

Sc

ca

the

the

ibi

Sc.

pec

cor

mu

are

the

are

232

con

237

Sco

mea

ed,

Darr

land

les V

Franci

Fran

Forster, Sir John, warden of the English borders, a scuffle between him and the Scots, ii. 320.

Fotheringay Castle, Q. Mary's imprisonment, trial, and death there, ii. 335-360.

France, the consequences of the subversion of the feudal government there, i. 88. a body of French arrive in Scotland to Support the Catholics, 119. they reduce the castle of St. Andrew's, ibid. another party of them arrive there, 127, 128. conclude a peace with England, 130. their transactions there, 131. their politic conduct, ibid. 132. they leave Scotland, ibid. their artifices in a treaty of marriage between the Dauphin and the Q. of Scots, 162, 163. the Protestants endeavour to expel the French army out of Scotland, 195. another party of them arrive there and fortify Leith, 204. they exasperate the people by their infolence, ibid. they are fent against the congregation, 226. they destroy and plunder Fife, and are much haraffed by parties of the congregation, 227, 228. are greatly alarmed by the arrival of the English fleet, 228. they return to Leith greatly harassed and exhausted, 229. are besieged there by the English and the congregation, 232. they gain several advantages, 234. their motives for concluding a peace, 236. negociations for that purpose, 237, 238. articles of the treaty, 239, 240. they leave Scotland, 242. the French advise Q. Mary to moderate measures, 260. their proposals by an ambassador rejected, ibid. they agree to Q. Mary's marriage with Lord Darnly, 328.

the licentiousness of their morals, ii. 55.

, King of, a copy of his directions fent to Scotland, App. 322.

Francis I. gives a check to the ambitious projects of Charles V. i. 92. his fidelity to the Scots, 114. his death, 119.

II. comes to the crown of France, i. 199. his character, ibid. 251. is guided by the Duke of Guise and Cardinal of Lorrain, ibid. he treats the Protestants with great rigor, 236. his death, 251. Giffords, Doctor and Gilbert; their notion concerning the lawfulness of killing heretical excommunicated Princes, ii. 328. they join in a conspiracy to kill Q. Elizabeth, ib. Gilbert being gained by Walsingham betrays his associates, 330, 331. is employed to carry on foreign correspondence with Q. Mary, 332, 333.

Glamis, Lady, is condemned to be burnt for witchcraft, i. 70.

Lord, chancellor, intimates the King's order to Morton to furrender the Regency, ii. 244. is killed in a rencounter at Stirling, 246.

the tutor of, joins the conspirators of Ruthven, ii. 275. his bold speech to K. James, 276. he, with the other conspirators, seize the Castle of Stirling and erect their standard, 292. he is attainted, and his estate forfeited, 300.

Glasgow, Bishop of, a note of his concerning the Queen of Scotland's dowry, Appendix 313.

Glencairn, Earl of, joins the Ruthven conspirators, il. 275.

Glenlivat, the battle of, iii. 19.

Gordon, Sir John, a scusse in the streets of Edinburgh between him and Lord Ogilvy, i. 294. being confined for it, he makes his escape, 295. when ordered by the Queen to surrender himself, he takes up arms against her, 296. is deseated, and together with his brother, made prisoner, 299. he is beheaded and his brother pardoned, ibid.

Lord, fet at liberty, i. 346.

Sir Adam, exerts himself for the Queen's interest in the north, ii. 211. his character and good conduct a's a foldier, 214, 215.

Gowrie, Earl of, joins in a conspiracy to seize the King at Ruthven, ii. 275. is visited and pardoned by the King after his escape, 285. becomes suspected, and is ordered for France, 292. delays his voyage, and is taken into custody, ibid. he is tried and executed, 293.

Gra

G

E K

> in fo gra

iii. 36 Guise

30 is a driv

Haddis is re Hamili

ceed See

Gowrie, John and Alexander, sons of the above, their character and conspiracy, iii. 50. the surprising circumstances of that remarkable transaction, 51-56. several different conjectures concerning it, 56-68. their dead bodies brought into Parliament and condemned, 68. their estates and honors forfeited, and name abolished for ever, ibid. different accounts of this affair published, but not satisfactory, 69-71. See Ruthven.

Graham, Sir David, of Fintry, accused of a conspiracy with the popish Lords in favor of Spain, iii. 8. is convicted and beheaded, 9.

Gray, master of, some account of him, ii. 309. he becomes a favorite of K. James VI. ibid. is gained to Q. Elizabeth's interest, ib. betrays Q. Mary, 307. persuades K. James to write a harsh and undutiful letter to her, 314 joins with others in promoting Q. Elizabeth's interest in Scotland, 318. his treachery when sent to intercede for Q. Mary, 352. his baseness discovered, he is difgraced, 368. his vain attempt against secretary Maitland, 369.

acts in Italy as a spy from the court of England, iii. 45. a memorial of his for his Majesty, Appendix, 361-369. to the fecretary of state, 366.

Guise, Duke of, his violent counsels with regard to the Scots, i. 198, 199. is murdered at the siege of Orleans, 305.

his intrigues against Q. Elizabeth, ii. 297, 298. is a principal promoter of the holy league, 316. 375. drives the French King out of his capital, ibid.

H

Haddingtown, seized and fortified by the English, i. 126. is relieved by the French, 128.

Hamilton, the rife of that family, i. 37. arbitrary proceedings of Morton the Regent against it, ii. 252, 253. See Chatelberault.

Hamilton, of Bothwelhaugh, taken prisoner at the battle of Langside, ii. 133. is tried and condemned for rebellion, ibid. obtains a pardon from Murray the Regent, by the intercession of Knox, ibid. an account of his murdering Murray, 176—178. makes his escape, 178. is received in triumph at Hamilton, 181.

Mr. Patrick, the first who suffered in Scotland for

I

S

b

th

01 k

of

to

How

Hunj

Hun

Ar

op

Wi

the

his

his

in

aga

ope

29 fev

ibidi

Hod,

Hom

Hic

Hig.

the Protestant religion, i. 170.

Hartford, Earl of, invades Scotland with an English army, i. 112. burns Edinburgh and Leith, ibid. is made Duke of Somerset, and protector of England, 121. See Somerset. Hatton, vice-chamberlain of England, the argument by which he prevailed on Q. Mary to plead at her trial, ii.

Henry II. of France, fends forces to affift the Scots, i. 119. a marriage proposed between his son the Dauphin and the young Q. of Scots, 127, 128. excites the Scots to invade England, 157. his infamous imposition on Q. Mary in the treaty of marriage, 162, 163. perfuades his son and Q. Mary to assume the titles of King and Queen of England, 175. his death, 197.

crown of France, ii. 315. enters into a private negociation with Q. Elizabeth, 318. interposes feebly in behalf of Q. Mary, 347, 348.

VIII. of England, by his fysten of reformation becomes formidable both to Papists and Protestants, i. 71 proposes an interview with King James V. ib. is disappointed by him and declares war against Scotland, 72, 73. invades it, but is forced to retreat, 74. his importance, as to the balance of power in Europe, 93. his influence in Scotland how obtained, 95. his schemes with regard to it on the death of James V. 100. were ill-conducted by himself, and odious to the Scots, 101. his treacherous seizure of Scots ships that took shelter in his ports, 104. attempts to gain the Regency by great promises, 106. invades Scotland, 112. this being ill-conducted turns to no account, ibid. receives and rewards the Earl of Lenox. 113. encourages the murderers of Cardinal Beatoun, 118. his death and character, ibid. inconfiftent conduct, 174. excluded the Scotch line by his testament, ib.

Herries, Lord, joins Chatelherault in opposing the Regent, ii. 168. comes to a treaty with him, ibid. he and the Duke are committed prisoners to the castle of Edinburgh, 169. intimates the King's order to Morton to resign the Regency, 244. account of his behaviour in Parliament, Appendix, 180. a letter from him to Lord Scroop and Sir F. Knollis. 275.

Hickford, fecretary to the Duke of Norfolk, betrays him by discovering his intrigues with Q. Mary ii. 208, 209.

Highlands and Isles, an attempt to civilize them by King James VI. iii. 81. regulations for that purpose, ibid. three towns endued with the privileges of royal boroughs ordered to be built there, 82.

Hodgson, a priest of Rheims, maintained the lawfulness of killing heretical excommunicated Princes, ii. 328.

Home, Alexander Lord, thwarts the measures of the Duke of Albany, Regent, i. 37.

Lord, fent by K. James VI. with a fecret embassy to the Pope, iii. 48.

Howard. See Norfolk.

Hunsdon, Lord, governor of Berwick, his interview with Arran, ii. 299, 300.

Huntly, Earl, though a catholic, joins the reformers in opposing the French army, i. 196 assists them only with fair promises, 219. his further concurrence with them, 234. some account of that samily, 292, 293. his enmity against the young Queen's ministers, ibid. his resentment inslamed by an accident, 294. appears in an open rebellion against the Queen, 297. his plot against her ministers disappointed, ibid. breaks out into open rebellion, 298. trodden to death in a battle, 299. his samily prosecuted with the utmost rigor, 300. several anecdotes and conjectures concerning his plot, ibid. 301. is attainted by Parliament, 309.

Huntly, the attainder repealed, and the family restored to

n

tl

n

in

th

ać

w

for kir

hin

by

refl

Ch

of

pre

cro

gen cati of t tach

poli is b

275

and

diffe

to S nox's

the I

his e

them a par

by hi

rators zabet

Jam

estate and honors, ii. 68.

1. vich a teoret brabe

his attachment to Bothwell, ii. 63. 73. refuses to fubmit to the Regent, 161. is forced to do it, 162. acts as lieutenant to the Queen after the Regent's murder, 186. is proclaimed a traitor by Lenox the new Regent, 180, receives some money and promises of assistance from Spain, 190, agrees to a treaty with Morton the Regent, 230. is one of the heads of the Spanish faction, 377. engages to the Prince of Parma to serve the King of Spain, 382. is imprisoned for a short time, . 384. erects a standard of rebellion, ibid. but forced to Submit to the King, 385. is again imprisoned, ibid. is foon fet at liberty, ibid.

receives a commission from the King, iii. 4. his barbarous murder of the Earl of Murray, ibid. is fummoned to furrender to justice, 5. slies to the mountains, 9. offers to submit to a trial, 13. sentence pronounced against him, 14. refuses to submit, 15. makes another desperate attempt, but is forced to fly, 17, 18.

James I. was detained long a prisoner in England, i. 35. troubles in Scotland during that time, 36. was much improved by an English education, 49, 50. his policy on his return to Scotland, so. his character, si. suppresses the power of the nobles, ibid. they being exalperated, conspire against, and murder him, 52, 53.

II. troubles in Scotland during his minority, i. 36, 37. his attempts against the nobles, 53, 54. murders the Earl of Douglas, 54. procures feveral good laws to be pafe fed, 55, 56. reduces the power of the nobles, 56. his death , 57.

III. the state of Scotland during his minority, i. 37. his impolitic conduct, 57, 58. kills one of his brothers, and is invaded by another , 58. is greatly insulted by his nobles; 60. his despicable minions, ibid. was the first that appointed a standing guard to his person, 61. the nobles are provoked to take arms against him, 62. is killed in a battle against them, ibid. his character, 63.

James IV. his character, i. 63. is killed in a battle against the English at Flowden, 64.

V. his minority long and turbulent, i. 37. transactions during that time, 64, 65. assumes the government while very young, 66. his character, 67. his scheme for humbling the nobles, 67—71. is diverted from it by the clergy, 73, 74. takes arms for the defence of his kingdom, 74. his nobles refusing to follow him, throws him into a deep melancholy, 75—77. which is increased by a surprising defeat of his forces, 76. his death, 77. reflections on his conduct, 78. he resused an alliance with

Charles V. Emperor, 94.

VI. his birth, ii. 29. his baptism, 44. the care of him committed to the Earl of Mar, 61. is by him preserved from falling into the hands of Bothwell, 83. is crowned, 103. the nobles oppressed by Morton the Regent, turn their eyes to him for redress, 241. his education and dispositions, 242. he becomes suspicious of the Regent's power, ibid. discovers early a great attachment to favorites, 255. adopts two of different difpolitions, ibid. enters Edinburgh with great folemnity, 257. is by his favorites engaged in unpopular measures, 274, 275. is seized by a party of nobles at Ruthven, 276. and forced to receive complaints against his favorites, ib. dissembles with them, and banishes Lenox, 278 is brought to Stirling and Holyroodhouse, 280. his concern for Lenox's death, and regard for his memory, 281. receives the French ambassador with great respect, 282. makes his escape from the conspirators, 283. resolves to treat them with moderation, 285. visits Gowrie and grants him a pardon, ibid. renews his fondness for Arran, 286. is by him persuaded to violent measures against the conspirators, ibid. his answer to a haughty letter from Q. Elizabeth on their behalf, 287. is by her interpolition rendered more violent against them, 288. is provoked by the clergy, 290. his steps to humble them, 293. his profufion to Arran, 301. fends a new favorite to England against the banished lords, 305. devolves the whole regal authority on Arran, 307, 308. writes an undutiful letter to his mother, 314. is threatened to be difinherited by her. ibid. receives a pension from Q. Elizabeth, 319. is reconciled to the exiled lords, 322. becomes popular by concluding a treaty with England, 325, 326. his fcandalous behaviour with regard to Archd. Douglas, 3 27. his endeavours to fave his mother's life after her condemnation, 348. 349. is greatly incenfed at her death, 365. arguments used by the English ministers to pacify him, ibid. 366. is forced to stifle his refentment, 367. attempts to unite the nobles, 369, 370. is courted both by Spain and England, 376, 377. refolves vigoroufly to adhere to the latter, 377. takes several steps with that view, ibid. his skill in the popish controversy, 383. wrote a commentary on the Revelations, ibid. his maxims with regard to popery, 384. his excessive lenity to conspirators against him, ibid. refolves to marry the Princess of Denmark, 385. arts used to prevent it, ibid. the marriage is confummated in Norway, 387. passes feveral months in Denmark, ibid. reflections on his conduct there, 388.

James, his arrival in Scotland with his Queen, iii. 1. indulges the Presbyterians, 2. the ill confequences of his lenity, 3. his zeal against witchcraft, ibid. is solioited by Q. Elizabeth to treat the conspirators against him with rigor, 9, 10. is suspected of conniving with them, 10. is surprised and seized by Bothwell, 11. and forced to comply with his terms, ibid. his lenity to Bothwell abused, 14. is suspected of favoring the popish Lords, 15. is in new danger from them, 16. delegates his authority to Argyle and Forbes against them, 18. goes in person against them, 19. wastes their lands and garrisons their castles, ibid. his right of the succession to the crown of England opposed by the papists, 20. his lenity to them incenses the clergy and people, 24, 25. is much provoked by the obstinacy

O

3

3

th

fia

lia

en

in 44

Po

oth

gai

to

COL

the

the

ciat

his

ftre

land

afte

in S

ente

his

a let curi

fpon

it is

Invern

Italy,

Reith ,

unde

land,

execu

 V_0

Kent ,]

obstinacy of the clergy, 28. gives orders against them, 31. is much infulted, and in great danger at Edinburgh, 31-33. leaves Edinburgh and proceeds with severity against the citizens, 34-37. acquires absolute dominion in ecclefiastical affairs, 38, 39 strengthens his interest in parliament, by restoring the seats of the ecclesiastics, 40-42. endeavours with success to gain a party in England, 43. increases his reputation by publishing his Basilicon Doron. 44. is accused by Q. Elizabeth of corresponding with the Pope, 46. this he denies, and how accounted for, 47. other reports concerning this, ibid. is at great pains to gain the Roman catholics, 48. his regulations with regard to the church, 49, 90. the mysterious affair of Gowrie's conspiracy, 50-71. his cautious behaviour in regard to the Earl of Effex, 76. fends ambassadors to fave him, 77. they arrive too late, ibid, he restores his son and associates to their honors after his accession, ibid continues his intrigues in England, 79, 80. his interest greatly strengthened there, ibid. endeavours to civilize the highlands and ifles, 81, 82. is proclaimed King in England, after the death of Q. Elizabeth, 88. is proclaimed likewise in Scotland, 90. prepares for his journey to England, 91. enters London, and takes possession of the throne, 92. his character how different from that of Q. Elizabeth, ib. a letter from him to Mr. Archibald Douglas, Append. 356. curious letter to him from an unknown English correfpondent, 380.

Invernel's castle, refuses to surrender to Q. Mary, i. 297. it is forced, and the governor punished, ibid.

Italy, the liberty of, how preserved, i. 89.

K

Reith, Sir William, fent to intercede for Q. Mary when under fentence, ii. 349. letter from him to fecretary Mait-land, Appendix, 466.

Kent, Earl of, appointed to see the sentence against Q. Mary executed, ii. 355.

Vol. III.

Ker of Ferniherst, ravages England on the murder of Murray the Regent, ii. 182. his design, 185. has a scuffle with the English, 320.

Geo. brother to L. Newbattle, is discovered when ready to fail to promote a plot in Spain, iii. 7. his scheme opened, ibid. escapes out of prison, 10.

Killigrero, Henry, his declaration on the peace, Appendix,

Kings, feudal, the most limited of all Princes, i. 15. general causes of this, 17. their revenues were but small, 18. had no standing armies, 19. and jurisdiction limited, 20. means used to extend the royal authority, 40. their jurisdiction enlarged, 42. the extraodinary influence of the Scottish Kings in Parliament, 78. the reason of this, 84.

Kirkaldy of Grange, one of the murderers of Beatoun, is recalled by the Q. Dowager, i. 160. his attainder reversed in Parliament, 309.

offers to fight Bothwell in fingle combat, ii. 89. his interview with Q. Mary, in name of the confederate Lords, 90. rescues Maitland from confinement, 171. labors to Support the King's authority, and restore harmony after the murder of the Regent, 183, 184. accedes to the Queen's party, 184. provides for a fiege by increasing his garrison and fortifying Edinburgh, 198. proclaims Lenox' authority unlawful and usurped, 199. attempts in vain to prevent a meeting of the Parliament, 200. forms a scheme for surprising the King's party, 203. is at first fuccessful, but afterwards defeated, 204. comes near to an agreement with Mar the Regent, 219. a treaty with Morton breaks it off, 228-230. fires upon Edinburgh from the castle, 229. is besieged by the Regent, assisted by the English forces, 231. is forced by a mutiny of the garrison to capitulate, 232. furrenders to Drury the English general, ibid. is by order of Q. Elizabeth delivered up to the Regent, 239. he and his brother are executed, ibid.

Knollys, Sir Francis, fent by Q. Elizabeth with letters of condolence to Q. Mary on her arrival in England, ii. 126.

fome of his letters, Appendix, 274—282—289.

af fe Wi th fix of re Pr gre ref 24 me COL frie is t acq Kno.

Biffi dea ton

ibio

dod

diff

Lang fi Laurea prefe League 316.

Learni, Leiceste ferer

Know, John, a famous reformer, his character, i. 114. after being some time abroad, he is recalled by the persecuted Protestants, 181. inflames the multitude at Perth with rage against the Papists, ibid. his notion concerning the government of women whence, 188. his residence fixed in Edinburgh, 193. complains of the lukewarmness of the reformers, 208. his opinion to the convention of reformers that it is lawful to refift and deprive tyrannical Princes, 210. animates and revives the desponding Congregation, 221, 222. complains of the neglect of the reformers in providing maintenance for their preachers, 248. recommends the Geneva model of Church Government, 256. proposes superintendants in the church, 257. composes the first book of discipline, 258. renounces friendship with the Earl of Murray for his moderation, 310. is tried for encouraging a mutiny among the people, and acquitted, 312. popilh judges concur in this decision, ibid is publicly accused by Maitland of preaching seditious doctrine concerning relistance, 324. characters of the two disputants, ibid.

approved of several instances of assistances, ii. 23. agrees to some regulations concerning the election of Bishops, 223. specimen of his eloquence, 224. his death and character, 224, 225. his eulogium by Morton the Regent, 225. articles sent by him to the general affembly, Appendix, 309.

L

Lang fide, the battle of, ii. 119.

Laurean, cardinal, is fent as a nuncio from the Pope with a present to Q. Mary of Scotland, ii. 41. is stopped at Paris, 42. League, holy, a confederacy of Roman catholics so called, ii. 316. was universally agreed to by them all over Europe, id. Learning, the revival of, promotes the reformation, i. 143. Leicester, Earl of, appointed a commissioner to the conference at Westminster, ii. 150.

Leith burnt by the English, i. 112. fortified by the French, 204. befieged by the English, 230. .Q. Mary lands there from France, 271. the superiority of it granted by her to Edinburgh, 352.

in

Leno. Ki

no

ren

am

26

not

on

and

afte Leslie

his

117

by !

to e

to h banil

Lindsag

Lochlev

Logan of

after Lords Co

ii. 85

of the

to the

her e

Q. N joins

- is feized and fortified by Morton the Regent, ii. 199. Lenox, Earl of, arrives in Scotland from France, i. 106. is much courted by cardinal Beatoun, ibid. his pretensions to the succession, how founded, 109. resents Beatoun's deceitfulness to him, 110. heads the reformers and the advocates for the English alliance, 111. surprises the Regent and cardinal, ibid. is outwitted by the cardinal, ibid. continues alone in the interest of England, 113. is forced to fly to that court, where he is rewarded, ibid. is married to a niece of K. Henry's, by which he became father to a race of Kings, ibid. his claim to the succession, 318. is imprisoned for a secret correspondence with Q. Mary, 319. is invited fecretly by her to return to Scotland, ibid. arrives in Scotland, and is received with great familiarity by her, 321, 322. his forfeiture is repealed, and he is restored to his estate and honors by the Parliament, 322. his lady fent prisoner to the Tower of London, 334. and treated with rigor, 339.

murderers, ii. 60. charges Bothwell with it, ibid. the profecution is hurried, 62. he craves a delay, which is refused, 64. he is left alone in it, ibid. solicits Q. Elizabeth's interest to obtain a delay, 65. insists on it by proxy at the trial, but is over-ruled, 66. being apprehensive of danger he slies towards England, 68. his countess accuses Q. Mary of the murder to Q. Elizabeth, 129. he appears at the conference at Westminster, and accuses Q. Mary of the murder upon oath, 152. returns to Scotland protected by an English army, 186. is elected Regent, 189. his progress against the Queen's party, ib. appoints commissioners to frame a treaty with those of the Queen, 193. surprises Dumbarton castle, 195—197. joins the Earl of Morton at Leith, 199. holds a Parliament in the Canongate, ibid. another at Stirling, 202. he furprised and killed there, 204.

Lenox, Lord Aubigny, his character, ii. 255. joins with the King's other new favorite to undermine Morton, 76. renounces Popery, 257. Q. Elizabeth demands him to be removed from the privy council, 259. is accused by her ambassador, 263. Arran tries in vain to supplant him, 269. is commanded by K. James at the request of the nobles to leave the kingdom, 278. puts off his departure on various pretences, 278, 279. returns unwillingly to France, where he soon dies, 280. his memory vindicated and much regarded by the King, 281. died a Protestant, ib.

Earl of, left as the King's lieutenant in the north after dispersing the popish Lords, iii. 19.

Leslie, Norman, murders Cardinal Beatoun, j. 116. he and his affociates keep possession of the castle of St. Andrews, 117. makes a truce with the Regent, 118. are encouraged by Hen. VIII. ibid.

Bishop of Ross, is sent by the Catholics in Scotland to engage Q. Mary in their interest, i. 259. his proposals to her rejected, 260.

his negociations in England in favor of Q. Mary, ii, 207. is confined long in the Tower, and afterwards is banished England, 210.

Lindsay, Lord, carries the proposal from the confederates to Q. Mary, that she should resign the government, ii. 103. joins the Ruthven conspirators, 275.

Lochlevin castle, Q. Mary committed a prisoner there, ii. 94.

her escape from thence, 114.

Lord, letters to and from him, Append. 314.

Logan of Restairig, an alledged accomplice in Gowrie's confpiracy, iii. 57, 58. is tried, and his estate forfeited long after his death, 59.

Lords confederate, affociate against Bothwell and Q. Mary, ii. 85. raise forces against them, 86. publish the motives of their conduct, 87. prevail on the Queen to surrender to them, 90. assume the title of Lords of the secret council, and the royal authority, 94.

Lords, popish, conspire against K. James, ii. 382. are treated by him with great lenity, 384.

F

f

3

W

m

1

by

CC

1

hi

at ag

CO

OV

in

an

of 31

Ste is a

him

Mar,

i. 2

Mai

form a new conspiracy. iii. 7. the King proceeds against them, 8. more of his lenity to them, 12. fresh dangers from them, 16. they receive money from Spain, 17. zeal of the clergy against them ibid. are declared guilty of treason and their estates forseited, 18. deseat the King's army, 19. are dispersed on the King's approach, 20 go abroad and give security to keep the peace, ibid. return to Scotland, and petition for leave to reside in their own houses. 25. this granted by a convention of estates, ibid. recant their errors and are absolved from excommunication, 39. relapse, and are again reconciled to the church of Rome, ibid. are restored to their estates and honors, 40.

Lorrain cardinal, gets some of the best benefices in Scotland, i. 168.

Princes of, their ambitious views, i. 173. instigate the Dauphin and Q. Mary to take the titles of King and Queen of England, 175, resolve to invade England, 176, and to check the Reformation in Scotland, ibid. the Cardinal's great influence over the young King, 199, drives the Queen Regent of Scotland to violent measures, 205, their violences occasion a conspiracy against them, 237, are forced to withdraw their troops from Scotland, ibid, they insult the Scottish ambassador, 250, have great power over the young King and Queen, 251, 252, are forced to contract their views on the death of the King, 253.

Luther, a bold and principal promoter of the Reformation; i. 143, the rapid progress of his doctrine, 144.

reled M I have made for the long

Major John, his history of Scotland, some account of, i. s. Muitland of Lethington, secretary to Mary Queen Regent, leaves her service and joins the Congregation, i. 220. his character, ibid. 221. is sent by them ambassador to

Q. Elizabeth, 222. fends them affurances of her protection, 226. is fent by Q. Mary to the court of England, 277. makes a concession to Q. Elizabeth, 278. accompanies Q. Mary in a progress to the north, 295. he is employed by Q. Mary to desire a personal interview with Q. Elizabeth, 301. publicly accuses Knox of preaching seditious doctrine concerning resistance, 324. intimates to Q. Elizabeth the intention of Q. Mary to marry Darnly, 331. prudently conceals her resentment from Q. Elizabeth, 334.

Maitland, proposes moderate measures with regard to Q. Mary when imprisoned, ii. 100. attends the Regent when called on to accuse her in England, 138. he disapproves of this measure, ibid. his intrigue with the Duke of Norfolk, 143. 163, 164. is imprisoned by the Regent, 170. is relieved by Kirkaldy, and fecured in the castle, 171. proposes ? coalition of the two parties after the murder of the Regent, 183. accedes to the Queen's party, 184. is deprived of his office of fecretary, and proclaimed traitor, 189. is attainted in a Parliament of the King's party, 200. agrees with Mar, 219, 220. his views in refuling a reconciliation with Morton the Regent, 228, 229. rejects overtures of a treaty with him, ibid. is besieged by him in the castle of Edinburgh, 232. is forced to capitulate and furrender to the English general, ibid, to avoid the Regent's refentment he dispatches himself, 234. several of his letters, Appendix ii. 300. 356.

Sir John, is made secretary for Scotland, ii. 318. concurs with others in promoting Q. Elizabeth's interest there, ibid. attempts against him by Capt. James Stewart, late Arran, 369. they prove abortive, and he is advanced to be chancellor, ibid. an attempt to remove him from that office, frustrated, 384.

his death, iii. 22. a copy of verses in honor of him wrote by the King, ibid.

Mar, Earl of, the title conferred on the Prior of St. Andrew's, i. 293. accompanies the Queen in a progress to the north, 295. he and his affociates narrowly escape affassination, 296, 297. is created Earl of Murray, 298. See Murray. Mar the title is conferred on L. Esskine. i. 297.

P

r

b

a

h

1

to

g ib

E

ga

W

of

ge

Le

for pe

on

de

im

20

off

ibi

by

fer

int

En

of

tion

her

her

101

127

fhe

Mary

the person of the young Prince put into his hands, ii. 6. his resolution in preserving him from Bothwell, 83. is chosen Regent, 204. labors to bring about a general peace, 2.8. is thwarted by Morton and his affociates, 220. dies of melancholy, ibid. his character, ibid. his merit and integrity was acknowledged by both parties, ibid.

the young Earl, being imposed on by Morton, turns out his uncle from the castle of Stirling, ii. 247. joins the Ruthyen conspirators, 275. he with the others seize Stirling castle, and erect their standard, 292 is attainted and his estate forseited, 300, is pardoned, and restored to estate and honors, 322.

March, countels of, her infamous marriage with the Earl of Arran, ii. 269.

Mary of Guise, Q. Dowager of Scotland, takes a consider. able share in the government, i. 126. is much addicted to the French interest, ibid. projects a marriage of her daughter to the Dauphin of France, 127. becomes instrumental in promoting the Reformation, 136. aspires to the office of Regent, 137. promotes disaffection to the present one, and favors the reformers, 137, 138. visits the court of France, 138, returns to Scotland to take possession of the Regency, 139, after some oppolition the obtains it, 141. confers leveral offices of trult upon strangers, 155. proposes to lay a tax upon land, 156. is forced to drop it, 157. tries in vain to excite a war with England, ibid. the nobles vigorously oppose her measures, 159. treats the reformers with great relpect, 60. obtains a concession from the Parliament in favor of the Dauphin, 166. her artful management of the reformers, 167, 168. bestows the vacant benefices on foreigners, 168. The alters her conduct to the reformers, 173. remonstrances against the violent measures of the Princes of Lorrain, 177. is persuaded by them to perfecute the reformers, 178. her rash answer to their remonstrance, 179. fummons their preachers to appear before her, ibid. breaks a promise she had made them, 180 marches with an army against them, 182 concludes a treaty with them, 183. this she again breaks, 184. her severity at Perch, ibid. her scheme discovered, ibid. 186. The goes to attack them, ibid. has again recourse to negociation, 187. The is startled at their demands and gets time to answer them, 189. violates another treaty, ibid. loses Perth and forced to abandon Stirling and Edinbugh, the retires with precipitation to Dunbar, 190. marches to attack the reformers at Edinburgh, 194. gains time by her artifice, ibid. makes another treaty with them, 195. her artifices to undermine the Prior of St. Andrews, 202 the absurdity of her scheme, 203. gets a reinforcement of French troops, who fortify Leith, 204. The difregards a remonstrance of the reformers, 205. is influenced by French counsellors, and persuaded to violent measures, ibid. retires to Leith on the approach of the reformers army, 207. her prudent and artful conduct there, ib. her haughty and imperious answer to a fresh remonstrance from them, 208. is, by a convention of them, deprived of her office of Regent, 211. the foundation of this sentence, ibid. foments differences among them, 215. is deferted by her principal fecretary Maitland of Lethington, 220. fends French troops against the reformers, 226. retires into the castle of Edinburgh on the approach of the English, 231. her death and character, 234. repented of her violent mensures, 235. listened to the instructions of a reformed preacher, 236.

Mary Queen of England, her persecuting reign, i. 142.

her death, 169.

Queen of Scots born, i. 97. a proposal to marry her to Ed. VI. 100. she is demanded by Henry VIII. 101. her marriage to the Dauphin of France proposed, 127. a treaty for that purpose concluded, 128, 129. she is sent to be educated in France, 129. the fatal

3

C

C

b fi

te

fu

th

D

be

L

at

th

at

wi

Da

32

for

ref

me

juf

end

pop

33 fub

fun

and

Dan

Sco

fent

aga

betl

the

fion

refe

consequence of this, ibid. is imposed on by the artifices of the French in the treaty of marriage, 162. her marriage celebrated with great pomp, 163. they take the title of King and Queen of England, 175. the makes concessions to the Congregation, 238, 239. declares Q. Elizabeth's right to the crown of England, 239. The acquires an entire ascendant over her husband, 251. The is overwhelmed with great affliction on his death, and retires to Rheims, 253. The is invited by the convention to return to Scotland, 258. an emil. fary from the catholics in Scotland proposed violent measures to her, 259. she is determined to moderation by the French and the Prior of St. Andrew's, 260. is prevailed on to prepare for her return to Scotland, 261. the origin of the discord between her and Q. Elizabeth, 262. her pretensions to the crown of England, 263. is envied on account of her beauty, 267. demands a fafe conduct from Q. Elizabeth, which is refused, 269. leaves France with great reluctance, 270. lands at Leith, 271. is much affected by the change of her situation, ib. feveral disadvantages attending her accession, 272, 273. some circumstances to her advantage, 273, 274. her accomplishments of body and mind, ib. the fervants of her chapel infulted, 275. procures the free exercise of her religion, ibid. iffues a proclamation in favor of the Protestants, 276. employs them folely in the administration, 277. attempts to gain Q. Elizabeth's favor, ibid. makes a concession to her; 278. which is rejected, 279. she makes her public entry into Edinburgh, 280. an insult offered to her religion on that occasion, ib. discourages the attempts of the papifts to gain her favor, 282. her aversion to the family of Hamilton, ibid. makes a progress into the north, 295, 296. her ministers narrowly escape affassination, 296, 297. is refused access to the castle of Inverness, 297. when in the utmost consternation is relieved by the Monros and other clans, ibid. her forces defeat Huntly's rebellion, 299. The defires an interview with Q. Elizabeth, 301. negociations concerning her marriage, 303. is folicited by different Princes, 303, 304. her deliberations. concerning it. 305. is forced to bear the authoritative behaviour of Q. Elizabeth, 307, 308. to please her subjects, determines against a foreign alliance, 308. determines not to ratify the treaty of Edinburgh, 309. further negociations for her marriage, 313. discovers the views of Carharine of Medicis, 314. Lord Robert Dudley recommended to her as a husband by Q. Elizabeth, 314. The is highly offended at this, 315. diffembles with Q Elizabeth, 317. entertains thoughts of marrying Lord Darnly, 318. The recalls Lenox, 319. is affronted at a letter of Q. Elizabeth's, $20. her prejudice against the reformed, and zeal for the catholic religion, 323. is taken with Darnly at first fight, 326. is greatly moved at Q. Elizabeth's insulting craftines, 327. negociates with the court of Rome for a dispensation to marry Darnly, ibid. and the consent of the court of France, 328. imposes on Randolph, but applies to Q. Elizabeth for consent to her marriage, 331. which she affects to refuse, 112. in resentment she proposes to send an angry message to Elizabeth, which Maitland prevents, 334-justifies her conduct to the English ambassador, 335. endeavours to get Murray's confent, 336. courts the pope's protection, and receives a subsidy from him, 337. her great address in gaining the consent of her subjects, 339, 340. prevents a plot against Darnly, ib. fummons her vaffals to take arms against Murray, 342. and him to appear before her, 344. her marriage with Darnly celebrated, ibid. The confers the title of King of Scots upon him, 345. this step censured, ib. her refentment against the malecontents, 346. she marches against them, 347. rejects the intercession of Q. Elizabeth in their behalf, 348. continues her march against the rebels, ibid. her conduct and courage on that occation, 349. drives them out of Scotland, ibid. her further resentment against them, 350, 351, has recourse to several devices to raise money, 352. her prosperity promotes her religion, 353.

Mary, her deliberations concerning the exiled Lords, ii. I. determines to treat them with lenity, 3. is diverted from this by her religion and French influence, 4, 5. this the fource of her after-misfortunes, 6. her intention to restore popery, 7. is difgusted with Daroly's insolent behaviour, 8. her familiarity with Rizio offends the King, 11. vindicated from any criminal correspondence with Rizio, 12, 13. uses her utmost endeavours to prevent his murder, 15. she is confined by the conspirators, 16. she gains the King, and escapes from them, 17. is reconciled to the exiled nobles. 18. her hatred to Darnly increases, 25, 26. and favor for Bothwell commences, 26. extinguishes some domestic feuds among the nobles, 28. is delivered of her fon James VI. in the castle of Edinburgh, 29. invites several foreign princes to his baptism, 30. continues to treat Darnly with neglect, ibid. her attachment to Bothwell increases, 31. prevents Darnly's intended flight, 33, 34. visits the borders, 34. an instance of her regard for Bothwell on that occasion, ibid. how she rivalled Q. Elizabeth, 36. her right of succession favored by the English parliament, 37. she endeavours to avail herfelf of that opportunity, 39, 40. she takes an extraordinary step in favor of popery, 41. receives a present from the pope, but stops his nuncio at Paris, 42. endeavours to procure a better subsistence for the reformed clergy, 43. her aversion to the King excelfive, becomes melancholy, ibid. goes to Stirling to celebrate her son's baptism, 44. is greatly offended at the King's behaviour on that occasion, 45. restores the popish ecclesiastical jurisdiction, 50. her neglect of the King during his fickness; 52. the breach between them becomes irreparable, 53. The visits him at Glasgow, ibid. the motives of her dissimulation on that occasion, 54, 55. prevails on him to come to Edinburgh, 56. her suspicious behaviour to him there, 57. iffues a proclamation for discovering his murderers, 58. is supposed to have been accessary to it, 60. is charged with it abroad, as well as

t

f

n

L

h

CE

10

M

pii

pa

he

Ki

arı

a n

de

flig

En

ten

zab

con

fend

fubi

her

the

at home, ibid. goes to visit her son at Stirling, 77. is met on her return by Bothwell, who feizes and carries her to Dunbar, 78. this supposed with her consent, ibid. is conducted to Edinburgh, 80. and married to Bothwell, 81. fends an apology to the courts of France and England, 82. her conduct causes a general indignation against her abroad. 84. is alarmed at a combination of the nobles against her 85. The publishes a manifesto to vindicate her conduct, 86. is conducted to the castle of Borthwick, 87. marches with Bothwell's forces against the confederate Lords, 88. an attempt of an accommodation proves vain, 89. is forced to furrender to the confederates, 90. is insulted by the foldiers and mob, 91. is carried to Edinburgh, where many abuses are offered her, ibid. is sent a prisoner to Lochlevin Castle, 94. Q. Elizabeth interposes in her behalf, 97. the English ambassador is refused access to her, 99. various proposals among the confederates concerning her, 100, 101. they oblige her to refign the government, 101. different reasonings on this measure, 104-107. is much moved with the freedom of the Earl of Murray, 108. her party among the nobles become difpirited, 110. her refignation of the Crown accepted by the parliament, and her imprisonment declared lawful, 112. her letters to Bothwell read, and she declared accessary to the King's murder, ibid. escapes from Lochlevin, 114, 115. arrives at Hamilton, 115. is attended by many nobles and a numerous army, 115, 116. an affociation figned in her defence, ibid. her imprudence in hazarding a battle, 119. her army defeated by the confederates, ibid. her precipitate flight into Galloway, 120. rashly determines to retire to England, 121. goes thither against the advice of her attendants, 122. arrives at Carlisle, 123. writes to Q. Elizabeth, imploring her good offices, ibid. receives letters of condolence from her, and demands admittance into her prefence, 126, 127. this refused, and why, 127. offers to fubmit her cause to Q. Elizabeth, ibid. is much deceived in her expectation from this, 130. and offended on discovering the artifices of Q. Elizabeth, 131, earnestly solicits to be

b

C

E

is

d

N

20

2 fr

fo

hi

CC

uf

fo

at

CO

pr

tei

by

Fr

dil

33 hei

ve

the cio

her

wh

339

the

her

fent

the

admitted into her presence, ibid. she is carried to Bolton Caftle, 134. chagrined at finding herfelf a prisoner, ibid. agrees to an inquiry into her conduct, ib. her diffimulation with regard to religion, 135. commissioners appointed to appear in her name, 137. her chief view in this affair, 139. confents to moving the conference to Westminster, 147. The is carried to Tuthbury in Staffordshire', 148. is much offended at the regard shown the Regent, and recals her confent to the conference, 149. the accusations against her produced by the Regent, 150. is accused likewise by the Earl of Lenox, 152. her commissioners refuse to answer, and demand a personal interview, 153. they protest against future proceedings, ibid. a suspicious circumstance against her, 154. her commissioners withdraw from the meeting, ibid. her resolute answer to a harsh proposal of Q. Elizabeth, 156. avoids any farther progress in the - inquiry, 157. is enraged at the proceedings, and propofes desperate measures, 158, 159. spreads chimerical conjectures with that view, 159. proposes a divorce from Bothwell, 162. is influenced by the D. of Norfolk's schemes, 163. exchanges many letters and love-tokens with him, 164. confents to proposals from the English nobles, 166. their views in this transaction, 165-167. a rebellion by her adherents against Q. Elizabeth, 171. is removed to Coventry, 173. Q. Elizabeth thinks of delivering her up to the Regent, 175. this project how disappointed, 176. accession of several to her party after the murder of the Regent, 185, 186. they endeavour to foment a war with England, ibid. her authority proclaimed at Linlithgow, 186. her parties defeated by the new Regent, 189, 190. . The answers proposals by Q. Elizabeth, 191. attempts in vain to get foreign affistance, 192. appoints commissioners to frame a treaty for her liberation, 193. this proving fruitless, she is more strictly confined, 194. the invalidity of her refignation declared in a parliament held by her adherents, 200. act of parliament in England to curb her and her party, 205. The looks for protection from the King of Spain, 206. is denied the privilege of an ambassador at the Court of England, 210. is more close confined and watched, ibid. proceedings against her in England, 215. her interest neglected by the French, ibid. is hurt by the Massacre at Paris, 217, 218. her adherents divided into two factions, 227. one of them joins with Morton the Regent, 230. review of the characters of her adherents and opponents, 233, 234. her forlorn lituation, 234. is carried to Buxton Wells, 235. loses feveral of her friends by death, 237, fends a letter and prefents to her fon, 254. her messenger, why dismissed without seeing him, ibid. her uneafiness at his confinement by the Ruthven conspirators, 281. complains to Q. Elizabeth of her hard usage, 282. and begs her intercession for the King her fon, ibid. Throgmorton's conspiracy in her favor, 296-298. a fruitless negociation with Q. Elizabeth, 302, is alarmed at an affociation in defence of Q. Elizabeth, 304. is. committed to more severe keepers, 305. betrayed by Lord Gray the Scotch ambassador, 306, 307. a statute for the preservation of Q. Elizabeth, proves fatal to her, 311. is more rigorously treated, 312. her complaints to Q. Elizabeth difregarded, 313. is, by the French ambaffador's interest, removed to Tuthbury, ibid. is undutifully treated by the King her fon, 314. her passionate complaint to the French ambassador on that occasion, ibid. threatens to disinherit him, ibid. several discoveries alledged against her, 332, 333. The is guarded with unusual vigilance, 334. her domestics, papers, &c. are seized, ibid. she is conveyed to Fotheringay Cafile, 315. deliberation concerning the method of proceeding against her, 336, 337. is suspicious of poison or private murder, 337. vindicates herself to the D. of Guise, ibid. the commissioners for trying her arrive at Fotheringay Cattle, 338. her spirited speech when refuling to plead, ibid. is at length prevailed on, 339. The protests against the authority of the court, ib. the accusation against her, 340. her defence, 340-343. her sentence, 343. irregularities in her trial, 344. her sentence is confirmed by parliament, 345. who demand the execution of it, ibid. France interposes feebly in her behalf, 347. the sentence against her published, 350. she is treated with the utmost rigor, ibid. her last request to Q. Elizabeth, 351. refuses the affistance of a Protestant Bishop or Dean, ibid. artifices used to instame the people against her, 353. her behaviour at her death, 356—360. sentiments of historians concerning her, 360. her character, 361, 362. her person described, 362. is buried first at Peterborough, and afterwards in Westminster-Abbey, 363. setters from her, Append 271. 279.341. her will, App. 343. objections against her by Walsingham, App. 335. what course to be taken with her, ibid. a Differtation on the genuineness of her letters to Bothwell. End of Vol. iii.

Maxwell, Lord, arrives from Spain, and prepares forces to join the Spaniards, ii. 377. his followers dispersed, he is taken prisoner, ibid.

Melvil is fent by the French King to observe the motions of the Queen Regent and her adversaries, i. 198. fent to make up a difference between Elizabeth and Mary, 321. brings about an appearance of friendship between them, ib.

is fent to inform Q. Elizabeth of the birth of K. James VI. ii. 29 puts a letter into the Queen's hand against her marriage with Bothwell, 76. is forced to fly from court, ib. advises K. James to moderate measures upon his escape from the Ruthven conspirators, 285.

Mr. Andrew, a clergyman, his character, ii. 239. zealoufly opposes episcopacy, ib. declines the civil jurif-diction in ecclesiastical matters, 290. is forced to fly into England to avoid perfecution, 291.

Melville, Mr. James, minister of Anstruther, his encomium on the eloquence of Knox the reformer, ii. 224.

Sir Robert, fent by K. James to intercede with Q. Elizabeth for Q. Mary while under fentence, ii. 352. executes his commission with fidelity and zeal, ibid. a memorial of his to the King, Appendix, 367.

farewel of her, ii. 358. her parting speech to him, ibid.

Mildmay, Sir Walter, sent by Q. Elizabeth with proposals to Q. Mary, ii, 191.

Monluc,

Alo

Mo

ŀ

Mo

t

Mon

n

ta

in 1

On

in

m

m

ma

for

am

hin

gra

tem

lab

atte

mal

pof

to

con

avai

2

Monluc, Bishop of Valence, employed by the French to conclude a peace with England and Scotland, i. 237, terms agreed to by him, 238—241.

Montgomery appointed Archbishop of Glasgow, ii. 272 is refused and excommunicated by the General Affembly for his immoral life, ibid.

Montmorency, Constable of France, endeavours to prevent the Dauphin's marriage with Q. Mary, i. 160. his prudent advice to Henry II. 161.

Morton, Earl of, his irrefolute conduct as to the Reformation, i. 220. accompanies Q. Mary in a progress to the North , 295.

- instigates Darnly to be avenged of Rizio, il. 12. takes the direction of that enterprise, 14 is admitted into the Queen's presence, who promises him a pardon. 17. is forced to fly into England, 18. obtains his pardon on Bothwell's intercession, 48. seizes a casket with letters from Q. Mary to Bothwell, 95. he is, by Q. Elizabeth's interpolition, in favor with the King's party, after the murder of the Regent, 184. appointed one of the commissioners to treat with the Queen's party, 193. his demands frustrate the meeting, 194. is entirely influenced by the Court of England, 201. commands the King's forces at Leith, 212. has feveral skirmishes with the Queen's forces, ib. closely belieges Edinburgh, and commits great cruelties, ib. a suspension procured by the English and French ambassadors, 214. a coalition of parties prevented by him, 220. he is chosen Regent, 221. his mercenary ingratitude to the Earl of Northumberland, ibid. obtains the temporalities of the Archbishopric of St. Andrews, 222. labors to procure a peace between the two parties, 226. attempts in vain to gain Maitland and Kirkaldy, 228. makes a treaty with Chatelherault and Huntly, 229. gets possession of the Castle of Edinburgh, 232. his severity to Kirkaldy and his brother, 234. his administration becomes odious, 236. his various methods of gratifying his avarice, 237. connives at the dispute of the clergy, 238.

VOL. III.

a

ft

he irritates the nobles, 239. Argyll and Athol refuse to answer his summons, ibid. makes a vain attempt against Lord Claud Hamilton, 240. discovers the designs of the nobles against him, and proposes to resign his office, 2414 20 244. his relignation accepted by the King gives universal joy, 244, 245. obtains an approbation of his conduct, and a pardon in ample form, 245. continues to watch the motions of his adversaries, 246. is forced to surrender the Castle of Edinburgh, ib. resumes his authority, 249. gains the Caftle of Stirling, and a feat in the Privy Council, ibid. procures a meeting of the parliament at Stirling, ib. ad his fecurity ratified in it, ib. forces are raifed for and against him, 250. he is reconciled to his adversaries by the interceffion of Q. Elizabeth, sibid. is suspected of foul play at an be entertainment at his own house, 252. his illegal proceedings against the family of Hamilton, ib. the King's new favorites undermine him, 256, 257. he endeavours to prevent them. 258. Qu Elizabeth interposes in his favor, 259. is charged with being accessary to the late King's death, 260. he is confined in different prisons, 261. discourages an attempt to rescue him, 262. all his friends are turned out of office, . 265. he is tried and condemned, 266. his resolute calm behaviour and confession before and at his death, 267, 268. his body is treated with ignominy, ibid.

t

h

V

1

n

P

g

ty

gr

1

th

Vi

Vi

his

rel

ibi

acc

14 fior

agr

14 offe

acc

154

con

fup

Murray, Earl of, late Prior of St. Andrew's, goes with a handful of men against Huntly, i. 298. by his great skill and courage he gains a complete victory, ibid. his grant is confirmed by parliament, 309. cabals against him by Lenox and Darnly, 329. his aversion to Darnly and other Court favorites, 339. calls Bothwell to stand a trial, 336. his reasons for opposing Darnly's marriage with the Queen, ibid. he and his affociates are made the dupes of Q. Elizabeth's policy, 339. concerts to seize Darnly and carry him to England, 340. this prevented by the Queen, 341. avoids assalfassination intended him by Darnly, 342, 343. evidences of these plots, ibid. the Queen's vassals are called to arms against him, 342. he is summoned to appear before her, 344. is again summoned and outlawed on his nonappearance, 346. is forced to sty with his affociates into Argyleshire, 347, they are interceded for by Q. Elizabeth, ibid, are pursued by the Queen, and obliged to fly into England, 349, they meet with unexpected ill-treatment from Q. Elizabeth, 350.

- courts Rizio to intercede with the Queen for him. ii. 2. many of his old friends folicit for him, ib. 3. the Queen's favor how intercepted, 4, 5. a parliament is called to attaint them, 7, 8. this how prevented, 8. he and his affociates arrive at Edinburgh, 16. are graciously received by the King and Queen, ib. are alarmed at the Queen's escape, but soon reconciled to her, 18. he is appointed Regent during the minority of K. James VI. 107. his harlh behaviour in a visit to the Queen, 108. the success of his wife administration, 110. procures many of the Queen's party to join him, 111. gets the places of strength into his hands, ibid. his office of Regent confirmed by parliament, 112. his severe and hanghty behaviour difgusts several , 113. his adherents in great consternation at the Queen's escape from Lochlevin, 116. his prudent conduct on that occasion, 117. defeats the Queen's army at Langlide, 119. he improves this victory, 132. his lenity to the prisoners, ibid. He calls a parliament, 133, is called upon by Q. Elizabeth to vindicate his conduct, 137. he arrives at York, 139. his views in this affair, 140, complaints of the Queen's commissioners against him, 141. he behaves with great reserve on this occasion, 142. this part of his conduct accounted for, 143 intrigues with the Duke of Norfolk, ibid. his demands from the English commissioners, 144, 145. answers to the complaints of the Queen's commisfioners without touching on the murder, 146, 147. agrees to have the conference moved to Westminster, 147. is affectionately received by Q. Elizabeth, which. offends Q. Mary, 149. is prevailed on by Elizabeth to accuse Mary of the murder, 151. produces his evidences, 154. is dismissed by Q. Elizabeth without approving or condemning his conduct, 157, 158. his party is fecretly supported by her, 158. returns to Scotland, and by his vigorous conduct breaks the Queen's party, 160. he receives proposals both from Q. Elizabeth and Q Mary, 162. he disappoints Nortolk, 168, 169. an account of his murder, 176—178. his character, 178. his death much lamented by Q. Elizabeth and the King's party, 181. much anarchy the consequence of it, 182. part of a letter of his, App. 292.

- his heir murdered by the Earl of Huntly, iii. 4.

No

tı

il

2

Q

th

the

Nott

Nort

First NOneer, It are clarmed an are the contract of the contra

Nau, Secretary to Q. Mary, is fent by her with a letter and prefents to her son, ii. 254 why dismissed without seeing him, ibid. is sent with offers of humble resignation to Q. Elizabeth, 304. is seized and sent prisoner to London, 335. is produced an evidence against her, 344. Nevil discovers and prevents Parry's design to murder Q. Elizabeth, ii. 311.

Nobles, their extensive power, i. 22, 23. become turbulent and formidable, 24. their power greater in Scotland than in any other kingdom, 25, the causes of this, 25—34. their power of long duration, 39, 40. it becomes intolerable to the Princes, ibid. they are humbled in France and England, ibid. but continue vigorous in Scotland, 40. discords among them encouraged, ibid. their jurisdiction circumscribed, 42. are greatly mortised by King James V. 67—71. are disappointed in a scheme to show their resentment, 73. refuse to attend the King into England, 174, they seize the revenues of the church, 247. resule to part with them to the reformed clergy, 228. 258. dissensions among them, 289, 290. a convention of them approve the Queen's marriage to Darnly, 337.

feveral of them recommend Bothwell as a husband to her, ii. 72, 73. a strange combination of them on this occafion, 74, 75. a body of them affociate against her and Bothwell, 85. their different views in this, ibid. a party of them favors the Queen, 96. they are much dispirited by the good conduct of Murray, 110, 111. they are much provoked by Morton the Regent, 239. think of redress from the King, 241. insuse suspicion of the Regent's power into him, 242. a meeting of them by him, 243. a party of them conspire against the King's favorites, 275. they seize his person and drive them off, 276, 277. their neglect of, and ingratitude to the clergy, 323. the King attempts to reconcile their seuds and unite them, 369. See Lords.

Norfolk, Duke of, appointed a commissioner to hear the cause between Queen Mary and her accusers, ii. 138. forms a scheme of mounting the throne of Scotland, 142, 143. intrigues with the Regent and Maitland with that view, 144. he represents the demands of the Scots to Q. Elizabeth, 145, 146. his farther negociations with respect to Q. Mary, 163, 164. endeavours to conceal his design from Q. Elizabeth, 164. is imposed on by the artifice of the Regent, 165. gets the consent of many of the English nobles, 166. his project approved at foreign courts, 167. is discovered and defeated by Q. Elizabeth, 169, 170. flies to Norfolk, 170. he furrenders on a fecond fummons, and is fent prisoner to the Tower, ibid. is fet at liberty, and continues his intrigues with Q. Mary, 207. is betrayed by his fecretary, ibid. is feized with his dependants, and accused by them, 209. is executed, ibid.

-

8

d

3

16

10

d

٥.

to

er,

nd

rty

Northumberland, Earl of, attempts a rebellion in favor of Q. Mary, ii. 171. his scheme deseated, 172, 173. he is seized by the Regent, 174. is delivered up to the governor of Berwick, and put to death at York, 221. Nottingham, Countess of, some account of the transaction concerning the Earl of Essex's ring, iii. 84.

0

Octavians, their institution and extensive powers, iii. 22. they undermine the King's ministers, 23. become odious, and a combination is formed against them, ibid. being split into factions, and envied by the courtiers, they resign their commission, 40.

Ogelvie, Lord, has a scuffle with Sir John Gordon in the ftreets of Edinburgh , i. 294.

Oliphant, Master of, joins the Ruthven conspirators, ii. 275. Orange, Prince of, sends an agent into Scotland, ii. 264.

Pa

Pa

Pa

Pari ji

3 ib

in

vi

by

the

fpi

rei

refo

para

med

intr

Pinkey

Philip

Perti

Pelle

his instructions, ibid. is affassinated, 317.

D'Oisel, commander of the French troops in Scotland, endeavours to promote a war with England, i. 158. his design frustrated, ibid, the number of troops under his command, 185. instigates the Queen Regent to violent measures against the Reformers, 186. is sent by Q. Mary to demand a safe-conduct from Q. Elizabeth, during her voyage to Scotland, 269.

E

Paisley, Abbot of, arrives in Scotland, i. 106. creates a fuspicion of the Earl of Lenox in the Earl of Arran, Regent, ibid. is made Archbishop of St. Andrews, 120.

Paris, the massacre of, ii. 216, 217. rejoicings of the Popish party on account of it, 217. the consternation and horror of the Protestants, ibid.

particularly that of Scotland, 82—96. 242. a parliament held on an extraordinary occasion, 242. a difficulty started and answered, 243. their proceedings with regard to religion, 244, 245. condemn the Popish and approve the Reformed doctrines, 246. several other regulations of the same tendency, 247. their validity called in question, 248. exceed their powers, 249. their proceedings laid before the King and Queen, 250.

a parliament in favor of Bothwell, ii. 68. passes an act in favor of the Reformation, 69. confirm the proceedings of the confederates, 112. parliaments held both by the King's and Queen's parties, 200. another of the Queen's adherents, ibid. attaint upward of 200 of their opponents, 202. a parliament at Stirling by the King's party, ibid. furprifed by the Queen's adherents, 203. another at Stirling, 248, 249. one at Edinburgh, 257. and on the King's being of age, 369, 370. feveral new laws made there, 370—373. the leffer Barons admitted into parliament, 373.

Parry, Doctor, undertakes to murder Q. Elizabeth, ii. 310. is encouraged by and gets absolution from the Pope, 311.

his design how prevented, ibid. is executed, ibid.

Parsons, a Jesuit, publishes a book in favor of the Infanta of Spain's right of succession to the Crown of England, ili. 21.

Pasquinades and Pictures, accusing Bothwell of Darnly's murder, ii. 59, 60. 68. a law made against them, 69.

Patten, William, his account of the Scottish ancient military discipline, i. 124, 125.

Paulet, Sir Amias, is appointed one of Q. Mary's keepers, ii. 305. his rigid feverity to her, 312, 313. discovers her foreign correspondence, 332. his rude treatment of her, 350. refuses to be concerned in privately affassinating her, ibid. a letter from him, Appendix, 352.

Pellevé, Bishop of Amiens, is appointed to support the popish interest in Scotland, i. 206. drives the Queen Regent to violent measures against the Protestants, 207.

Perth, an infurrection of the Reformers, there against the Papists, i. 181, 182, its inhabitants are severely treated by the Queen Regent, 184. a French garrison placed there, ibid. is besieged and taken by the Protestants, 190.

a great tumult there on account of Gowrie's confpiracy, iii. 55.

Philip II. of Spain, married to Mary Queen of England, i. 142.

reinforces his army with her troops, 157.

his great power, ii. 316. joins in the holy league, ibid. resolves to invade and conquer England, 376. his preparations for it dilatory, 380. his design frustrated, ibid. meditates an invasion of England through Scotland, 381. intrigues with some Scottish Lords with that view, 382.

remits money to them, iii. 17.

Pinkey, the battle of, i. 122.

Pius V. Pope, excommunicates Q. Elizabeth, deprives her of her kingdom, and absolves her subjects, ii. 188.

Polly, one of Babington's conspirators against Q. Elizabeth, ii. 129. discovers the plot, 330, Poltrot, a frantic zealot, affaffinates the Duke of Guise at the fiege of Orleans, i. 305.

Pont, Mr. Robert, a minister, and one of the Lords of Session, protests against laws oppressive to the Church, ii. 294.

Popery, where most flourishing, i. 144. what kind prevailed in Scotland, 145. was partly grafted on Heathenism, 191. is much hurt by the congregation, 245, their doctrines condemned by Parliament, 246. the jurisdiction of their courts abolished, ibid. their worship prohibited, ibid. attempt in vain to gain Queen Mary's favor, 282.

the great influence of Popery, ii. 5.

Power, the balance of, the great consequence of preserving it, i. 89, 90.

Presbyterian church-government established in Scotland, i. 253.

is confirmed by King James VI. iii. 5.

Protestants, in France, violently persecuted, i. 200, 201. are moderate on Q. Mary's arrival from France, 275. are employed by her in the administration, 277.

a scheme for suppressing them all over Europe, ii. 4. a league formed for that purpose, 316. See Reformation.

R

b

li fe

CE

ac

19 pr

wi

bц

Ramsey, a favorite of K. James III. narrowly escapes being hanged with his associates, i. 60. is appointed Captain of the King's guard, and created Earl of Bothwell, 61. See Bothwell.

Randan, Sieur de, employed by the French to negociate a peace with England and Scotland, i. 237. terms agreed on by him, 238, 239.

Randolph, sent to encourage the Congregation, i. 217. congratulates Q. Mary's arrival in Scotland. 277. urges the ratification of the treaty of Edinburgh, 278 is imposed on by Q Mary in the affair of her marriage with Darnly, fent into Scotland on the murder of Murray, ii. 182, 183. interposes for Morton, 262, 263. flies from Scotland in the night, 265. is sent again there, and concludes a treaty with England, 326. several of his letters, App. 188. 201. 203. 220. 230. 232. 237.

Ratcliff See Suffex.

d

7.

es

Reformation, its progress in Scotland, i. 133. account of its first preachers, ibid. is much influenced by England, 134, 135. two remarkable instruments of promoting it, ibid. it makes great progress, 141. causes contributing to promote it. 139. its advantages over popery, 143. is favored by the Q. Regent, 159. an instance of regard for it in Scotland, 161, 162. the whole party not chargeable with Cardinal Beatoun's murder, 170. a priest burnt for embracing it, 171. the reformers violently persecuted by the Archbishop of St. Andrew's, ibid. are protected by the Q. Regent, ibid. apply in vain to the Popish clergy, 172. a persecution against them pushed on by the French interest, 177, 178. the preachers fummoned before the Regent, 179. they are deceived and declared out-laws by her, 180. a riotous infurrection of them at Perth against the Papists, 181. prepare to defend themselves against the Queen, 182, 183. conclude a treaty with her which she presently breaks, 183, 184, they take arms against the Queen, 186, 187. infift on redreffing civil as well as religious grievances, 187. the influence of the Reformation on liberty, ibid. they beliege and take Perth, 190. they feize Stirling and Edinburgh, ibid. commit great violences on churches and monasteries, ibid. their conduct how accounted for, 191. an instance of their moderation, 192. fix their residence at Edinburgh, 193. the Queen prepares to attack them, 194. make another treaty with her, ibid. are forced to abandon Edinburgh, &c. but allowed the exercise of their religion, 195. demand the expulsion of the French army, ibid. are aware of their danger from France, 199, their party strengthened, ibid. remonstrate against the French fortifying Leith, 205, take arms in their own defence, 207, remonstrate again to the Regent, 208, are highly incensed at her imperious answer, 209, by advice of a convention deprive the Queen Dowager of the office of Regent, 211, the foundations of this conduct, 212, examination of the different principles on which it was conducted in different countries, 254.

the growth of it encouraged by parliament, ii.

Regalities, the ample jurisdiction of, i. 22.

Repledging, the privilege of, to whom belonging, i. 22. Revenge, encouraged both by custom and law, i. 41. Revenues of the church, proceedings of Parliament concerning them, i. 247.

Ridolphi, an agent for the Pope at London, negociates for Q. Mary, ii. 26. his arguments with the D. of Norfolk, 27, 28.

Rizio, David, some account of him and his rife, i. 329, 330. Darnly's connexion with him, 331.

his good offices courted by Murray, ii. 2. his great interest and familiarity with the Queen, 9. incurs the hatred of Darnly, ibid. and of the friends of the exiled Lords, 10. several concurring causes of this, ibid. 11. a combination formed to murder him, ibid. he is murdered in the Queen's palace, 14, 15.

Sad

0

V

Sano

in

Wi

Eli

acc

Sava

Scotl

Romans invade Britain, i. 2. give the earliest accounts of the Scots, ibid.

Ross, Bishop of, zealously promotes Queen Mary's interest at London, ii. 208, 209. is confined to the Tower, and threatened with capital punishment, 210, 211. is fet at liberty and banished the kingdom, ibid. some letters of his, Appendix. 283. 306.

Rubay, a foreigner, made keeper of the great feal of Scotland, i. 155.

Ruthven, Lord, the murder of Rizio proposed to him by Darnly, ii. 11. heads the conspirators against him, 14. his part in that transaction, 15. is admitted into the Queen's presence, who promises him a pardon, 17. did not repent of it at his death, 24.

Ruthven created E. of Gowrie, he and his affociates feize the King, and remonstrate against his favorites, ii. 275, 276. drive them from him, 276. their conduct approved in an affembly of the states, 279. the King escapes from them, 283. by Arran's influence violent measures are determined against them, 286. Q. Elizabeth intercedes in their behalf, 287. are declared guilty of high treason, 289. take refuge in foreign countries, ibid. are harshly treated by Q. Elizabeth, 307. a reconciliation with her brought about, 320, 321. return to Scotland, and are reconciled to the King, 322. their moderation on being restored to their estates and honors, 323. their neglect of their friends the Clergy, ib.—that name abolished by Parliament, iii. 68. See Gowrie.

Ruthven raid, what, ii. 277.

S

Sadler, Sir Ralph, his representations of the resentment of the Scots, for the seizure of their ships by Henry VIII. i. 104, 105.

appointed a commissioner to hear the cause between

Q. Mary and her accusers, ii. 138.

Sandilands of Calder, Lord St. John, sent to lay the proceedings of the congregation parliament before the King and Queen in France, i. 249. is coldly received and dismissed without a ratification by them, 250.

Savage, a Spanish officer, his desperate resolution to kill Q.

Elizabeth, ii. 328, 329.

y

Scotland, its ancient history fabulous, i. r. the origin of the Scots, 2. their history why remarkably obscure, 4. some account of the writers of it, 4, 5. is divided into four periods, 5, 6. a review of the third era, 7. some account of the controversy concerning its independency, 7-12. this the cause of great animolities and much bloodshed, 13. the state of Scotland when Bruce began his reign, 14. it begins to have an influence on the fate of distant nations, 93, 94. influence as to the balance of power, 95. flate of Scotland at the birth of Queen Mary, 98. is invaded by the English, and several places burnt and plundered. 111, 112. much alienated from the English, 113, 114. a peace concluded between England, France, and Scotland. 114. computation of damages done by the English in Scotland, 115. a new breach with England, 120. is invaded by a great English army, 121. the Scots are defeated with great flaughter, 122, 123. their manner of fighting at that time, 124, 125. a marriage agreed of their young Queen and the Dauphin of France, 128, 129. they foon repent this step, 131. a fray at Edinburgh occasions their utter aversion to the French, 132; 133. this inflamed by another incident, 155,156. they decline a war with England, 157. fend representatives to witness Q. Mary's marriage, 161. their care as to the marriage articles, ib. they refuse consent to the demands of the French, 165. four of their deputies suspected to be poisoned, ibid. which much increases the aversion, 166. grant the crown matrimonial to the Dauphin, ibid. they apply to the English for affistance against the French, 216. 222. an English fleet arrives for that purpose, 228. conclude a peace with England and receive an English army, 229, 230. all parties agree in detesting the French, 234. a treaty between England, France, and Scotland, 236, 237. both English and French armies leave Scotland, 242. they rejoice much at the death of the young King of France, 253. fend to invite the Queen to Scotland, 258. reject proposals of an ambassador from France, 260. state of Scotland on Q. Mary's return from France, 272. great zeal of the nation against Popery, 275. - the Scots brought into contempt by Q. Mary's conduct, ii. 84. in a miserable condition after the murder of Murray the Regent, 200. state of factions at that time in it, 201. a league concluded between Scotland and England, 325.

30

fion of James VI. iii. 93—107. of the policy of the state, 93—99. and of the church, 99, 100. of the genius and taste as to learning, 101—107.

Scott of Buccleugh enters and ravages England after the murder of Murray the Regent, ii. 182. the defign of

this, 185.

Scroop, Lord, fent to condole with, and watch Q. Mary on her arrival in England, ii. 126. she is committed to his custody at Bolton castle, 134. Why his fidelity is distrusted, and the Queen removed, 148.

Seffion, Lords and court of, by whom first appointed, i.

Clergy, 148.

Seton, Lord, assists the Queen Regent in defending Leith, i. 219.

Shrewsbury, Earl of, the charge of Q. Mary's person committed to him, ii. 148. why removed from that office, 323. is appointed to see the sentence against her executed, 355. letter from him and the Earl of Kent concerning her death, Appendix. 370.

Sinclair, Bishop of Ross, a zealous Papist, concurs, as President of the Session, in acquitting Knox of a charge of treason, i. 312.

Somerfet, Duke of, enters Scotland with a powerful army, i. 121. is reduced to a very critical fituation, 122. defeats the Scots with great flaughter, 123. this victory why of little advantage, 125. cabals against him at the court of England, force him to return, 126. is ruined by his enemies, 130

Spain, great warlike preparations there, ii. 375, 376.

See Armada.

of England, iii. 21.

Spanish ambassadors ordered to leave England, for intriguing in favor of Q. Mary, ii. 210, 299.

Sprot, his discoveries concerning Gowrie's conspiracy, ii. 58—60. is executed, 60.

Whithorn, the Prior of, imprisoned for celebrating mals, i.

Willow, a minister, declares for resistance and deprivation of tyrannical rulers, i. 210. is called to attend the Q. Dowager on her death-bed, 236.

Wishart, George, his illegal execution revenged, i. 115 Witcheraft, vigorously profecuted by K. James VI. in Scotland, iii. 3.

Wotton, dean of Canterbury, employed to negociate a peace with France, i. 238.

Sir Edward, fent by Q. Elizabeth into Scotland, ii. 318. his character, ibid. foon gets into high favor with K. James, ibid. procures a league between the two kingdoms, ib. 319. undermines Arran's power, 320, 321. forms a plot on King James, and is forced to withdraw without taking leave, 321, 322.

Y

York, the conferences there concerning Q. Mary, ii. 139.

2

Zouche, Lord, sent ambassador by Q. Elizabeth, to remonstrate against K. James's lenity to the Popish lords, iii. 15. his treachery on that occasion, ibid.

THE END.

